The soldiers' monument, presented to the town by Mrs. Stebbins Foskit in memory of her late husband, will be dedicated on the Fourth of July. An address by Rev. M. S. Howard, who has also written a poem for the occasion, will be a part of the programme. The Grand Army Post of Springfield will be present and assist in the ceremonies. Dr. Stebbins Foskit had for some time previous to his death planned to present the town of Wilbraham with some public token of his and his wife's regard and gratitude towards the citizens of the village where he had spent a lifetime of work in his profession and received the patronage and confidence of a very wide circle of clientele. In his will this wish was mentioned, and it was left for his widow to determine the exact form this expression should take, and the time and place of presentation. Mrs. Foskit therefore presents it in memory of him, and as a token from him and from her of their gratitude to the many friends who have made them welcome in their midst.

WARE.

Miss Mary H. Lawton is at home from New York spending her vacation.

Herbert E. Bates and Miss Jennie E. Hannum, both of Ware, were married by Rev. A. M. Osgood on Wednesday.

The main object of the temperance meeting at the town hall last Saturday evening was to try to organize a lodge of Good Templars, but the audience was so small that nothing was done.

A public park with seats and shade trees would be a fine thing, and will be had some time. It is frequently suggested that Nenameseck Park ought to be opened to the public as a loafing place; this would be the height of folly, for it is not of sufficient size to do any good, and it would spoil the one pretty spot we have in the center of our village.

The Ware team played ball last Saturday at Haydenville, and for the first time this season were defeated, the score being 11 to 4. They can easily be excused for this time, as they were without their catcher, Shea having taken a position with the Brocktons, and were not in their best shape. The club has good management this year, and is sure throughout the season to maintain the good record that Ware has had for many years of having one of the strongest teams in this vicinity.

The High School Graduation.

The people of Ware may well feel proud of their high school and the work it is doing. The exercises of graduation, which took place at the town hall on Wednesday evening, gave evidence of much arduous labor on the part of the teachers and scholars. Those who attended say the exercises were fully up to those of past years. The hall was beautifully decorated with potted plants and ferns; on an arch at the back of the stage was the class motto, "Memor et Fidelis," on a royal purple ground. The seats on the stage were occupied by the members of the school committee, Henry C. Davis, D. M. Ryan and J. W. Cummings, the principal, Mr. Rushmore, and the fifteen graduates. The young ladies were dressed in white, and the gentleman in dark clothes, making a fine appearance. The programme was carried out as follows:

Salutatory and address ..."The Spirit of Poetry" Minnie Fitzgerald.
Oration ..."Should the Government own the Railroads?" John Fitzgerald.
Essay ..."Modern Charities" Helen Bond.
Oration ..."The Place of Athletics in Modern Education" William Collins.
Essay ..."American Literature of To-day" Ida Corbit.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, June 27, 1894.

The Boynton bicycle road has captured the imagination, or judgment, of the House. It came down from the Senate permitting the construction of this unique road from Boston to Lowell, but so tied up that it was not a valuable charter. Friendly hands came to its rescue in the House and amendments were offered which made it a practicable thing. Amendments which were apparently not friendly to the bill were voted down, and an almost unanimous vote was given for the bill.

On looking over the field after the defeat of the Norwegian liquor bill, it appears that it was the liquor men, not the Prohibitionists, of this strange combination, who did the real work to kill the bill. In the first place, there are only two senators, it is said, who stood with the Prohibitionists, Messrs. Clark of Plymouth and Smith of Essex. They were against the bill any way, and did not change. So it was other men who turned the favorable vote of 19 to 13 on the first stage to an adverse vote of 20 to 13 on the second stage. An active liquor worker boasted on Tuesday to a friend of the bill that it would not pass the Senate. This fact will be pertinent in the coming campaign for the bill.

For the first time within my recollection a bill involving a purely sectarian issue has been debated in the House. It was what is called "the personal liberty bill," and the purpose of it is to enable some persons to be removed from Catholic institutions who are confined there against their will. One of the most excited hearings of the session occurred over it, so that the purpose of the bill was well known, but the singular fact about the debate is that not a single member alluded to the real purpose of the bill. It was said to apply to persons committed to insane asylums against their will, as it certainly does, but the nearest hint to what was doubtless in every member's mind was that it applied to other cases also. Those "other cases" were pleaded for, and the strong arm of the state invoked in their behalf, even if there was only one of them. Some Catholic members tried to defeat the bill and to make it appear that the habeas corpus act is sufficient to cover all cases. But the House was not to be turned from its main purpose, and after these futile efforts to defeat the bill it was passed to be engrossed almost unanimously. Considering the delicate nature of the subject, it is a wonder that an explosion did not occur over it.

The Bell Telephone Company will have no new capital stock this year. On Tuesday afternoon Gov. Greenhalge left with the clerk of the House a veto of the bill to permit an increase of stock, and Wednesday forenoon, after debate, the House, by 48 yeas to 115 nays and four pairs, refused to pass the bill over the veto. Instead of having the necessary two-thirds for the bill, not one-third were in favor of it, though the House ordered the bill to a third reading by 112 to 25, and passed it to be engrossed by 102 to 35. The largest adverse vote was 72 yeas to 103 nays on an amendment to bring the company under the general law regarding quasi public corporations and the sale of stock at auction. This great change in the vote was doubtless due in the main to political reasons. In such cases there is always a feeling, which overrides the merits of the pending question, that the governor must be sustained, right or wrong; that it will not do for the majority party to have it said that their governor was so weak or so illogical in his reasoning that he could not carry his own party with him. Such a man as Mr. Wellman of Malden, who made an eloquent speech for the bill as it was vetoed, turned squarely around and sustained the veto.

One of the humors of the session has come up this week. Only one representative, Robert T. Teamoh of Boston, is of African descent. His wedding day was Wednesday. When he took out his marriage license, he found that the word "colored" had been added after his name. This discrimination among American citizens he resented. So he offered a bill in the House on Tuesday, which the House admitted under suspension of the rules, to prohibit the use of the word "color" or "colored," as applied to persons, in official records relating to births, marriages and deaths. The bill also provided that the offensive words must be omitted from any existing record upon request by any interested person. Doubtless the House made no objection to the bill out of compliment to its fellow member, but the Senate refused admission to it.

Excessive mortality has been the fate of the House of 1894. Seven members have been removed by death. One has resigned. One has been removed on account of corruption in his election. Only two of the nine vacancies have been filled, and a full House now would number only 233 members.

The Legislature is coming to its close in a way totally different from anything I have ever seen before. Instead of the usual hurry, the great haste in putting matters through or throwing them out, there has been singular deliberation and slowness. The explanation is that the Meigs elevated railroad bill has engrossed about all the time. The House had no session Monday because there was nothing for it to do, and did not sit in the afternoon of Tuesday. The Senate was engaged in a protracted struggle over the Meigs bill; its friends being afraid to force a vote and its opponents becoming more engaged as they saw their successes in what was predicted by some to be a hopeless case for them. Radical amendments were agreed to, changing the bill materially from the form in which it passed the House. Conferences of the opposing sides were held, and it was evident that the attacks by the Boston newspapers on the bill had so changed the feeling of some men that they feared that they would be regarded as boodlers if they voted for the bill. With the large vote sustaining the telephone veto, with the great changes in the Meigs bill and the saving of the old state house, perhaps people will yet point to the honest men of 1894.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

NOVEL ILLUSTRATION.

The Boston Journal Sets an Example for Other Papers to Follow.

A revolution in newspaper illustration may be expected as the result of the enterprise of the Boston Journal in employing photographic pictures. The Journal was certain that success could be made with them, and as a result of perfecting the process the Sunday Journal now is pictorially, as in other respects, a most interesting and original paper. During the coming summer particular attention is to be paid to printing photographs of New England scenes, which will be of special interest to New England readers. Portraits of prominent people are also to be published, giving to the illustrated supplement of the Journal the same features that make Harper's Weekly so popular, while the other pages carry the news.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Just one week before stock taking and that carpet stock still much larger than we want; but we propose to reduce it. What we are going to do, is to offer for the next few days this season's carpets in a good assortment of desirable patterns at prices lower than they were ever sold for before; and prices which must tempt you to buy. Very likely you don't want a carpet before fall. If that is so, you are just the person we're after. Do you know of a better investment for your money than carpets at these prices? Why not buy now and store it away?

All wool ingrains that belong at 55 cents a yard, in this sale at 32½ cents a yard.

All wool ingrains that belong at 55 cents a yard, in this sale at 42½ cents a yard.

Best quality Tapestry made, that belongs at 75 cents a yard, in this sale at 62½ cents a yard.

Good qualities of Brussells at 72½ and 82½ cents a yard.

Now, right away, is the time to buy them. This sale will last only as long as it suits our purpose—perhaps a few days.

Queer Thing

Why everybody doesn't use Pearline. Here and there, though, there's a woman who's been left behind. The world has moved along without her. What she needs to know is this—that in washing clothes or cleaning house, Pearline will save half her work, half her time, and do away with the rub, rub, rub, that wears things out—that it costs no more than common soap, and does no more harm.

And if she wants to know it, there are millions of women who can tell her.

Beware of imitations. 335 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Acrost in Jersey City,
An' don't mind sayin', seein' it's you,
Her name is Connor—Kittie.

Is Kittie pretty? I should smile!
Why "pretty" can't come near it,
But if you're disengaged a while,
An' if you'd care to hear it,
I'll tell you straight the kind she is,
But, say, e'er I begin it,
I want you to remember this,
That you are nowheres in it.

She's just my size—not very tall—
But lissom as a willow;
Her throat is like the flakes that fall
In foam upon the billow,
Her eyes 'ud shame the jewels' shine
In Tiffany's famous shop, sir,
Her cheeks are lilies dipped in wine,
Her mouth—I giv it up, sir!

I giv it up! for, holy smokes!
How every one 'ud jibe it—
One o' them blamed artillery blokes
Attemptin' to describe it!
When Shakespeare, Bryant, Burns, Moore,
Who druv the Muses' tandem,
Wud giv' it up as hopeless, sure,
An' swar it was beyond 'em.

I went to see her t'other night,
She must have heard me comin',
For in the hallway's shaded light,

A whisper—wrestle—kiss—"Git out!"—
I did, about eleven.

Said one: "Well, we won't have them in the next world drumming their feet or doing something to disturb us all the time." To which another teacher replied with a laugh: "No, but they can flap their wings."—Detroit Free Press.

The young lady at the piano was playing a difficult selection from Wagner. In the midst of it she suddenly stopped in confusion. "What is the matter?" inquired one of the company. "I struck a false note," she replied. "Well, what of it?" said another. Nobody but Wagner would ever know it, and he's dead. Go ahead with the music." And she went ahead.—Chicago Tribune.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possible derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

What makes consumption? This question is less interesting to sufferers than one other: What

CURES CONSUMPTION?

Sometimes there is no cure at all, but that is not the case as often as folks suppose. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, allays inflammation, stops that weakening cough, and promotes the formation of solid, healthy flesh on emaciated bodies. And it is pleasant to take. It contains healing properties of great value, scientifically combined. That answers the second question.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

"Don't."

I might have just the mostest fun
If 'twasn't for a word,
I think the very worstest one
'At ever I have heard.
I wish 'at it'd go away,
But I'm afraid it won't;
I suppose 'at it'll always stay—
That awful word of "don't."

It's "don't you make a bit of noise,"
And "don't go out of door;"
And "don't you spread your stock of toys
About the parlor floor;"
And "don't you dare play in the dust;"
And "don't you tease the cat;"
And "don't you get your clothing mussed;"
And "don't" do this and that.

It seems to me I've never found
A thing I'd like to do
But what there's some one close around
'At's got a "don't" or two.
And Sunday—'at's the day 'at "don't"
Is the worst of all the seven.
Oh, goodness! but I hope there won't
Be any "don't" in Heaven!
—Nixon Waterman, in Harper's Young People.

MY UNCLE'S WIFE.

"Beware of her, Herbert!" said my mother. "I have mistrusted her from the first."

"So have I," said my sister, Miss Rosamond Rockthorpe. "Those girls with green-ish eyes and low voices are sure to have something of the cat in them."

"Your argument is thrown away," said I. "I love Charlotte Courtenay."

And I walked out of the room.

Charlotte Courtenay was my sister's governess, and just at that moment she was in the schoolroom teaching Dick and Billy their impersonals and nominatives, with little Jessie strumming her scales.

She looked up as I entered. Her eyes were a little green—green with the dreamy beryl tint that sleeps on a summer sea.

"You had better give me up, Herbert," she said when I told her the story of the recent discussion with the feminine powers of the household. "Not for worlds would I make dissension in a family."

The tears sparkled in her beryl eyes. Could I do aught but clasp her in my arms and vow to be faithful for ever and ever?

And then she went back to her work, and I had to fight it all over again with my mother and sisters.

"Oh, Bertie, don't you see through her?" cried Rosamond. "She don't care for you at all."

"She's a mere scheming fortune huntress!" cried Mrs. Beverley, bursting into tears. "And I won't keep her one day beyond the quarter."

"All this is nonsense," said I. "She knows perfectly well I haven't a cent in the world."

"But she knows that you have expectations from our bachelor uncle," said Rosamond spitefully. "I wrote to him this morning, stating all the facts of the case."

I bit my mustache indignantly.

"It's very strange you women can't learn to mind your own business. A little more provocation of this nature, and I marry her at once."

"Oh, Bertie!" cried my mother. "Only wait until we hear from Uncle Ulric."

"Let his decision settle the matter," said Rosamond.

"We are entirely willing to leave it to his discretion and mature judgment," added Mrs. Beverley.

I sat down myself and penned a melting appeal to my bachelor uncle.

"She is all that is perfect," I wrote, "Only come and see for yourself."

And a telegram reached me the next day. I will come. Expect me on the 3:50 train.

I hurried to impart the tidings to Lottie.

"You must be sure and look your prettiest," said I enthusiastically.

"Oh, Herbert," sighed Charlotte, "I do so dread his coming. Is he very old?"

"Not very, darling. Only 60 or thereabouts."

"And very rich?"

"Very. Our future fortune depends on him, or rather on the favorable impression you make."

My sister had the best bedroom aired and a fire lighted on the hearth. My mother went down stairs to prepare a cutlet just as he liked it for supper. And I took a cab and drove to the depot to meet my bachelor uncle.

He came—brusque, bluff and rosy, with a clear complexion, like a well preserved winter apple.

"Well," said Uncle Ulric.

"Well," faltered I.

"So you're in love."

"Beyond all hope of redemption."

"What's she like?"

"She is an angel."

"Humph."

My mother and the girls had the whole afternoon to poison Uncle Ulric's mind, but I cared not. Lottie would undo it all when she appeared.

She came down to dinner with her pupils, looking lovely.

"She is pretty," said my bachelor uncle.

"Her mind is equal to her looks, uncle," I cried.

And I maneuvered to leave them alone together after dinner in the schoolroom.

That evening I received a telegram to proceed at once to Portland to attend the funeral of a dear deceased friend.

"What shall I do?" cried I.

"Don't mind me, my dear boy," said Uncle Ulric. "You will not remain away long?"

"Three days only, uncle."

"All right, I'll stay till you come back."

At the end of the three days I returned.

"Where is Lottie?" was my first question.

"Gone out for a walk," said Rosamond tossing her head.

"Where is my uncle?" was my second query.

"Gone out for a walk," returned my mother frigidly.

Presently they returned, Lottie hanging sweetly on Uncle Ulric's arm. I knew in an instant that she had conquered the old man's prejudices.

Uncle Ulric sat down and laid a detaining hand on Lottie's arm.

"Don't leave us, my dear" said he. "I wish to say a few words as briefly as possible. Nephews and nieces all, I am married."

"Married!" cried his mother.

"Married!" shrieked my two sisters.

"Married!" echoed I, instinctively hurrying to Lottie's side. "Never mind, Lottie. I will work. I will make myself rich for your sake yet."

"Pray don't trouble yourself," said Lottie, turning a charming carmine. "The fact is—I am married too. I am Mrs. Ulric Martin!"

That was the end of my great expectations. But it is a sort of melancholy satisfaction to know that Lottie leads my uncle a dog's life, spending his money as if it were water and openly flirting with all the eligible young men in the neighborhood. I shall never believe in human nature any more after the way in which Lottie and my bachelor uncle have treated me.—New York News.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailloutte, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with la grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

WHAT PASKOLA IS DOING.

Dr. G. W. Babcock, of Chelsea, Mass., says: "It gives me great pleasure to speak in the highest terms of your delightful preparation, 'Paskola.' One of my young lady patients has gained six pounds and says she feels like a new creature."

Mr. James C. Collins, of Syracuse, N. Y., says: "PASKOLA is indeed a food, and a regal one too. I have already gained six and one-half pounds."

Mr. Charles E. Isaacs, 413 Main St., Worcester, Mass., says: "I have tried many doctors and countryless patent medicines—all were of no avail till I took 'Paskola.' To eat a meal now is a pleasure. Heretofore it has been a torture."

Mrs. R. P. Casy, of Newton, N. J., says: "I prize 'Paskola' beyond my feeble description. It has accomplished more than you claim for it."

Mr. J. Calvin Barnard, of London, N. H., says: "My friends and doctor thought I must die, but the first dose of 'Paskola' gave me a little appetite and I began to revive. I have gained twenty pounds in five weeks."

Mr. M. Leonard, of Biddeford, Me., says: "I have derived more benefit from two-thirds of a bottle of 'Paskola' than from all the medicine I have used in the past six months."

Emma M. Otis, of Perinton, N. Y., writes her druggist: "Since taking 'Paskola' my digestion has been much benefitted and neuralgia greatly relieved."

Mr. D. J. Kelliher, 13 Charles St., Somerville, Mass., says: "I have gained four and one-half pounds since beginning the use of 'Paskola,' and feel ever so much better."

Give Your Stomach a Rest.

Simple Advice to Dyspeptics.

Indigestion is caused by a tired stomach just as a sore back after working is caused by tired muscles. The remedy in either is rest. Rest is the rational cure for every ache and disorder that is caused by overwork. There is but one way to rest your stomach and other digestive organs without starving, and that is by resort to the use of artificially digested foods.

Processes have been discovered whereby meat and vegetables can be digested outside of the body and thus fitted for immediate absorption without further change.

Paskola is such a food, but Paskola is something more than a food. It not only strengthens and nourishes the body, but it aids the digestion of other foods.

By its use, the dyspeptic will find himself able to eat and enjoy those things which have heretofore caused the most frightful distress.

The wonderful secret of health and disease is hidden almost entirely in the food we eat. If we take care of our digestion, if we eat proper food, the chances are we shall always be well. If we fall sick, we should take all the more care for what we eat.

Sickness can be cured by food more easily than by medicines. Paskola is one of the most important discoveries of the age. Here is the evidence of what it can do for you.

BRIDGETON, N. J., April 11, 1894.

Gentlemen:—After being under the care of my physician for a long time and trying almost every remedy known to science, I was induced by my friends to try Paskola as a last resort to health.

I felt a great improvement and benefit before I had consumed the first 50c. bottle, and had no trouble to retain it on my stomach, as all other preparations nauseated me.

I now have a ravenous appetite and can eat the most hearty food, and I know I am gaining in flesh rapidly. MRS. EMMA CLARK.

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable druggist. A pamphlet on food and digestion will be mailed free, on application to

IN PRIVATE PRACTICE.

Such strong proofs of the marvelous cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice lately, through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingrahm, of Amsterdam, N. Y., states, where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks, of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease, ulceration of the stomach, complicated with sickness peculiar to her sex; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood, in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed. Druggists sell it.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

After Love.

Let us be friends if we cannot be more,
And let love hie to the winds if it care;
Perhaps we'll be happier than ever before
When love was ours with a glory so fair.
If so, we'll not grieve it's grown weary at last,
And on the strong winds of desire would soar;
If we cannot be lovers as in the glad past,
Say, let us be friends—if we cannot be more!

Let us be friends, and forgetting what came
To wound and to sever the beautiful tie,
In each other's eyes let us look just the same—
If we can—and clasp hands, while we breathe not a sigh;
And be strong in the virtue where friendship's the bond,
And go forward again, if not as before;
For, remember, no more are we lovers so fond;
But let us be friends—if we cannot be more!

For what, after all, is better than this?
Friendship, so true, it never knows pain!
O, would there were more of it, then, I wis, wis,
The world would be nearer an Eden again.
Yes, yes; "love is better," I'll own; but say,
If we cannot be lovers, and such as before,
Look in my eyes and tell me we may—
What! Tears?—be friends, if we cannot be more!

DAISY.

At the railway station of a certain insignificant settlement beyond the Rockies a number of men were waiting the distribution of the mail one bright day in April, 1889. There was no especial reason for excitement, but the newly established fact of a daily halt of the train and a post office of their own was enough to attract the expectant as well as those to whom the receipt of a letter would be a surprise.

Among the scanty supply of letters brought by the Eastern mail was a dainty, square envelope addressed to Mr. J. Lucas, which the postmaster held up for admiration, with the remark that it would have to go to its own funeral in the Dead Letter Office, for there was no one of that name in that part of the country.

"Reckon it's for me," said an elderly man on crutches, moving slowly through the curious crowd.

"Well, I never thought of your having any name but Uncle Jerry," said the postmaster, handing him his property, "but I s'pose you know best."

Mr. Lucas laughed, then opened his letter and read it through. "Boys," said he soberly, "it's from my niece; she's a widow; husband died 'fore they'd been married a year; she wants to come on and live with me awhile, 'cause her little girl's all broken down after scarlet fever. The doctor's sending her out here to get toned up. But, good Lord, what shall I do with a woman here, where there's no accommodations for them."

"Would you mind showing me the letter?" said Jack Dinsmore, rather hesitatingly; "sometimes I can get quite an idea of a person by a letter, and maybe I could suggest something to help you out."

They were all officious in suggestions, but Uncle Jerry waited patiently for Jack's opinion, believing, as most of the community did, that whatever sense and wisdom he did not possess were not worth mentioning. He handed back the letter, saying: "Don't worry about her, Uncle Jerry, but let her come. She don't write like a woman that's bound to sleep on rose leaves, and remember," softly, "if there's money wanted to make her comfortable, I've a useless pile of it all ready for you to dip into."

"I guess we'll have enough of it. You notice Daisy says she's collected a life insurance, and won't be a burden to nobody. And lately I've been doing pretty well with that stone post invention I put some money into."

Uncle Jerry was almost helpless with rheumatism, but Jack was a most able coadjutor, and by unblushing bribery and corruption succeeded in securing the two most decent rooms in the tall shanty called by courtesy the hotel for the use of the expected guests. There was much excitement among the residents when the appointed day came, and the pretty, graceful woman who stepped from the cars might well have been terrified at the spectacle of a platform crowded with men, who eagerly watched her every motion. But she had no thought for anything but the sleeping child beneath whose weight her own slender frame seemed almost bending. Such men as those who watched her were too chivalrous to wait for Uncle Jerry's slow approach, and half a dozen sprang forward with an entreaty to be allowed to help her. And in a moment the lovely three-years-old baby's blonde curly head was resting on Jack Dinsmore's shoulder, the sleepy blue eyes opened for a look at him, then closed again contentedly, and the little mother, with a grateful, confiding glance, turned to look for her uncle.

"It's a genywine treat to see a first-class lady out here, and a real live baby, even if it's kinder weak and sickly," said one of the gang of observers as they slowly dispersed after enjoying the affectionate meeting between uncle and niece.

It was a feeling they all shared, and the gentle, womanly influence so swayed the crowd of men who filled the long tables at the hotel that they were no longer the reckless set who had been sitting there for months. Changes in dress were not practicable in every case, soap, razors and combs exerted their constant and humanizing power.

The baby grew stronger every day, and the mother was wildly happy in watching the change in her darling, who soon became the idol of every one.

The long hotel piazza devoted to smokers was not a fit place for a woman, and at Jack's instigation some of the men ran out a rough balcony, or gallery, in front of Mrs. Lane's room, and there like a queen she held a little reception every evening, with Uncle Jerry as chaperon. All her new friends worshipped the bright little woman, and several who had no home ties to hinder fell madly in love with her. Some of these modestly realized the hopelessness of their fancy and soon drew off, watching with the others the wooing of two who, whether hopeless or not, were in dead earnest. One of these aspirants was Jack Dinsmore, the other a less popular man, nick-named for obvious reasons "Beauty Mordaunt."

His remarkably handsome face and graceful manners did not win baby Lily to his cause, for the child never swerved in her championship of the first man her sleepy eyes fell upon when the cars brought her to her present home. And Jack adored the child openly, but shyly concealed, or thought he did, the passionate love he felt for her mother. Uncle Jerry guessed his secret, and one day said to him suddenly: "Women don't like dumb lovers, man; if you want her, speak out; you have my consent, full and free."

So, on this hint, which half kindled a hope, Jack tried to speak one balmy twilight when he happened to be on her balcony alone with his adored, while Lily, wrapped in a warm shawl, slept on a rustic bench. "There was a man," he began, breaking a short silence that had fallen between them, and speaking in a constrained tone that told his listener of a depth of feeling below the commonplace words, "a man who'd never had anybody to care for him since his father and mother died, when he wasn't much more than a baby, and left him to be looked after or not, just as it happened."

"Poor little laddie; what become of him?"

"He was sent to boarding school while the money lasted; then that went, just as orphans' money generally does go, and the fellow was left to shift for himself. He had rather a rough time for a while, but he came out West and struck luck in prospecting before he was very old."

"Oh, is he old?" said the listener blankly.

"Oh, no, not really, but he feels kind of old and forlorn sometimes, when he hears other fellows talking about their mothers and sisters, and—wives," he finished very softly.

"Poor fellow!" said Daisy pitifully.

"Yes, he is a poor kind of fellow," pursued Jack, humbly, "with no education or bringing up, or anything to recommend him to a woman, except just a whole heart full of love for her, and—and—oh, Mrs. Lane, it's myself I'm talking about, and I know I can have no chance with you." And poor Jack, in an agony of shame and fear that his avowal had lost him even the merest toleration from the lady of his love, rushed from the balcony. If he had been composed enough to take one look, he might have gathered hope from the bright blush that suffused Daisy's face and the tender, happy light that sprang to her eyes.

The beautiful color had not left her face before Mordaunt's soft, well modulated voice at that door sought permission to leave for Lily a pretty, scented grass cradle of Indian manufacture. "Made from a drawing of my own," he told Mrs. Lane with a smile, that brought out all the uncommon beauty of his face. Daisy resisted an impulse to decline his gift, because it would be such a pleasure to Lily, so she thanked him prettily and expressed her admiration for the ingenious toy. Then the conversation drifted on, till at last he mentioned Jack's name, looking steadily at her as he did so, and catching a look of interest that infuriated him. "Jack seems very solemn lately, but that's natural for a fellow situated like him."

"Why, what's the peculiarity of Mr. Dinsmore's situation?"

"Oh, ha, ha! Haven't you heard? And I thought you were such friends."

"Heard what? I really don't know what you are talking about."

"Well, if Jack hasn't told you himself, I don't know as I have any right to," laughed 'the Beauty.' "But every one knows that he's entangled some way with one of the girls over at the fort. Some of the boys guess he's married to her. I know he sends her money often." Then, having planted the seeds of mischief, he bowed himself out.

As he left the little parlor he muttered to himself: "All's fair in love and war, and this will be both, if Jack don't keep his ugly face out of my way. I'll have that woman if I have to go through a sea of lies, and it's well I struck in time, for she looked pretty haggard when I told that yarn. I wonder if she's idiot enough to care for that fool of a fellow when there's better men round." He had not thought him a fool once when he staid behind their party at the risk of his life to spend days and nights nursing him through a brain fever, but one forgets favors in love and war. Then in pursuance of his tactics he sought an early opportunity of putting a thorn in his rival's side.

"Don't the course of true love run smooth, eh?" he said, mockingly, at their next meeting.

"I don't understand."

"You're conveniently stupid, old boy. Well, never mind, I was a little soft that way myself, till I found out in time by great good luck that I wasn't first in the field."

Jack turned very red, wondering for one wild moment if he was thought to be the fortunate one who had made the innings. The next remark enlightened him. "A pretty woman like that don't go long without some one getting a mortgage on her. Daisy Lane was engaged before she came out here. It's so, but please don't speak of it yet." It was true, as Mordaunt said to himself, and a huge joke, for of course she was engaged before she was married, as poor Jack might have guessed if he had not been too crushed by the blow to see the point of such wit.

From the fort, twenty miles away, had come an invitation to most of the settlers to celebrate the glorious Fourth by a ball, and the first grand display of fireworks that part of the country had ever seen. The collections had been very munificent, and the amount of patriotic tinder was so large that two wagons were required to transport the well-boxed packages from the train. There was great enthusiasm among the invited. Every wagon in the settlement was supplied with board seats, and the big stage, which was one of the fort properties, was borrowed for the convenience of Mrs. Lane and the only other two women in the place whose position entitled them to an invitation. Jack was to drive the coach, in which, of course, Uncle Jerry had a place. Lily was now so well that her mother arranged to leave her to the care of a trusty Irish woman. The entertainment was to begin and end early, for only on condition of returning the same night would Daisy be persuaded to leave her child.

When the morning of the Fourth came Daisy, for the first time since her arrival, was at the station when the train came in, and Jack and Mordaunt, sauntering up, saw with astonished eyes her pretty little figure lost to sight for a brief space in the fervent embrace of a duster-clothed young man who stepped from a car. Mordaunt had tact enough to turn the incident to account, and, calmly remarking, "The chosen one, I suppose," walked off, leaving Jack a prey to woe.

The newcomer was widely introduced as Dr. Bruce, and made one of the party driven that night by Jack, who had no heart to join the merry conversation of his passengers.

The ball was delightful, the fireworks magnificent, but Jack was thankful when the farewells were said. There was a grayness in the sky which remotely presaged dawn as they reached home, and all but Jack promptly retired to snatch such short lengths of sleep as remained to them. He, after caring for his horses, sat down upon an inverted barrel just within the stable door, and gave himself up to dreary thoughts, which were soon invaded by the consciousness that the freshly rising breeze was carrying a strong scent of burning upon its wings. Instantly alert he ran to the house, finding a bundle of oily rags stuffed under the piazza floor. He tore away the mass, stamped out the fire, and running around to the front found the incendiaries had put in better work. Smoke and fire were starting from several points, and the western corner, right under Daisy's room, was already bursting into flames.

Loudly calling "Fire!" to arouse the sleepers, who would not have too much time to get down from the upper rooms, he climbed up to Daisy's balcony and pounded at her window. She sprang to the window white as death, but understanding just what he wanted her to do. "Let me in and I will carry the baby down stairs," he cried hurriedly, for the wind-fanned flames were making quick headway with the light boards. "Follow me close; don't stop for anything; I will come back for your things."

But all her possessions had to go with the rest, for the fire gained force so rapidly that Jack had to work hard to assist some of the others to get out alive. Uncle Jerry, sleeping on the ground floor, was one of the first to get out, and, with Daisy and the trembling little one, stood at a safe distance, sadly watching the destruction. Suddenly Daisy darted forward crying "Oh, where is Malcolm? He has not come down!" As she spoke, a cry from above drew every one's eye. From one of the highest windows a white, bewildered face looked out. "Oh, Malcolm," screamed Daisy, "you shall be saved!" And she flew distractedly toward the fiery place.

"Go back," sternly commanded Jack, "he shall be saved, if I die for it." He dashed into the burning doorway, and for an awful moment the spectators waited. Then with an awful crash the roof fell in on one side, cutting off the stairs. But Jack was seen the next instant at the window by the doctor. Some of the men were strapping two short, light ladders together with frantic haste and steadying them against the wall, where they nearly touched the window. They shouted to Jack cheerily, flinging him a rope, which he was seen to fasten around the other man's waist. He lowered him to the top rounds, then stood quietly waiting for him to descend the ladder, which would hardly bear the weight of two, swinging himself out while the flames, which had burst into the room, seemed to chase him, he dropped upon the ladder. As his feet touched the ground a crowd of men surrounded him, all eager to clasp his hand. But they fell back for Mrs. Lane, who ran up with pale face and eyes shining like stars in the early light. There were eloquent words on her tongue, but not one could she speak. She could only put her two little hands in his and gaze up at his sad, honest eyes, with big tears falling from her own.

It was a hard moment for Jack, and to relieve his embarrassment he murmured: "I was so glad to be in time to get him down safely for you."

"For my sister that means. You know he is only my sister's husband."

"Then he is not the one you are engaged to?" gasped Jack.

"Engaged! What are you talking about? I am not engaged to any one, but I hear that you are!" said Daisy, retreating in great disorder from the rapturous embrace with which Jack, made bold by something he saw in her face, refuted the statement.

Mordaunt joined a vigilance committee that rode off at once to search for the incendiaries, capturing them, as they had reason to hope from past experience, at a group of miserable huts which sheltered a gang of reprobates; but, instead of returning with the party, Mordaunt took a train for the East and has never come back. Jack and Daisy, with hearts made kind by love, forgave and forgot, and sent him cards for their wedding, which, in celebration of the eventful Independence Day of that year, they appropriately appointed for the Fourth of July, 1890.—Mrs. M. C. Hoogerford.

A GOOD SAMARITAN.

As, toward the end of October, a little over 30 years ago, the night train of the Chemin de Fer du Nord was about to leave the station at Paris, an English gentleman got into a first-c ass compartment, and, stowing away his small valise, took his seat in one of the vacant corners. He noticed that on the seat opposite to him was a gentleman who appeared to be ill. His face was deathly pale; he was breathing very hard, and appeared to be in great pain.

"Are you ill, sir? Can I be of any assistance to you?" the gentleman asked.

"I am very ill," the sufferer replied faintly. "I am subject to a very painful malady, and feeling an attack coming on while in Switzerland, I resolved to go home—to England. It generally gives me a week's warning. But I feel I shall not reach Calais alive."

"But you must not go on, my dear sir," said his fellow-traveler.

"I am a perfect stranger in Paris. I have come right through from Geneva and I do not know a word of French," replied the sick man, almost in a state of collapse.

"It will never do for you to travel in that state. Come, let me help you out before the train starts."

The kindly gentleman was not a moment too soon. But by the friendly aid of a porter he got the sufferer out of the train, placed him gently in a cab, and had him taken to the hotel which he himself had just quitted, and where he knew the sick man would receive every attention. Caring for him on the way with all the tenderness of a woman, he bade him cheer up, for he knew a physician who was one of the highest authorities on the particular disease from which he was suffering.

All the night the gentleman was exceedingly ill, nor did he improve much the next day. The following morning the sufferer's sister, who had been telegraphed for, arrived, and the kind-hearted gentleman who had spent two nights and a day almost constantly by the sick man's side, handed over the sufferer to her care. Then, and not till then, did this golden-hearted man decide to resume his interrupted journey.

Going into the patient's room in the evening he said: "I must now wish you farewell, as I have important business in London. I wish you a hearty God-speed toward recovery."

The sick man was still extremely ill, and not able to do more than press his benefactor's hand and whisper a few words of gratitude. The sister, however, followed the gentleman out of the room, and said:—"You have not done me the honor to tell me to whom I and my brother owe so signal an act of kindness as that which you have shown to an utter stranger. Had you not so generously and so disinterestedly taken compassion on him, I fear his relatives and friends would never have seen him again alive. In thanking you again for your kindness, therefore, I should like to know to whom we are so much indebted. Besides, you forfeited the cost of your railway ticket. If you will allow me to reimburse you the amount"—

"Do not mention it," said the gentleman; "it is of no consequence."

"You will at least do me the pleasure of permitting us to know your name?"

"Certainly. I will give you my card."

With these words the gentleman took out his card-case and handed the lady his card. She read upon it the name, "William Makepeace Thackeray."—From the Million.

SENDING ICE "OVER THERE."

A pious and aged Saco lady, who felt that the end of her mortal existence was close at hand, was settling her bill with her iceman the other day and took occasion to remark in an earnest way: "I don't suppose I shall take ice of you another year. I expect to pass over to the other side of the river before long." "Oh, no trouble, no trouble at all," replied the enterprising iceman; "we send a team over to Biddeford every day." Then he began slowly to grasp the real meaning and muttered as he picked up his tongs and went out the door: "Some people would be happy to have a piece of ice 'over there,' anyway, I guess."—Lewiston Journal.

Dicky is about to begin reading Lincoln. Morton told him at the club last evening that it was the great war President who said that our chief trial is that although we can kiss all the girls some of the time, and some of the girls all of the time, we cannot yet, alas, kiss all of the girls all of the time. Dicky says that is great.—Life.

It is an indisputable fact that every man who wears his watch in his vest pocket is behind time.—Philadelphia Record.

Do Your Best.

Do your best, and not be troubled
Should some others better do;
If your work should fail to please you,
Don't give up, but strive anew.

Do your best, for slighting labor
Ne'er can satisfaction bring;
Do it quickly, time is passing;
You must seize it on the wing.

Many duties lie before you,
Trials oft your strength shall test,
But you need not fret or worry
If you only do your best.

Do your best, get not disheartened,
Though the task seem hard and long;
God is ever near to help you,
He can make the weakest strong.

HE LOVED BUT ONE.

"So, you see, you'll come into your fortune when you marry or on your thirty-fifth birthday," said Lawyer Patmore, folding some papers and depositing them in a tin box which stood before him.

"Well, Mr. Patmore, said Howard, "I have this alternative, but it is a very singular fact that I have never met a girl I could fancy ever loving well enough to marry but once in my life."

"Well, hunt that girl up and make her an offer," said the lawyer.

"Oh, I shall never see her again," said the young man. "It was a very brief interview. It was when I was in Paris. She was with a party of tourists, and they had somehow managed to loose her, and I took charge of her and returned her safe after some adventures—for instance, lunch at a restaurant and some riding about in a cab, all highly improper in Paris, only we were Americans and did as we pleased.

"I cannot forget her, but I only know that her name was Rose, for the other girls called her so. There wasn't a minute—the train was off, the chaperon of the party shrieked her thanks from the car window of the car.

"One thing I'd like to have the money for would be to look for that girl. But at 35—why, she'll be 35, too, married and all the rest of it."

"Very likely," said Mr. Patmore, "and you can do as you choose, you know, only as you are a stranger in the city perhaps you'd like me to introduce you to some nice families. There is Mr. Honeybee—seven children, two grownup girls, 17 or 18, showy girls, big black eyes."

"She had black eyes," said young Granville, with a sigh.

"I'll ask leave to take you with me next Thursday. I generally play a game of whist with Honeybee and his wife, and somebody else on that evening, and you'll have a chance to get acquainted with the girls."

And so it came to pass that on Thursday evening the introduction took place.

Mr. Patmore had told Mr. Honeybee all about Howard Granville's prospects.

"If he is passable, I shall certainly set my cap for him," Hetty Honeybee said in apparent jest, but real earnest, while Minnie shrugged her shoulders and said:

"Why you in particular?" in the same spirit.

As for young Howard Granville, he was young, bright and handsome. They were delighted with him and became rivals on the spot. It was veiled rivalry at first, but the love between them vanished altogether.

Howard Granville had really made up his mind that he could not wait for his fortune. There was something disagreeable to him in Hetty's voice, and Minnie had a way of pouting that was not charming. Otherwise, why not one of them as well as any other? He should never see his lovely Rose again.

And so one evening the young man walked over to the Honeybee mansion, with the intention of proposing to Miss Minnie, for naturally women do not go on pouting forever, while a voice like Miss Hetty's grew harsher with years.

And so, being admitted by the servant, he walked into the parlor to find it empty. However, beyond the portiere, which divided the front room from the back, a conversation was going on.

"He comes to see me," were the first words he heard. Miss Hetty uttered them in her most nasal tone. However, the voice in which Miss Minnie replied was by no means dovelike.

"He calls on me," she said. "Every one else knows that if you do not. I often think you might give us 10 minutes alone, and you might as well do what ma asks you. You are not needed, and so I tell you plainly."

"Really," said a matronly voice, that of Mrs. Honeybee, "I'm not the least of a matchmaker, but if Mr. Granville should have a word or two to say to either of you he could not say it before the other. Poor Miss Rose wants to go to her sick mother to-night, and if Hetty would put the children to bed for once, why"—

"I never saw such partiality," said Miss Hetty, "and I am the elder, too. Not that the man is any more charming than dozens that I know, but I shan't be packed off to the nursery to lose $500,000 unless it is by force."

Mr. Granville at this juncture stepped into the hall, opened the door and took his departure.

Sauntering to the corner of the street, he stood waiting for a car, when a slight figure in black glided down the steps of the Honeybee mansion and came in his direction.

"The governess, Miss Rose, I presume," he thought. "Miss Rose; that was her name."

The girl came nearer. He saw great black eyes, a cheek like a wild rose leaf, crimson lips, a low white forehead on which lay the loveliest waves of ebon hair.

He lifted his hat. Recognition sparkled in her eyes.

"The gentleman who took such good care of me that day in Paris," she cried.

The young man saw Miss Rose to the door of a plain little boarding house, where he left her, leaving his card for her mother.

"Miss Rose?" he queried.

"Miss Leigh," the governess replied. "I am Rose Leigh."

But the Misses Honeybee waited in vain for the arrival of the gentleman on whose account they had quarreled so prematurely.

The servant did not tell them of his presence in the parlor, while they, as she expressed it to the cook, "were having a row."

"I don't think I shall wait for my fortune until I am five and thirty, Mr. Patmore," young Granville said, sauntering into the lawyer's office one day. "I am going to be married next week, thanks to your introduction to the Honeybees."

"Ah, ha!" cried Mr. Patmore. "And which is it, Hetty or Minnie?"

"Neither, sir," replied Granville.

"Kate and Lucy are only 7 and 9," said Mr. Patmore.

"But the governess, Miss Rose Leigh, proves to be the young lady I told you about whom I met abroad," said the young man, flushing. "I was not mistaken, and I have you to thank for meeting her again at the Honeybees

PALMER NEWS.

The Bicycle Races.

About 1400 people gathered on the driving park Wednesday afternoon to witness the bicycle races managed by W. F. Waite. The weather was fine, though a strong wind prevailed at times, which made fast time impossible. A light shower came up late in the afternoon, but it did not last long, and the crowd waited good-naturedly until it was over. The first race was the one-mile novice for members of the Palmer bicycle club only, and brought out four starters, F. J. McGuan, C. D. Holden, Fred Adams and Eugene Shaw, who started a loafing match, each waiting for the others until on the home stretch Holden pulled out and won in 3.30, with Shaw second and Adams third. The first trial heat of the one-mile three-minute class was next on the list, and brought out eight starters. The referee placed a time limit of 3.15 on the mile to prevent a leaf, and it was finished in 2.35½, William Cummings of Ware, C. S. Haynes of Springfield, H. T. Chapin of Monson and E. D. Tufts of North Wilbraham qualifying for the final. The second trial heat brought out ten contestants, C. Rueda and A. W. Olmstead of Springfield, A. W. Hapgood of Brookfield and Howard A. King of Springfield qualifying for the final. A. W. Stacy of Belchertown finished fourth, but was disqualified for foul riding. The half mile for boys was a lazy run to the quarter, when a push was made for positions, G. T. Burt and Horace Young of Holyoke easily taking the first two places. The final in the one-mile three-minute class was run next, and though no fast time was made the race was a pretty one, the men being well bunched until the last turn, when Olmstead and Rueda pulled out and finished in the order named, the time being 2.30½. Master Allen Atkins of Palmer then gave an exhibition of fancy and trick riding which drew forth much applause from the audience. A time limit of 1.20 was put on the half-mile open race, in which there were seven starters. Fred H. Pratt of Malden thought this was pretty fast, but concluded to start, and showed the good stuff of which he was capable by finishing a close second to Stacy of Belchertown, who won in 1.12½. This was in some respects the best race of the day, for the time limit made the men hustle from start to finish, a feature which the crowd appreciated. The one-mile club race for the Waite prize cup brought out four men, representing the Palmer, Spencer and Brookfield clubs. The time limit was set at 2.45, but as only 2.50½ was made the referee ordered the race run over, which was done later in the day, and the cup goes to Brookfield, A. W. Hapgood finishing in 2.46½, which the referee allowed to stand. A time limit of 2.40 was placed on the trial heat of the one-mile open, and it was run in just that time, Olmstead, Rueda and King of Springfield and Henry C. Walker of Ludlow being the four of the ten to qualify. In the second trial heat there were only four men to come to the scratch, Chapin, Pratt, Tufts and Goodrow. In the final Chapin led to the half, but was not able to hold the pace to the end and finished a close third, Rueda taking first and Pratt second. There were eleven starters in the ten-mile race, which was generally conceded to Stacy. A time limit of 31 minutes was put on the race, and the men rode it at just about that rate. There was a spill at the upper turn which sent down two men, another at the lower turn which dropped out two more, and one at the beginning of the stretch which narrowed the contest down to five, Stacy easily winning in 30.53, with C. S. Haynes of Springfield second.

The Glorious Fourth.

It was indeed a Glorious Fourth. The rain of the afternoon before had wet down the back yards and roofs so that there was little danger from stray sparks, and this relief from anxiety doubtless caused many to sleep much sounder on the night of the third than they would have otherwise. The noise commenced soon after supper on the night of the third, as usual, but there was not so much of it nor so long continued as has been customary. The boys built their customary bonfire near the watering tank on Main street late in the evening, and at midnight the bells in the Baptist church and the grammar school building were rung. At 12.25 an alarm was rung in from box 66, near Campbell's blacksmith shop on South Main street, but there was no fire, the alarm having been pulled in by someone in a spirit of deviltry. This is the second time since the alarm was put in that it has been tampered with, and it will go hard with the guilty parties if they are caught. The box is one which has a key on the side in a little glass box, which is broken when anyone wishes to pull in an alarm, so there is little likelihood of finding out who did it. The day was spent by Palmer people about as usual. Some attended the clambake on Oak Knoll at noon, some went to Forest Lake, while others went on picnics to different places. In the afternoon a large number attended the bicycle races on the park, though the threatened rain no doubt kept some at home. There was very little noise during the day, but in the evening there was enough to satisfy the average small boy, and the display of fireworks was very good, private enterprise being responsible for it. Probably the largest display was on the lawn of W. E. Stone, where the neighbors had "chipped in" and then gathered at the houses of Mr. Stone and H. W. McGregory to see them. W. H. Hitchcock also sent up a large number of handsome rockets. No serious accidents have been reported, and on the whole the day was all that could be desired.

Austin Hawkes has taken a position as salesman in the store of E. Goodes.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Rev. H. F. Moulton will exchange pulpits next Sunday with Rev. F. J. Hale of the Methodist church of Bondsville.

A merry party of young people, high school graduates and former attendants, had a ride to Forest Lake last Friday evening.

Miss Eloise Stone gave a piazza party Tuesday evening to a number of the high school graduates at her home on Squier street.

N. W. Chandler has finished his work in the Palmer National Bank, and is now studying law in the office of District Attorney Gardner.

The district court has turned over to the town treasurer $306.93 as the town's share of the fines received by the court for the quarter ending July 1st.

The Spiritualist camp meeting at Niantic, Ct., is open, and the New London Northern road will sell round-trip tickets, good during the season, for $2.70.

A reward of $25 has been offered for the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who pulled in an alarm from box 66 on the morning of the Fourth.

The King farm north of Monson, owned by Mrs Lucy Reed of Palmer, has been sold to Louis E. Aldrich of Monson through the D. F. Holden agency.

Dr. H. M. Auger has returned from a post-graduate course at the New York Medical School and hospital, and will be at the Weeks House for the present.

The Palmer bicycle club will have a club run next Sunday to the Allen House at Hampden, where a shore dinner will be served. The start will be at 10 a. m.

A large party of Springfield people came to Palmer Monday morning to go to Block Island on the first trip of the Block Island train for this season. Mrs. G. C. Ellis and Miss Holbrook joined the party here.

The regular monthly meeting of the pastoral committees of the Universalist church will take place next Tuesday evening at 7.30. The pastor would like a full attendance, as this is the last meeting until after vacation.

The bicycle club had a lantern parade Tuesday evening, though as it was not generally known that one was to take place there were not many wheels in line. Some of the decorations were very tasteful, however.

St. Paul's Sunday school will hold its picnic with the Universalist Sunday schools of Springfield and Monson at Flynt's Park next Thursday. The children of St. Paul's school will receive free tickets from the committee.

The iron for the front of Holden's block, which has been delayed for several weeks on account of the strikes in the mining districts, the non-arrival of which has stopped all work on the block, has finally put in an appearance, and work on the block will be resumed at once.

About 75 attended the clambake on Oak Knoll Wednesday noon, and did full justice to the bill of fare, which included both kinds of clams, oysters, lobsters, bluefish, sweet and Irish potatoes, sliced tomatoes, and the usual accompaniments. Rohan Brothers of Ware were the caterers.

The Boston and Albany road offers round-trip tickets to the national convention of Christian Endeavor at Cleveland, O., good going on the 9th, 10th and 11th, and good returning until the 31st, for $13.25 if the return is made by way of Niagara Falls, or for $16.25 if by way of the Thousand Islands.

The New London Northern road offers round-trip tickets to the meeting of the American Institute of Instruction at Bethlehem, N. H., good going July 7-10, and good for the return trip until July 31st, for only $6.30, an unusually low rate. This gives a most excellent opportunity of visiting the White Mountains.

W. F. Shaw, who was formerly employed at the Boston & Albany freight house in this village, but who has been stationed for the past year in Springfield as agent of the New York and New England railroad, has been appointed agent for the same road at Worcester, and has already assumed his new duties.

Excursion tickets to Block Island are for sale at the following rates: Fare one way, $2.65; down and back the same day, $2.90; down Saturday and back Monday, $3; round-trip good for any time during the season, $3.75. The corresponding rates to Watch Hill are $2.25, $2.50, $2.60 and $3.75; to Mystic Island, $2.10, $2.40, $2.50 and $3.75.

The crosswalk at the foot of Thorndike street has been repaired. The walk was originally made of large flat stones, these being covered a few years ago with concrete. One of the stones had settled so as to leave quite a hollow in the walk, so they were pulled up and the hole filled with small stones, a new coating of concrete being put on.

The JOURNAL has made arrangements whereby two parts of the "Glimpses of America" series can be secured each week, instead of only one, and the coupon for two numbers will be found in the usual place on this page. The "Magic City" bindings can still be secured, and samples of the bound volumes can be seen at this office. The price for binding is only $1.25, but a more elaborate one can be had at $2.

Clarence Brown, employed by O. C. Marcy at his Walnut street stable, is mourning the loss of $38, which he had in his pocket when he retired at night but which was missing when he awoke on the morning of the Fourth. He slept that night in the ladies' waiting room in the barn, and thinks that someone who came to arouse him during the night and found him hard to waken, went through his pockets.

R. S. Parks, brother of W. R. Parks of this town, died at Washington, D. C., last week, the funeral taking place Saturday. Mr. Parks was born in Palmer in 1821, went to Ohio in 1847, and for more than twenty years was a successful merchant at Warren, in that state. He went to Washington in 1869 at the request of Gen. Jacob D. Cox, then Secretary of the Interior, to accept a position in the Indian Bureau, and had since that time been a resident of Washington. For twenty years he was an examiner in the Patent Office.

The parade of wheelmen on the morning of the Fourth was a very pretty sight. Led by the band about 100 gaily decorated wheels paraded the streets of the village, the procession being viewed by large numbers of people who gathered for that purpose. The Twilight club, composed mainly of young ladies, made the best showing, their wheels being fancifully and elaborately decorated with the national and club colors, the latter being orange and white. Four clubs which sent letters stating that they would be here to join in the parade, failed to put in an appearance.

An exciting runaway which might have terminated fatally, but which happily ended without injuring anyone, took place Wednesday morning. A horse dashed down Thorndike street drawing a carriage, and after turning south on Main street took to the sidewalk after passing Goodes's store. There were many people on the walk a little further along, and it seemed as though someone must get hurt, but they quickly scattered, and the horse left the walk just before reaching the store of W. A. Barnes, the carriage coming to grief against a tree and being pretty badly used up.

The Holden family celebrated the 77th anniversary of Mrs. Eliza A. Holden's birth last week in a very pleasant manner. Mrs. Holden with all her children took a carriage drive to Charlton, where the family formerly lived. From there they drove to Southbridge, where they had dinner. The chapel in Charlton, where John S. Holden has given a memorial window, and the grave of Mrs. Holden's husband were visited, after which the party returned to Palmer. Mrs. Holden gave her family a dinner at the Converse House at 7 o'clock Thursday evening, which closed the celebration.

The Brown family held their annual reunion this year with Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Brown on School street, on the Fourth. There were over thirty present. The homestead on Tower Hill, in Brimfield was represented by E. B. Brown and family and Miss Lucy A. Brown. There was also present Mrs. Calvin Bliss and son of Warren; G. F. Brown and Mrs. W. H. Hall and children of Providence, R. I.; W. S. Whitcomb and family, Springfield; D. H. Brown and family, Palmer; Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Sistare and family, Springfield; Miss Carrie Smith, West Brookfield; and Mrs. Boyden of Holyoke. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

The much-needed rain came Saturday night in the shape of a hard thunder shower, about 5 o'clock. The rain fell in torrents for nearly an hour, accompanied by vivid lightning and heavy thunder. There was also a heavy fall of hail, which did considerable damage to flower gardens and some vegetables. On the Weeks House lawn a maple tree twelve inches in diameter at the base was twisted off about ten feet from the ground, where the trunk was about eight inches through, by the wind, which also did some damage in other places. Another shower came Tuesday afternoon, apparently out of a clear sky, and for fifteen minutes the rain fell fast, washing some of the streets and roads badly.

Allen Atkins, who has astonished Palmer people and all who have seen him with his fancy and trick bicycle riding, has had an offer from the Spaulding company to go on the road. He was given a letter to the manager of the factory at Chicopee by an interested party who saw him ride at the bicycle races Wednesday afternoon, and yesterday morning started on his wheel for Chicopee, where he gave an exhibition of what he could do. Those who witnessed his performance thought it very good, and he was given a light wheel to ride home on instead of his heavy one, being told to return and consult with his father. The latter is not ready to let the lad go on the road yet, although he has no objections to the boy giving exhibitions near home occasionally.

An accident on the New London Northern road near Stafford last evening delayed the trains in both directions for some time. A freight became derailed and the wrecker was sent from Palmer to help; meanwhile the locomotive attached to the freight had started for Palmer with what cars had remained on the track, and met the wrecker on the sharp curve at the "powder" switch. Fortunately both were going slowly, or serious trouble would have resulted. As it was the locomotives became locked together so closely that it was some time before they could be separated. Several section hands were in the tool car with the wrecker, and when the crash came they jumped, and Jerry Dowd of Palmer had some of his ribs broken, while Jerry Conner cracked one of the bones in his foot. Neither of the injuries are serious, however.

There was no district court business this week until Thursday morning, when an unusually large number of cases came up. Warren J. Mundell was charged with drunkenness and paid a fine of $10. William Allen for the same offence paid a similar amount. Peter Kearns of Monson was put on probation until July 28. Samuel L. Ferry pleaded not guilty to a charge of drunkenness, was fined $5 and took an appeal. He furnished $100 bail. John W. Brown of Brimfield came up charged with larceny. It appeared that Brown had taken a cannon from in front of Hitchcock's store and carried it away, giving it to another man to keep, telling him to whom it belonged. The owners asked Brown to return the cannon, but he did not do so. He gave as a reason for taking the cannon that he did not like to hear its noise. He was found guilty and paid a fine of $4.07. This morning Michael Rock came up for drunkenness and paid a fine of $5. Daniel Crimmins paid $10, and Samuel O'Hanlon was put on probation until July 28th.

State Primary School Notes.

Rev. H. F. Moulton spoke to the children last Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Royce returned yesterday after spending a week with friends in Brimfield.

E. G. Bass returned Monday evening after spending two weeks with relatives in the eastern part of the state.

All the schools were closed Tuesday to allow the teachers and some of the officers a chance to spend the day at Watch Hill with the Sunday school of the Congregational church of Monson.

The children report a glorious time the Fourth. Each boy was given a bunch of fire crackers and a box of torpedoes, after which they all went to town to see the bicycle parade. In the afternoon they attended the races by invitation of Mr. Waite. In the evening there was a fine display of fireworks.

THREE RIVERS.

Stephen Moore visited friends in Lowell this week.

Cyrus Brown spent the Fourth at East Jaffrey, N. H.

Miss Mary Johnson intends to spend Sunday in Warren.

Miss Lula Hodgerney is seriously ill of brochial pneumonia.

Mrs. Henderson is spending a two-weeks' vacation in Spencer.

Ed. Forte of Warren paid his brother Phinias a flying visit last Wednesday.

R. C. Macadam and T. Braman sailed for their native land, Ireland, last Saturday.

N. P. Belanger of Boston was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Belanger a few days this week.

J. W. Cheney and family and a few friends picnicked in Aldrich's grove during the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lavene are rejoicing over the advent of a little daughter, Wednesday night.

Mrs. J. Needham and daughter Fanny, and Miss Nettie Trickett are visiting friends in Waltham.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Olds spent a few days this week in Springfield, with their daughter, Mrs. Mason.

Mrs. H. Newell and daughter Amy of Dayton, Ohio, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Newell.

An awning caught fire on Lariviere's store during the Fourth, but prompt attention averted a serious blaze.

C. P. Crossman and family and Miss Hattie Kendrick of Springfield are guests of Mr. Kendrick for a few weeks.

Mrs. Ward and Miss Rogers of the state primary school at Palmer were the guests of Mrs. F. A. Ruggles during the Fourth.

Mr. Twogood, Mr. Holt and H. Paine and their families held a clambake at the home of the latter on the Fourth, which proved to be a very enjoyable affair.

The Messrs. Lyman, Wells and McMaster of Meriden, Ct., and Robert McMaster of Suffield, Ct., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ruggles yesterday.

Prayer and preaching services have been held at Red Bridge a few days this week. The meetings were well attended, and many prominent speakers addressed the audiences.

The picnic which was held by the French church society on Wednesday was as enjoyable as usual. Refreshments were served and games were participated in, to the gratification of everyone present.

Rev. J. Provost of Springfield and Rev. T. G. A. Cote of Lynn conducted an afternoon prayer meeting on the common last Sunday. The clergy were the guests of Mrs. P. A. Forte until the following day.

Charles Haynes received severe injuries to two of his fingers yesterday while operating a wood spliting machine. The wounds were dressed by Dr. Bliss, and may occasion his refraining from work for several weeks.

During the thunder storm last Saturday Mrs. John Lehane had a narrow escape from fatal injuries while sitting on a piazza. The lightning struck near the house, so close as to upset the seat which Mrs. Lehane occupied, and rendering her insensible for over a quarter of an hour.

The picnic which was held on the grounds of Charles Ruggles by the Union and Baptist church societies gave satisfaction to every one present. Many facilities for diversion were provided by Mr. Ruggles; games and boat-riding were indulged in, and a most enjoyable day was spent on this happily situated picnic grounds.

As usual pandemonium reigned on the night before the Fourth, because both young and old, great and small were anxious to swell the diablerie. Kettle drums, fish horns, shrill whistles and other abominable appliances were among the wizards that made the realm of night hideous. Several unruly actions were also taken by miscreants with herculean prowess, for effigies of obnoxious creatures were suspended over the Quaboag river, and personal property was elevated to the summit of large buildings.

A very pretty wedding took place at six o'clock Wednesday evening, June 27, at the home of Mrs. H. M. Whitney, 3 Oxford street, Malden, the contracting parties being Jessie E. Whitney, formerly of Bondsville, and L. Melvin Newton of Everett. The wedding ceremony was performed with a ring by Rev. Geo. H. Clarke of the Belmont Hill M. E. church, formerly a pastor in Bondsville. The bride wore a very pretty gown of white corded silk, and carried a large bunch of bride roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Gay of Cushing Academy, Ashburnham, a cousin of the groom, and Miss Ward of Malden, carried large bunches of white pinks. The parlors, beautifully decorated with ferns, roses and potted plants, were darkened and lighted during the ceremony. A reception was held from 8 to 10 o'clock, and many relatives and friends congratulated the happy couple. Refreshments were served by Heerkloss, the caterer. At 10.30 p. m., amid showers of rice and old shoes, Mr. and Mrs. Newton left for Haverhill, where they were welcomed with a wedding breakfast by relatives of the groom. They will continue their journey to Lake Chesterfield, N. H., and on their return will reside at 3 Oxford street, Malden, where they will be at home after Sept. 1st.

There are two cases of scarlet fever in the village, and notices have been posted on the houses wa ning all persons off the premises. The cases are not considered dangerous, and are of a very mild form, in the families of Daniel Broshnahan and Louis Cairo.

The parade of horribles, which was announced to take place from the station on the Fourth at 6 a. m., was promptly on time, and paraded the streets of the village. The procession was very good, considering the times, and the make-ups were excellent. The participants, with but few exceptions, were on foot, and represented a delegation of Coxey's forces, led by Mr. and Mrs. Coxey in a buggy.

Alex Goodrue, a young lad, had a narrow escape one day this week from serious injuries. It seems he was climbing overhead in the building used as a slaughter house by Clark & Hastings, when he fell, and in falling came in contact with a hook which is used to hang up beef, and received a painful wound. He was considered very fortunate in receiving no serious injuries.

A large black porcupine was killed near the bend of the river on Friday night by Moses Lafarar. Mr. Lafarar was returning home through the woods when he came in contact with the animal and dealt it a heavy blow with a hard wood club which he held in his hand. This is considered quite a find, as nothing like it has been known to have ever been seen in this neighborhood. The back of the animal was covered with quills, which they use in defense.

The Fourth passed off in a quiet manner as usual. The celebration began on Tuesday evening and continued throughout the night. The boys were on hand and their bonfire was as good as in former years, lighting up the lower part of the village in good shape. The cannon was brought out at midnight and tested to its full powers. The bells were rung, and taking all into consideration it was a genuine Fourth. There was but very little drunkenness seen on the streets, much to the credit of the village. Several went to the races at Palmer, others to Forest Lake and Bondsville, and the majority to the picnic at Four Corners. There were no accidents.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, July 3, 1894.

Our people are kicking all the time against the state commissions, and are all the time demanding more of them. Theoretically, they are against them. Practically, they must have them and they do not stop their kicking long enough to see their inconsistency. Suppose they should stop and think, even for half a minute, what food for reflection they would have. Two new commissions have been created by the present legislature, and the offices have been filled. Charles W. Whitcomb of Boston gets the fine marshalship, and the new members of the board of registration for physicians and surgeons are as follows, the first one holding office for seven years and the following each one year less than the one before him: E. J. Foster of Boston, A. L. Chase of Randolph, I. B. Whittier of Fitchburg, W. P. Bowers of Clinton, S. H. Blodgett of Cambridge, C. E. Niles of Boston and A. C. Walker of Greenfield.

The Senate did not finish the Meigs bill till Friday afternoon, having had it for over a week. In that time it put in a provision for a subway and changed it beyond recognition from the form in which it left the House. But the House agreed to it, with a referendum amendment, and the governor signed it.

The Bell Telephone Company petitioned Friday for its new stock subject to the sale-at-market-value clause. The bill was admitted under suspension of the rules, was enacted and signed.

Now that the acts of the Legislature are ended and nothing is to be gained by praise or condemnation, it is worth while to speak of the moral quality of the Senate and House. During the last two weeks especially, while the Meigs bill has been pending, charges have been freely made that the Legislature was the most corrupt body which ever sat. Now this is distinctly not true, and I have no doubt that it was part of the tactics of the opponents of the Meigs bill to help kill it. I do not mean that there was a concerted plan, nor that the opponents of the Meigs bill were other than good men, but good men are prone to the human error of attributing to their opponents things which are not true, and if the newspapers opposed to the Meigs bill could only raise such a cry of corruption as to make it appear prima facie proof of bribery to vote for the Meigs bill, then a great point was gained. Probably the Meigs bill, was not a good bill, all things considered, but it has been used freely for the purpose of blackening the character of the Legislature.

It is probable that there has been some corruption in the Legislature. I do not know where to locate any of it, nor would I make the charge in such a way as to do injustice, but from what I know of a few men and from what has occurred, it would be giving too clean a bill of health to say that all were absolutely spotless. Yet the Legislature was right in refusing to order an investigation such as Mr. Bennett proposed. Never yet has an investigation been made unless specific charges were uttered on the floor. Unless some honest man has come into possession of a provable fact and knows that his proof will be forthcoming, it a mistake to order an investigation. It is but a step from the sublime to the ridiculous, and an investigation which, after a few witnesses have been examined, is clearly on a wrong scent, or unable to prove anything wrong, speedily becomes a laughing stock and more harm than good is done. In this case, Mr. Bennett said specifically that he had no charges to make. It was certain that no one else had, and hence it was best not to begin what promised to end in folly.

One thing which the people should remember who are so ready to criticise the Legislature is that the strong light of public criticism is constantly turned upon the Legislature, and that if men will sometimes take bribes with such danger of discovery and such severity of condemnation before them, much more likely are they to do wrong where there is far less danger of detection. That is, is the legislative corruption, such as there is, only an index of the average state of pupic morals in the transaction of business, and the Legislature, either by selection or force of circumstances, is of a higher average moral tone than the mass of people when money matters are concerned. If the people want an honest Legislature, let them begin at home.

On Monday, the last day of the session, occurred what I have never seen before at the state house, and what may be an important precedent in our law making. Gov. Greenhalge gave a public hearing to both sides on the Meigs bill. To be sure, the opposition occupied most of the time, but both sides were heard. So it has come to this, that under our representative government, with law-makers specially chosen by the people, after the hearing of petitions and evidence at length by the committee of the Legislature, after full consideration of all arguments by two separate branches, with two regular debatable stages in each branch, that the executive of the state, who is forbidden by the constitution to encroach upon the functions of the Legislature, reopens the hearing of testimony and arguments, and then as autocrat, gives his decision, perhaps (and actually at times) completely reversing the decision of the many men who have heard the testimony with far more detail than he and who have, with their many minds seeing the truth from all sides, balanced all the arguments which have been offered to him and passed judgement upon them.

Be it clearly understood that this is not said in criticism of the governor. I am merely pointing out the position which we have reached in our development under the constitution. There is great power exercised by the governor, and these developments raise the question naturally whether the governor should any longer, by possessing the veto power, be another branch of the Legislature. Without expressing any opinon on that question in its broad, impersonal aspect as regards the good of the state under all sorts of governors in the years to come, it is clear that the people should see where we are drifting, or to what we are growing, and not awake suddenly sometime to find that a despotic governor has overridden the will of a large majority of the people and by unworthy means has such support in the Legislature that a bill cannot be passed over his veto. It is a momentous question, and the people should face it.

Charles R. Buffington and Arthur Johnson left Wednesday for a bicycle trip to Shelburne Falls, and expect to return to-morrow.

Miss Mary Kimball, who spent the month of June at the Congregational parsonage, has returned to her home in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Susan E. Thrall, president of the Woman's Relief Corps, who has been so very ill, has so far recovered as to go out of doors.

John P. Herlihy, Jr., has bought of Orrin C. McCray two lots on the west side of Pearl street, formerly the property of Mrs. Inez Ferrell.

District Deputy Charles E. Fuller of Palmer and suite installed the newly-elected officers of Monson Lodge of Odd Fellows last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Festus Cooley, Lysander Nevins and others spent the Fourth at Crystal Lake. A large number attended the races at Palmer.

It is rumored that the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. will commence operations this summer on a railroad from the quarry to the B. and A. R. R. at Palmer.

Miss Mary Montague, formerly of Monson, now of Barre, has been the guest of her aunts, Mrs. Griggs and Miss Augusta Colton, during the past week.

Dr. George E. Fuller goes Saturday to Lake Winnipesaukee for much needed rest. Dr. G. F. Shurtleff of Westfield will care for his practice during his absence.

The names of the leaders of the Silver Street meetings for the next five months have been published. John Hall will have charge of the meeting next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred O. Peabody and children were the guests of Almus Anderson last week. They are now in Brimfield, but will return here Monday for a few days.

George E. Wills of Worcester spent the Fourth with his mother, Mrs. Priscilla Wills. Mr. Wills will enter a Boston dental college in the fall on certificate from Monson Academy.

During the past week the shade trees on our streets have been adorned (?) with posters. Attention is called to the fact that this is prohibited by the laws of Massachusetts.

The Monson Cycle Club and other riders had a lantern parade Tuesday evening. There were about 40 wheels, all carrying two or more lanterns, while several wheels were quite elaborately decorated.

Great pleasure is expressed at the news that all the teachers at the academy are to return in the autumn. The academy has never before been able to hold so many teachers together for a second year.

The 4th of July union picnic of St. Patrick's society of Monson and St. Edward's of Stafford Springs proved as entertaining as a big crowd, exciting sports, plenty to eat and good fellowship could be expected to make it.

Neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Squier on Moulton Hill to celebrate the glorious Fourth. Thirty-six persons sat down to a clam chowder dinner, and a good time is reported.

The Monson Cycle Club met Monday evening and elected the following officers to fill vacancies: Hiram Felton, treasurer; Cyrus Patrell, first lieutenant; Mrs. William Carew, executive committee; Miss Joanna Cantwell, secretary.

There was a neighborhood picnic at Mr. Warriner's on North Main street Wednesday. Bruce catered. The grounds were prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns, which with the fireworks in the evening made a fine display.

Nicholson's market in Heimann & Lichten's block on Main street was opened Saturday evening. Whether the addition of another meat market will meet the anticipations of the people in regard to prices remains to be seen. Just now, on account of strikes, meat is meat.

A party including Mrs. Frank Fenton, Mrs. Hattie Flynt, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Thompson, Miss Bertha Thompson, Miss Annie Seymour and Edwin Bradley left Thursday for Old Orchard Beach, to remain through the month. Others will probably join them later.

The Congregational church will observe next Sunday in an appropriate manner as a national day. A service of worship has been especially prepared, and the pastor will preach a sermon suggested by the occasion. The disturbances of the past week will add peculiar interest to such a service.

The topic for the meeting Sunday evening of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational and Methodist churches is "How Are Men Helped by the Holy Spirit?" John 16:7-14. Topic for the meeting of the Young People's Christian Union of the Universalist church: "What Work is for Christ?"

The picnic of the Congregational church and Sunday school Tuesday at Watch Hill was a grand success. Everything passed off pleasantly, no accidents are reported, and nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the day except a somewhat late return. More than 200 tickets were sold. Other societies were represented, including Silver Street.

Bids for the putting in of the water works are being received by the commissioners, and the contract will probably be let soon. People may expect protection against fire by December 1st. The arrangements are progressing satisfactorily. The contract for the pipe has been placed, also the gates, hydrants and the iron work. The pipe laying will probably be awarded in a day or two. Bids for the collecting well are now being considered. The intention is to complete the works this summer.

Several valuable additions have recently been made to the museum on Flynt Park. Some of the donors and donations are as follows: Miss Candace Gates, a book entitled "Unknown Curiosities," published at St. Paul's churchyard, London, 1650; Otis Packard, "Commission to Joseph Packard from Major Foot of the Council of Massachusetts Bay," bearing date of 1775; Andrew J. Robbins, an Indian tomahawk and an Indian charm, also a bunch of rye of 25 stalks raised from one kernel, 5 feet and one inch high; Mrs. Lucius Peck, two hawks; F. D. Bramble, two hawks; John Coles of Palmer, two crows. Mr. Flynt has about completed a new road, which is a great addition to the park.

These members of Marcus Keep post, 155, attended the Wilbraham soldiers' monument dedication: George M. Severy, Henry E. Bugbee, J. C. Aldrich, Lowell Wilcox, W. M. Fay, Charles A. Abbott, Dr. G. E. Fuller, George A. Harvey, F. N. Wood, Francis Lemon, L. W. Rood, Willard Nelson, A. S. Anderson, F. B. Pease, William A. Rice. The monument, the gift of Mrs. Foskit in memory of her husband, is of Monson granite, furnished by the Monson Granite Company, and would be an ornament to any town. The post speak in the highest praise of their reception. It was the tenth anniversary of the dedication of the Monson monument.

The interscholastic athletic association of Western Massachusetts and the high school association of Connecticut held their first annual joint field day at Springfield Tuesday, and the academy team made a creditable showing in the different events. There were nine teams represented, and the result showed the Monson boys standing third, being led only by the teams from Hartford and New Haven. In the half-mile race Stone of Monson came in second, and Walker was third in the 440-yards dash. In the pole vault event the latter, after an hour's contest, divided first and second points at 9 feet 8½ inches, with Sturtevant of Hartford, while he was third in the running broad jump. The teams from Connecticut scored 91½ points to 21½ for those from Massachusetts, while in the individual school work Hartford scored 72½, New Haven 18, Monson 10. Monson's nearest competitor was Amherst, with a record of 5 points.

WILBRAHAM.

The New Soldiers' Monument.

The soldiers' monument presented to the town by Mrs. Lucia Stebbins Foskit in accordance with the wishes of her husband, the late Dr. S. Foskit of Wilbraham, was dedicated with impressive ceremonies on Wednesday in the presence of a large gathering. The Wilcox Grand Army post of Springfield was present, as were also delegations from L. L. Merrick post of Palmer and Marcus Keep post of Monson. The day's programme opened at 9:30 a. m. when the procession, headed by the Harmony Band of Indian Orchard, marched up the street and back, after which the assembly gathered about the new monument. It was delivered to Wilcox post by Rev. Fayette Nichols and dedicated by the post. On the monument was the inscription: "To the men of Wilbraham who served their country in the war, who preserved the union and destroyed slavery, this monument is erected to perpetuate the memory of their patriotic services, 1861-1865. Erected by Lucia Stebbins in the name of her husband, S. Foskit, M. D., 1894." At the close of the services at the monument the audience proceeded to the Methodist church, where after the monument was accepted by J. Rice for the town, Rev. M. S. Howard gave a brief biographical sketch of the donors of the monument, Dr. and Mrs. Foskit. Dr. Fosket was born in Stafford, Ct., in 1824, and attended school in his native town and at Wilbraham Academy. He taught in the public schools and then completed a course of medicine at Worcester and at Bellevue. In 1854 he moved to Wilbraham, where he died August 20, 1889, at the age of 65. In 1847 he married Lucia Stebbins. As a physician he won the confidence of the community, and he was throughout his life a generous and public-spirited citizen.

Miss Laura Brown, an aged resident of this town, died at her home last Saturday afternoon, after a long illness. She was 78 years old and had always resided in town.

The dwelling house of Mrs. Mary Alberty, formerly owned by Geo. W. Sherman, was completely destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon. The family were all away, and smoke was discovered coming from the house by a man passing about four o'clock. The town was aroused the and door broken in, but none of the furniture could be saved, as the house was filled with fire and smoke. The barn would have gone had not the wind changed just as the shower came up. Loss about $1500.

The trustees of the Hitchcock Free High school have long felt the need of a dormitory or place where out-of-town scholars could secure board at a minimum rate, and after looking over several schemes at a meeting Monday voted to buy the house owned by J. L. Bacon for a boarding house. The price paid is $1800, but Mr. Bacon makes a donation for the school. The house is pleasantly situated at the head of the common, is two stories, and contains eleven rooms. The barn and land are included in the purchase. It is proposed to have the students pay 25 cents a week for their rooms, which they will care for themselves, and the actual cost of board to be divided among those who live there. A lady manager will be put in charge. This arrangement is only temporary, however, as the trustees are planning for a larger dormitory, to be built in the near future by the alumni, toward which about $1000 has already been pledged.

There was a magnificent display of fireworks at Beaver Lake, as the wind-up of a day greatly enjoyed by a large party there on the Fourth. The fireworks were made especially for exhibition on the water, and were more beautiful than anything ever seen in this vicinity.

William Richardson, who appealed from the fine of $50 for illegal liquor selling, at the district court last Friday, has withdrawn the appeal and settled the fine. The Reno boy was committed to the Lyman school for boys at Westfield, and Celina Laduke, the young shop-lifter, was sent to the state primary school at Monson.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucius Barnes, who died Saturday, took place at 2 p. m. Tuesday from her late residence on Prospect street. Rev. Mr. Blodgett of Greenwich conducted the religious service at the house, assisted by Rev. A. B. Bassett. Mrs. Barnes was nearly 80 years old, and was an old resident of Greenwich. A husband and two sons survive her.

The town officers made two liquor raids on Tuesday. Forty bottles of lager and two quarts of whisky were found in a barn on Pine street owned by Frank Kane. The liquors belonged to John Harrison. The other raid was at the place on Aspen street kept by Philip Renaud, and one bottle of whisky and two gallons of lager were found on ice.

Patrick Glancy, who has a farm between Ware and Gilbertville, had his barn and two horses struck by lightning Monday afternoon. When he found the horses one was dead and the other was knocked down, but he was able to get it out doors. It was in a dazed condition, but it is hoped that it will recover. The horses were insured. There was no fire to speak of.

At West Ware Thursday of last week Annie M., daughter of Michael Golden, was married to Stanton P. Fleming of Enfield. Miss Hattie Golden, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and the best man was Charles W. Ransom of New Salem. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Ferguson of Enfield. On Tuesday evening of this week the newly married couple were given a reception in the chapel by the Ladies' Aid Society. Several of the Ware Christian Workers attended.

Rev. A. B. Bassett officiated at the marriage on Thursday morning of William J. Rushmore, principal of the high school, and Miss Sadie L. Newland, a former assistant teacher. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents on Pleasant street, and was witnessed by only immediate relatives of the parties. The couple left for Boston on the 9.38 train, and are to be away about three weeks, visiting in the White Mountains and Canada. On their return they are to make their home with Mrs. Rushmore's parents.

Of the fifteen who graduated from the Ware high school six are to enter higher educational institutions. Miss Ruth E. Tucker and Miss Helen A. Bond are to enter Smith college; Frank M. Carroll will enter the Boston University; William J. Collins is to enter the Harvard Medical School; Miss Clara L. Sturtevant Mount Holyoke Seminary; and Miss Mary J. McManus is to go to the Westfield Normal School; Henry C. Davis, Jr., is to enter the law office of his father for the present, and enter college next year. The others have not all fully decided on their course in life, but they all have the best wishes of their hosts of friends.

Last Saturday the annual reunion of the Geo. H. Gilbert Mfg. Co's. employes of Ware and Gilbertville was held at King's Grove Hardwick Pond. The 100-yards dash was won by John Lyons, prize, shaving set; 25-yard potato race, Hugh Montgomery, prize, pocket knife; hop, skip and jump, C. A. Burrows, prize, jointed fishing rod. The game of ball between the Ware and Gilbertville players was won by the Ware people, score 22 to 9. All report a very enjoyable afternoon.

One of the most enjoyable parties on the Fourth was the reunion of the relatives of David Barlow, who spent the most of his life on the farm near the old meeting house at Ragged Hill. The party was given by the Lincoln brothers of West Brookfield in honor of Mrs. Laura D. Bush, a daughter of Mr. Barlow, and her daughter from Exira, Iowa, who are on a visit East. David L. Barlow and wife, and C. W. Eddy, wife and grandsons of Ware were present. A bountiful collation was spread, the tables being under tents erected on the lawn. After this there were remarks made by several present, including Rev. Mr. Frink of the Congregational church, West Brookfield. Some fine photographs of the tables, with Mrs. Bush and daughter in the foreground, and also of 37 of the party, were secured by C. W. Eddy.

Look Around

and see the women who are using Pearline. It's easy to pick them out. They're brighter, fresher, more cheerful than the women who have spent twice as much time in the rub, rub, rub, of the old way. Why shouldn't they be? Washing with Pearline is easy.

And look at the clothes that are washed with Pearline. They're brighter, and fresher, too. They haven't been rubbed to pieces on the washboard. They may be old, but they don't show it. For clothes washed with Pearline last longer.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as," or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 287 JAMES PYLE, New York

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I could my own work. On my recommendation [illegible] are taking this valuable remedy." —— Morgan, 509 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

Bill let him have it with the left,
Between the eyes it landed,
An' bruskly sent him off to sleep
Severely reprimanded.

Stan' clear! squar' off! the friends of both
Sailed in to join the tussle,
No guns or knives as Dagos use,
But good American muscle—
Off blouse an' at it! knuckles bare,
As hard as we were able,
With here an' there, p'raps, a chair,
An' here an' there a table.

Hoop la! hoorah! but, darn it all!
The middle of our fun in—
"Turn out the guard!" an', double time,
Some officers came runnin',
But when they reached us—presto! change!
The room was quiet an' airy,
As c'er a proper, well-behaved,
Young ladies seminary.

Magee an' Jones were sound asleep,
Their noses smashed an' bloody;
Delancey, with a broken thumb,
Was deep in tactics' study;
To challenge 'em with doin' wrong
Would be a cruel libel,
While Sheehan hummed a baby-song,
An' Wilson read the Bible.

We bluffed; but, somehow, 'twouldn't work,
The Cap'n wouldn't take it,
An' to the guard-house half of us
Went scootin' like a rocket;
Court martialed? Naw! the Kernel he
Was such as you'd delight in,
"Ch, d—— it!" says he; "let 'em be,
A sojer's trade is fightin'."—Will Stokes, G. o' the Fust," in Army and Navy Journal.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

There is not the least mystery about Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol. The proprietors are perfectly willing to tell what it is made of. First, the oil, of course. Then

Ozone,

a very active form of Oxygen,

full of healthful, healing properties, and finally Guaiacol or purified creosote, made from the resin of beechwood. United in a compound pleasant to take and certain to be retained on the stomach, these three foes to disease cure consumption.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 1126 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among medical supplies what is known as non-secret proprietaries, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A Snowy Evening.

As one with shuddering hand draws silently
The covering upon a dead, calm face,
A calm, still face whereon no longer we
The latest stamp of life's long pain can trace;
So Heaven with a chill white pall doth hide
This saddened earth on whose broad mother-breast
Her earliest children, pale and sickly eyed,
Droop pantingly, by lips of mourning pressed.
The spent day, lying like a wounded man, ——
Draws his last labored breath, and sullen night
Most roughly thrusts him from the helm, his span
Of life run out, unblest by one delight.
Alas! poor Day, poor Earth! my heart, alas!
So like to both. Yet though therein were born
Frail buds of youth and hope, to fade and pass,
May there not break for them a gladder morn?"

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

In the northern part of Austin there once dwelt an honest, and therefore a poor, family by the name of Smothers. The family consisted of John Smothers, his wife, himself, their little daughter five years of age, and her parents, making six people toward the population of the city when counted for a special write-up of Austin, but only three by actual count.

One night after supper the little girl was seized with a severe colic, and John Smothers hurried down-town to get some medicine. He never came back.

The little girl recovered and in time grew up to womanhood.

Her mother grieved very much over her husband's disappearance, and it was nearly three months before she married again, and moved to San Antonio.

The little girl also married in time, and after about four years and a half had rolled around, she also had a little girl five years of age.

She still lived in the same house where they dwelt when her father had left and never returned.

One night by a remarkable coincidence her little girl was taken with cramp colic on the anniversary of the disappearance of John Smothers, who would now have been her grandfather if he had been alive and had a steady job.

"I will go down town and get some medicine for her," said John Smith (for it was none other than he whom she had married.)

"No, no, dear John!" cried his wife. "You, too, might disappear forever, and then forget to come back."

So John Smith did not go, and together they sat by the bedside of little Pansy (for that was Pansy's name.)

After a little Pansy seemed to grow worse, and John Smith again attempted to go for medicine, but his wife would not let him.

Suddenly the door opened and an old man, stooped and bent, with long white hair, entered the room.

"Hello, here is grandpa," said Pansy. She had recognized him before any of the others.

The old man drew a bottle of medicine from his pocket and gave Pansy a spoonful. She got well immediately.

"I was a little late," said John Smothers, "as I waited for a street car."—Austin (Tex.) Rolling Stone.

THE LAW OF FINDING.

The law of finding, says a writer, is this: The finder has a clear title against the world, except the owner. The proprietor of a coach, or a railroad car, or a ship, has no right to demand the property on a premise. Such proprietors may make regulations in regard to lost property which will bind their employes, but they cannot bind the public. The law of finding was declared by the King's bench 100 years ago, in a case in which the facts are these: A person found a wallet containing a sum of money on a shop floor. He handed the wallet and contents to the shopkeeper to be returned to the owner. After three years, during which the owner did not call for his property, the finder demanded the wallet and money from the shopkeeper. The latter refused to deliver them, upon the ground that they were found on his premises. The former then sued the shopkeeper, and it was held, as above set forth, that, against all the world but the owner, the title of the finder is perfect, and the finder has been held to stand in the place of the owner, so that he was permitted to prevail in an action against a person who found an article which the plaintiff had originally found, but subsequently lost. The police have no special rights in regard to articles lost, unless those rights are conferred by statute. Receivers of articles stolen are trustees for that owner or finder. They have no power in the absence of special statute to keep an article against the finder, any more than a finder has to retain an article against the owner.—New England Grocer.

A FEW EYE DON'TS.

Don't allow a cold wind to strike the eyes.

Don't try to do eye work with the light shining in the face.

Don't have colored shades on the lamps; use white or ground glass.

Don't go directly from a warm room into a cold, raw atmosphere.

Don't open the eyes under water in bathing, especially in salt water.

Don't let any strong light, like that from electricity, shine directly into the eyes.

Don't strain the eyes by reading, or any like occupation, with an imperfect light.

Don't bathe inflamed eyes with cold water; that which is as warm as it can be borne is better.

Don't sleep opposite a window in such manner that a strong light will strike the eyes on awakening.

Don't, above all, have the children sleep so that the morning sun shall shine in their faces to arouse them.

Don't expect to get another pair of eyes when these have been destroyed by neglect or ill-use; but give them fair treatment, and they will serve faithfully to the end.

A Conscientious Nurse: Doctor—"Did you give him that opiate I prescribed?" Patient Wife.—"Every two hours, doctor. It was hard work to wake him up to take the medicine, though.—Tit-Bits.

Crimsonbeak.—"Don't you see that very red spot over there?" Bacon. "You evidently can't see any farther than your nose."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house, and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at the stores of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c. and $1.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in health and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Twenty years ago, pills, lotions and the surgeon's knife were the only resource in the treatment of disease. Science had not yet turned her full light on to the problems of life. She had not shown that foods are more valuable than drugs, when things are not running just right in that complicated piece of mechanism known as the human body.

To-day, one may almost say that the higher the standing of a physician in his profession, the less medicine he employs. He has found that due attention to diet will accomplish more than the pills and potions of his forefathers.

Paskola is a step forward in the line of foods specially designed for the cure of dyspepsia and other dieases which are directly tracable to some derangement of the digestive organs. Its novelty lies in the fact that it is artificially digested. In other words, it has been prepared for immediate absorption without requiring work of the poor, tired stomach that needs rest.

Further than this, it contains principles which are active in the digestion of other foods. Therefore it at once nourishes and at the same time relieves the disagreeable symptoms which are the chronic dyspeptic's every day lot.

Read the following statement of one who has used it with success:

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 21, 1894.

Gentlemen:—The bottle of Paskola received a week ago to-day and I immediately commenced the use of it, in connection with Poland water. I am feeling very much better and have increased 13¾ pounds. During the eight days' use of Paskola, no eructions of gas, in fact, seeming perfect digestion. If this condition continues, I shall be a devotee of Paskola and will prescribe it when indicated to my patients.

Sincerely yours, E. M. MANWAREN, M. D.

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable retail druggist and a pamphlet fully descriptive will be mailed upon application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

IN PRIVATE PRACTICE.

Such strong proofs of the marvelous cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice lately, through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingrahm, of Amsterdam, N. Y., states, where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks, of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease, ulceration of the stomach, complicated with sickness peculiar to her sex; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood, in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed. Druggists sell it.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST—THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

Unexpected Joys.

Scattered over glade and dingle,
Freshly bathed in balmy showers,
Where the lights and shadows mingle,
Children find the wildwood flowers.

Roots, that careful hands have planted,
May not feel the sun and air;
Though we watch, by hope enchanted,
Still our garden soul is bare.

Yet the ivy fetters lightly
Rugged tree and ruined wall;
And upon the wayside brightly
Snows of scented hawthorn fall.

Ferns and vines and morning glory,
Daisies on the velvet sod,
Tell the world's unwritten story;
Silent witnesses of God.

In our life's deserted places
Flowers, by human hands unsown,
Blossom with a thousand graces,
Making every spot their own.

Unexpected joys are springing
In the paths we feared to tread;
Love with tender fibres clinging,
Clasps the hope we counted dead.

Gifts, for which we have not striven
On our darkest hours descend;
Blessings, by a Father given,
Strew the pathway to the end.

AN ADOPTED DAUGHTER.

The wild March sunset leaned, in piles of stormy orange-gold, above the dim horizon lines; the copses of water-willows that hedged in the quiet murmur of the valley stream were beginning to toss their plumes of faint, misty green in the strong spring gales; while every sunny nook and sheltered slope was outlined with wild violets. The strange, sweet essence of spring was floating in every breath of air; Juliet Maine felt it growing in her cheek and sparkling in her eye, as she leaned over the low stone wall at the foot of the garden, where leaf-buds of the clambering honeysuckle were just bursting their brown sheaths, and emerald spears of daffodil shot up in tiny clusters along the box-edged walk.

She made a pretty picture in the amber sunset brightness, with the dark blue shawl drawn over her yellow hair, and large, melting eyes, whose violet light shone through long brown lashes, shaded with gold. She had small, regular features, round cheeks, flushed with waxen bloom, and a tiny mouth, like a wild strawberry in its shape and color; and through all this sweet, winning beauty there was a look of child-like innocence that was sweetest, most winning, of all.

"Juliet!"

How she started, the fair-haired hypocrite! As if she had not seen the parted branches of the hedge, and heard the coming footsteps! What else had brought the sea-shell pink to her cheek in carmine waves of color?

"Ralph! how you frighten me."

"Did I?"

He played hesitatingly with the tangled honeysuckle sprays, as if anxious yet afraid to speak.

"I am glad you were alone down here, Juliet—I wanted to speak to you; I have wished it for a long time."

She shivered, the little coquette! and drew a little back as the March gales came sweeping by.

"I must go to the house," she said; "it is getting cold."

"Juliet!" he exclaimed, almost passionately, will you not listen to me a moment? This is perhaps the last opportunity I may have to tell you what lies closest to my heart, and you turn away as coolly as if you did not care whether I spoke or not."

"Dear me," said Juliet, lifting her delicate eyebrows, "why should I care? How can it possibly concern me?"

Ralph Esmond's brow grew very dark. Juliet Maine saw the coming shadow through her downcast, golden lashes, and was a little frightened at the result of her bit of coquetry.

"Then it matters nothing to you whether I speak or am silent?" he asked, bitterly, letting fall the warm, soft hand he had taken.

Oh, if Juliet had but given utterance to the tender throbbings of her nature—if she had but cast aside that inclination to sport with the heart that she believed was all her own!

"Of course not," she said petulantly tossing back the stray ringlets that the March wind had blown over her forehead. "What should it matter? Take care, Ralph—you are breaking my honeysuckles to pieces!"

"Very well—that's all I wanted to know."

Ralph Esmond walked quietly away, his figure darkly outlined against the glowing gold of the western sky, and Juliet watched him with a lonely, bewildered feeling at her heart which she could scarcely define.

"I wish I hadn't been so willful," she murmured to herself. "I don't know what roguish spirit possesses me sometimes to be so naughty. Oh dear! But then he will come back to-morrow, or perhaps even to-night, and then I can tell him—"

Juliet Maine did not finish the sentence; she wrapped herself in the blue shawl, and went slowly up to the old farm-house porch very much discontented with herself.

The gold and scarlet sky had saddened into a concave of star-strewn violet—the greening willows leaned, black, colorless masses, over the sluggish stream. Juliet could see their dim shapes as she stood by the window in the keeping-room, whose low walls were reddened with the burning hickory logs upon the hearth. She started nervously as a dark shadow came swiftly up the path, and a sudden pulse of crimson blood darted through all her veins. Was it—could it be—

No—it was a slender woman's figure; and Juliet sank down, dispirited, on the broad chintz-covered lounge in the window seat.

"May I come in, Juliet?"

"Is it you, Fanny Walter? Yes—come in."

A slight, trim little creature glided in like a shadow—black-haired and pale, with intensely black eyes and a pretty infantile face like a magnified wax doll. Juliet had never liked the pale orphan who gave music lessons to all the musically inclined of the village; perhaps it was because she was magnetically conscious of the antipathy that Fanny felt towards the lovely heiress. Almost any guest would have been more welcome at that moment—yet Juliet rose and instinctively moved forward a chair.

"Let me sit by you, Juliet," purred Fanny, softly sinking down on the lounge beside her companion. "I have such a secret to tell you."

"A secret," repeated Juliet, rather coldly.

"Yes." Fanny was playing with the soft, nerveless fingers of Juliet's hand. "I am engaged to be married!"

"Are you?"

Fanny's eyes flashed—she would rouse Miss Maine from this apathetic indifference, or she would know the reason why.

"Oh, Juliet, I am so happy! Ralph Esmond has asked me to be his wife."

"Ralph Esmond!"

She was roused now, pretty decidedly—she sprang up, with dilated eyes and quivering lips.

"Did you say Ralph Esmond?"

"Yes—it was just now, when I met him on the village bridge. We were walking along and talking, now of one thing, now of another, and I was telling him how sorry I felt that he was going away, and all of a sudden he asked me did I care for him enough to marry him. And——"

Juliet heard nothing farther. Fanny Walter's words were to her no more than the idle murmur of the wind among the trees. She leaned her head on the back of the old lounge, thankful for the darkness that concealed her ashen face and white lips, and knowing only that her heart was sorely, sorely wounded.

So died away the sweetest hope of her young life—and this was the reason that Juliet Maine, the prettiest girl in Saybrook, settled down into a soft-eyed, quiet old maid.

"Are you busy, Juliet? Gracious me, how bright and warm it looks in here after the cold air outside! Folks are sayin' its the bitterest winter we've had this twelve year!"

"Sit down, Mrs. Drifter," said Juliet, gently. She was weaving long trails of princess pins and polished laurel leaves with sprigs of scarlet-berried holly for Christmas garlands to deck the village church—a deft-fingered, lovely woman, whose pale cheek caught something of the rosy glow of the holly-berries upon the table as she worked.

"No, I can't stay. And, Juliet, put on your cloak, child—I want you."

"Want me? for what?"

"Do you remember Fanny Walter? she that married Ralph Esmond, who was lost at sea years ago?"

"I remember."

Juliet had dropped the princess-pine, and stood looking at Mrs. Drifter with a colorless check.

"Well, she is at the Star Inn lying dead."

"Dead?"

"She came day before yesterday in the stage, dying. How she ever contrived to drag herself here I don't know,—but she did it. She has been delirious ever since her arrival, and died this morning, leaving no money or effects of any kind. But such a pretty little girl, Juliet, sobbing over her mother's dead face, poor helpless thing! So I want you to come round and help with the poor corpse. I told Landlord Sims, says I, Juliet Maine will come—she's always ready to aid them that wants it. Don't be long, dear—there's nobody with the dead woman but her little wailing child."

Juliet wrapped herself up, in breathless silence—it seemed as if honest Mrs. Drifter must hear the loud beating of her heart. Fanny dead; the wife of Ralph Esmond dependent on her for the last sad offices that earthly charity can give!

There was a low, sullen fire smouldering on the hearth of the cheerless "best chamber" of the village inn. The windows of the room looking out on the church-yard, were veiled with cold white muslin that surged to and fro in the draughts from a score of yawning crevices in the shrunken wood-work, and on a stiff-looking high-post bedstead lay the dead woman, her hair blacker than ever against the colorless marble of her cheeks, and her sunken eyes veiled forever with the white heavy lids.

"Go away from my mamma—you shall not touch her!"

A pale, elfin-like little creature, looking at Juliet from Ralph Esmond's very eyes, darted from the heavy bed-curtain, as the two women approached, with tear-stained cheeks and wild, defiant face. But as the soft eyed girl opened her arms instinctively, Ralph Esmond's child ran to her and buried her hot brow on the tender shoulder.

"Gracious me!" ejaculated Mrs. Drifter. "How did you ever coax her to you, Juliet? Mrs. Sims tried for an hour this morning and she wouldn't come near her."

"Poor little thing—poor motherless, fatherless babe!" murmured Juliet, with a voice softer than the coo of any dove, as she passed her hand caressingly over the child's tangled, raven-black hair.

"Yes!" said Mrs. Drifter, hanging her bonnet on the bed-post and folding her shawl neatly, "she is kind o' frail and sickly looking—it's 'most a pity she'll have to go to the workhouse."

"To the workhouse!" exclaimed Juliet, looking up in surprise and horror.

"Why, to be sure—where else should she go? This poor creetur," with a sharp inclination of her head towards the corpse, "haint left a cent to bring her up with."

"I won't go to the workhouse! I'll die first!" ejaculated the little creature, suddenly raising her pale, haughty face from Juliet's shoulder. "I'll run away!"

And then, bursting into a fresh shower of tears, she wailed out:

"Oh, don't let them take me to the workhouse. Let me stay with my mamma."

Juliet bent over the little sobbing creature with a strange, yearning thrill. Was it meet or right that Ralph Esmond's orphan child should be abandoned to the cold charities of a village workhouse?

She told the pathetic little story to her father that evening, in the firelight of the old keeping-room, with her cheek lying on the arm of his chair, and her golden eyelashes wet with tears.

"Papa," she said, softly, "I have almost made up my mind—that is, if you have no objection——"

"Well, daughter?"

"It seems so cruel to let that little one go to the workhouse, and—Ralph and Fanny were so prosperous once—and I would so much like to adopt the child!"

Mr. Maine turned his keen eyes on his daughter's fair, serene face.

"Do you know what the world would say, Juliet? It would say it was for Ralph Esmond's sake that you took this orphan girl!"

"I do not care what the world says or thinks," said Juliet, coloring, nevertheless. "Why should I heed its criticisms, while my own heart yields its approval of what I do. God has prospered me all my life long, papa; should I refuse to succor one whose infant helplessness calls to me for aid?"

"That's right, my girl!" said the old man heartily. "Do as you like; you never did a wrong thing yet, my little Juliet!"

She shrank involuntarily from her father's fond words of praise—the old wound had not healed yet!

When they buried Fanny Esmond in the frozen dreariness of the lonely churchyard, Juliet Maine took little Mary to her own home; a life-charge to whom she was contented, thenceforth, to devote the whole earnestness of her solitary, loveless life!

It was just a year from the events thus narrated that Mrs. Peckham, who kept a shabby, second rate New York boarding-house, was electrified by the apparition of a tall, distinguished looking gentleman, who inquired eagerly after a woman and child, whom he had somehow managed to trace to her house.

"Dear me, now!" ejaculated Mrs. Peckham, settling her cap with one hand, while with the other she twitched off a dirty, checked apron. "To think that anybody should be inquiring after poor Mrs. Esmond—and she dead and buried!"

"Dead and buried!"

The stranger leaned back against the door-post, pale and trembling.

"Yes, to be sure. She would go back to her home, she called it—a little place somewhere to the east'ards—when she wasn't fit to travel, poor dear—and when next I heerd, they was dead, poor things; and the landlord of the tavern they stopped at was a writin' to me to know did they leave any money? So I writ back. No—and that was the end on't. But I dessay I could inquire more particular if you wished it, sir."

No—Ralph Esmond cared to know no more. Both dead! Ah! better that he had died too, and been buried among the feathery palms and bending cactus thickets of the lonely, lovely island, from whose shores he had watched so long for the white gleam of homeward bound sails! He went down the narrow, dirty stairs, with dizzy, bewildered brain, and walked, almost unconsciously, towards the railroad station, whose iron veins stretched far away into the peaceful heart of country solitudes.

"Aunt Juliet," said Mary Esmond, coming into the cheerful room where her gentle protectress sat at work, "I went to put that wreath of holly leaves on mamma's grave—but——"

"Why did you bring it back, dear?"

"I was afraid, aunt Juliet."

"Afraid, little Mary?"

"There was a strange man there—leaning against the wall, and looking so wild. And I just peeped through the gate once, and then ran away!"

Juliet laid down her work and looked fixedly at the child.

"Some stranger visiting the churchyard, dear. Come, I will go with you this time."

She took Mary's hand in hers, and walked along the hard, frozen pathway, carrying the simple garland, while the child skipped merrily at her side.

"He is gone now!" said Mary, slipping over the gray wall like a squirrel, and holding the gate wide open for Juliet to pass through. "I'm not afraid any longer."

The churchyard was solitary and deserted; the long shadows of the tombstones stretched blackly between the golden bars of light that trembled along the frozen ground—and Juliet Maine did not know how near she had come to a meeting with the man whom in her secret heart she loved more truly and tenderly than ever.

"But you will come with me, Esmond! The idea of a man of your station and wealth burying himself alive, like a hermit of the middle ages!"

"My wealth!" repeated Mr. Esmond almost savagely; "what good can it do me now?"

"But come with me!" persisted Mr. Auburne, urgently. "You'll enjoy it, I'm sure!"

"No—I shall not enjoy it," returned Esmond. "However, I will go with you, if you desire it so much—it can make but little difference to me."

He lounged through the pleasant social throngs of the soiree like a discontented spirit, meeting all attempts at conversation with a brief "Yes," or "No," that was enough to discourage the most talkative nature. It was not until a crowd pushed by him towards the music-room, and some one exclaimed, "Come Donaldson, Miss Esmond is going to sing," that he started into something like interest.

"Miss Esmond—the name is not so common that one meets it everywhere! Who is Miss Esmond?"

Fortunately he was tall enough to look over people's heads, in the direction of the piano, where a lovely, dark-eyed little fairy, scarcely more than sixteen, was just taking her seat. There was something in the bright face, turned for a moment in his direction, that made the blood stand still in his veins. He caught at the arm of a gentleman near:

"Hartley—for Heavens sake tell me who that girl is?"

Mr. Hartley turned, in surprise:

"Mary Esmond—by the way, she is a namesake of yours, isn't she? but, of course, she can be no relation. She is Miss Juliet Maine's adopted daughter."

Esmond's throat grew dry and husky as he tried to speak distinctly:

"Miss Maine—she used to be an acquaintance of mine; is she here to-night?"

"Yes—don't you see her by the window, yonder? She is spending the winter here, with her pretty protege."

Ralph Esmond's heart fluttered with a sensation that had long been strange to him as he looked at the sweet, serious face with the amber hair and golden lashes that shaded eyes whose violet light was as radiant as of yore!

"Juliet!"

Miss Maine started with a wild, half-suppressed cry—had the dead indeed risen?

"Juliet, do not be frightened—it is I, not my ghost! Why, child, how you tremble!"

She did not tremble now—she looked at him, with glad, almost incredulous eyes.

"Tell me who that girl is, Juliet—that Mary Esmond. Surely she is not——"

"She is your daughter, Ralph Esmond."

"But my daughter lies buried in Saybrook church-yard, in her mother's coffin."

"No, Ralph—she is alive, and sits yonder at the piano."

He clasped his hands together, while a bright look crept into his dark face—a look of intense happiness—of fearful joy.

"You are my good angel, Juliet!" he exclaimed; "the bearer of good tidings. Tell me how it happened, Juliet—make me believe it is not only the phantasies of a feverish dream."

And she told him all—of the dreary inn chamber with its cold swaying curtains and the child sobbing beside the dead woman; of Mrs. Drifter's suggestions of the workhouse, and little Mary's horror at the mere mention of the place, and then, in the fewest words of all, she told him how she had taken the forlorn little one to her own heart and home. Ralph Esmond listened with deep, absorbed interest; then he rose.

"Juliet," he said in stifled accents, "I cannot find words to thank you for this thing. Perhaps the time may come——"

He stopped abruptly, but in a moment resumed:

"I cannot meet my child here, Juliet, I will come to-morrow, and then——"

He held Juliet's hand in his a moment, and then was gone, before Mary Esmond had found her way back to her adopted mother.

The March violets were carpeting the hillsides once again, and the willows tossed their pallid green clouds in the soft south wind, when Ralph Esmond came once more to the solitary grave in Saybrook churchyard, this time with his dark-eyed daughter leaning on his arm. And that evening, standing by the garden wall, netted over by rank-growing honeysuckle, Juliet Maine felt a soft touch on her hand. She did not look up, but she knew who was by her side, by some inner instinct deeper far than reason.

"Juliet," said Ralph, softly, "do you remember how we stood here, eighteen years ago, in such a bright spring sunset?"

"I remember it, Ralph."

"I tried to tell you something then, dearest, but you would not listen. I have carried it, unspoken, in my breast all these years—may I speak it now? May I tell you how much dearer you are to me in the serene beauty of your maturer than in the brightness of your maiden bloom, my true-souled Juliet?"

They are quietly happy now, those old lovers—and Mary Esmond calls the best friend of her orphaned youth by the sweet name of "Mother."—Amy Randolph.

"Talking about the utilization of force," said Bunting, "I saw something last summer which beats anything I ever heard of before." "What was it?" asked Larkin. "You know how a cow works her jaws in chewing her cud?" "Yes." "Well, an old farmer had an arrangement fixed to his cows so that the cud-chewing motion was made to churn the cow's butter."

A Holiday Hint.

Slip your work and take a day off
Where the meadow daisies grow;
Get your rod an' wander 'way off
Where the rippled rivers flow!
Birds are singin'—
Skies are blue;
An' them skies—
They bend for you!

What's the use o' all the hurry?
What's the use o' all the strife?
Better spice your daily worry
With the sweeter things o' life!
Winds are blowin'
Violets blue;
An' them violets
Bloom for you!

SAVED BY AUNT SOPHIA.

The first colored woman officially appointed in the service of the United States Government is Sophia Holmes, janitress of the United States Treasury.

When asked, "How old are you, Sophia?" the whites of as honest eyes as ever faced the sun lifted slowly. She seemed peering through the midst of years.

"I don't know, honey. I wouldn't like to say. You know in them days we're like cattle. The keeps no record of the black folks."

Through thirty-two years from the subterranean corridors of the Treasury building the old janitress has witnessed the rise and fall of nine administrations. Hers was a life appointment, and it was the reward of honesty. Sophia was born in Washington. Her father was a body guard to General Mason, of Georgetown. "I am not all black blood," said Sophia, coyly. At sixteen she married a slave, whom Colonel Seaton, the noted abolitionist, bought to save him from being sold out of the dirtrict. The price of her husband was $1000.

Holmes became a confidential servant in Colonel Seaton's household. His wages were $22.50 a month and clothing. This money he had put to his credit to purchase his freedom, and it was doubled monthly by Sophia from her earnings as laundress.

"They paid laundresses good prices in them days," said Sophia. "There were the body-washing and there were the house washing. The rich Southern families gave me both. It mounted right smart. We was paid by the month. Often it ran as high as $40 or $45 with soap and starch and wood furnished by the families. I wore a path, honey, from my cabin to Colonel Seaton's house," said the old negress in dulcet tones, "where I paid in the wash money for my husband's freedom. I sang plantation songs in concerts at Washington and New York and the money went to the freedom fund."

The pair had paid $600 when the war broke out. Sophia's husband went as body servant to Captain Burns of the Fourth Marine Regiment. In the first battle of Bull Run Captain Burns, was shot from his horse. Arming himself with his master's rifle, Holmes mounted and led the column. The black man's body was riddled with bullets, and after eight weeks in the hospital he died, leaving Sophia with two children to support.

Her story interested such men as Senator Wilson, James G. Blaine and Lincoln's Cabinet. General Spinner came to the rescue by employing her odd days as scrub-woman at the Treasury. There were ninety women dubbed "Uncle Sammy's Scrub Brigade."

It was while thus at work that Sophia entered upon her official career. It came about in this way:

The sheets of bank notes were then cut by shares, and a certain night found the floors of the counting-room covered with shavings. In sweeping that evening Sophia discovered a box packed with bank notes that had been overlooked in locking up the vaults at the close of the day's count.

With fear and trembling, when she saw what it contained, Sophia covered the box and pushed it out of sight. "I keeps on sweeping right along; all the while I keep on thinking," said Sophia, swaying in her rocker as she told me the story. "The night watch he passed to and fro—to and fro. I's going to call him, but something kept saying, Sophia, don't you do it! You's a poor black woman! He may take the bank notes and say you stole 'em!"

"After a while he stopped at the door. 'You take a powerful time a cleaning up to-night, Mrs. Holmes,' says he, pleasantlike. 'You work yourself too much,' 'Thank you, sir,' said I. 'I likes to keep things nice.'"

When the watchman's steps once more died down the corridor, Sophia tremblingly examined the box. There were packs of two, five, ten, fifty and hundred-dollar notes. Darkness filled the Treasury. She thought of her children waiting their supper at home. She still busied herself mechanically with her broom.

"I prayed the good Lord to direct and protect me."

She guarded the bank notes until two o'clock in the morning, when she heard the familiar shuffling steps of General Spinner, the United States Treasurer.

When she heard the door close, Sophia made her way thither and knocked.

"My good woman," cried the gruff old soldier, "what are you doing here? It's two o'clock in the morning."

"Oh, come with me, general," answered Sophia. "There's a box of money in the counting-room."

General Spinner had a dream that night that something was wrong at the Treasury, and, restless and disturbed, he had at last come down to the building.

He and Sophia carried the box to his office. All of the officials of the department were summoned from their homes. Sophia was kept prisoner until the money was counted. Then she was sent home in General Spinner's carriage to her children who had been cared for by the neighbors. The box contained $180,000.

By similar finds and honest surveillance the old black janitress had saved the Government half a million dollars.

"Weren't you tempted to take a little pack—say of the $2.00 notes?" I asked.

"No," was the emphatic response. "It never entered my head to take what wasn't mine; I guess I has the natural faith in the Lord. I'd rather leave my children the legacy of a white soul than all the gold and bank notes the United States

A party of Palmer sporting men will pay a visit to Crystal Lake Sunday.

A few wheelmen took a ride Sunday to Springfield, returning the same day.

Charles G. Gardner has purchased a saddle horse, and is taking equestrian exercise daily.

The Eastern Hampden Medical Association met at the Converse House yesterday afternoon.

Mass will be celebrated in St. Thomas's church at 11 a. m. next Sunday, instead of 10.30, the usual hour.

The Rogers Osgood Hat Co. are running their machine shop, getting things in readiness for the fall work.

District Attorney C. L. Gardner has been attending the criminal term of the superior court at Pittsfield this week.

The exterior wood and iron work of the Nassowanno House block has been touched up by the painters this week.

About 30 attended the picnic of the People's Church of Christ held at Nine Mile Pond near Wilbraham, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hopkins were called to Meriden, Ct., Wednesday, by the death of Mr. Hopkins's brother-in-law.

William Saunders has recently purchased of S. S. Taft a strip of land adjoining his property on the hill east of the village.

The Methodist Sunday school of West Warren will picnic at Forest Lake to-morrow. There will be about 100 in the party.

Revere Chapter, O. E. S., will hold no meetings during July and August. The Grand Matron will make an official visit Sept. 14th.

A vender of birds did a fair business at the head of Commercial street Saturday, the prices ranging from $1.25 for a canary to $10 for a parrot.

District Deputy Grand Master C. E. Fuller and suite went to Ware Tuesday night and installed the officers of the Ware lodge of Odd Fellows.

Nineteen tickets were sold at the union station here to parties on their way to attend the Y. P. S. C. E. convention at Cleveland, O., this week.

E. A. Buck & Co. have nearly finished moving into their new store in Cross's block. The new store is the largest in town, and is now open for business.

The Palmer Bicycle Club claims that it does not sanction Sunday runs, and if any bicyclists went to Hampden last Sunday they went as individuals and not as a club.

Dr. S. L. Millard of Boston, who is introducing the local anæsthetic "Methyl" for the painless extraction of teeth, will be at the Converse House next Wednesday and Thursday.

Beginning with next Sunday there will be but one evening service at the Baptist church for the present,—the young people's meeting, at 6 o'clock, at which all will be welcome, both old and young.

Thomas Blanchard has received a fancy offer for his trotting mare, "Caddie Stout," but has not yet decided to sell her. Mr. Blanchard has had very good success on the turf so far this season.

The Central Massachusetts Electric Company has commenced the work of extending its lines to Warren. The officers of the company do not speak very hopefully of the electric street cars, however.

W. S. Trickett, employed by E. A. Buck & Co., who has been contemplating removal to Three Rivers to enter the employment of the Palmer Mill, has decided to remain in his old position for the present.

Rev. S. T. Frost preached in the Congregational church last Sunday morning, and in the evening gave a talk on the situation in Chicago. Rev. Mr. Haile occupied the pulpit at St. Paul's Universalist church.

Mrs. William Kurtz was baptized in the river Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hezekiah Davis of New Britain, who preached in the People's church, and was watched by about 200 people.

G. W. Lyman has the contract for building a stable and carriage house for E. H. Truesdell and a barn for J. H. Davis. He has also just finished a piazza on the front and west side of the residence of W. H. Hitchcock on Squier street.

The engine on the boat train going north Monday morning broke down at Stafford Springs, and the engine used in the yard was sent down to haul the train in, which was about one-half hour late in consequence of the accident.

C. W. Johnson has postponed his trip west until the strike has been settled in such a manner that there is some hope of getting through on trains. He will take in the races on the western circuit, and may attend the races at Louisville.

The time limit for licensing dogs has expired, and there will be about 80 of the canines in the town that are still unlicensed. The owners have been duly notified and in a few days the matter will be turned over to the town constable.

It has been suggested that Palmer merchants unite in an excursion some day this season, as is the annual custom in Monson. Those interested in the plan will make a canvass of the business people soon and the result will be announced.

Some of Palmer's business men and representatives of the law gave an athletic exhibition on Main street yesterday morning. The number of spectators was small, but the lively interest manifested by them was sufficient to repay the contestants.

Mrs. Maria Hatch, who has kept a boarding house and restaurant in Palmer for some years, lately in Cross's block, has closed out her business here, and will soon open a boarding and lodging house on the corner of Main and Park streets, Springfield.

The Young People's Union of the Baptist church was reorganized at a meeting held last Friday evening. The old constitution was adopted, Arthur Wells was elected president, and the remaining officers will be chosen at a meeting to be held this evening.

E. B. Taylor gave a reception to his Sunday school class and the choir of the Baptist church Tuesday evening, after rehearsal. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake and lemonade were served, games indulged in, and a good time generally was enjoyed by all.

The second annual pastoral sermon delivered by Rev. H. F. Moulton has been printed. It deals with the duties of a people to their minister, and the duties of a minister to his people. Copies of the sermon can be secured of the pastoral committee of St. Paul's church.

The friends of Dr. H. M. Auger are making an effort to have him locate in this village. Dr. Auger has recently returned from New York, where he has been taking a year's post-graduate course in one of the medical colleges of that city. He was formerly located in Bondsville.

A Palmer young lady who a short time ago said she considered it the "height of folly" for one of her sex to ride a wheel, has since overcome her scruples and is now the happy possessor of one, which she has named "Folly," while another young miss has styled her's "Delight."

Charles Burns and William Webster, conductor and engineer of the wrecking train on the New London Northern road, which collided with the freight train near Stafford last Thursday night, have been laid off for 30 days. The conductor and engineer of the freight tran are suffering the same puishment.

The members of the Universalist Sunday school and their friends who wished to attend the picnic at Monson yesterday were very much annoyed by the shower in the morning. The picnic was not given up, however, and about 80 joined the Springfield party at this station, going by special train to Monson.

Persons contemplating visiting Vermont this summer should drop a postal to S. W. Cummings, general passenger agent of the Central Vermont Railroad at St. Albans, Vt., and in return they will receive a nicely illustrated book, descriptive of the scenery in different parts of the state and containing other useful information.

The stockholders of the Rogers Osgood Hat Co. elected these officers at their annual meeting Wednesday afternoon: Clerk, C. B. Fiske; treasurer, Jesse A. Rogers; directors, J. Andrew Rogers, W. H. Osgood, Jesse A. Rogers, J. B. Shaw and G. H. Wilkins. The directors will elect a president and vice president at their first meeting.

Stephen S. Taft, Jr., of Springfield, formerly of Palmer, a member of this year's graduating class of the Springfield high school, has just passed a successful examination for entrance to Harvard College. He enters without conditions, and has the satisfaction of having passed off an advanced subject, which will be credited on the first year's work.

The trustees of the state primary and reform schools held their annual meeting at the Lyman school for boys at Westboro last week Friday, at which time Walter A. Wheeler was reelected superintendent of the state primary school, Dr. Sara J. Williams resident physician, and Dr. Worcester, Mr. Sullivan, Judge McDaniel, Miss Putnam and Miss Evans, committee.

The Palmer and Thorndike base ball nines played ball on the driving park Saturday afternoon. Palmer won by a score of 12 to 4. The game was closely contested, not a run being made after the fourth inning. Tomorrow afternoon a return game will be played in Thorndike. It is expected that this game will be very interesting, as Thorndike will turn out a very strong team.

The Second Baptist church has received a communication from Tremont Temple, church Boston, asking the church to grant a letter of dismissal to Rev. S. T. Frost, in accordance with the action of the council held in Springfield recently. The church held a meeting Sunday afternoon, and voted to instruct the clerk to notify the Temple church that as Mr. Frost was not a member of the church, a letter of dismissal could not be given him.

The drouth is causing much damage, and fears are entertained that if it is prolonged, there will be a scarcity of water for domestic purposes. The reservoir has never been so low as at present, and Mr. Gamwell is taking precautions against running short in case of fire. The sprinkler has ceased to water the streets for the present and the use of hose for gardens and lawns has been stopped. If care is used, Mr. Gamwell thinks there need be no uneasiness.

The following elected officers of Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., were installed Wednesday evening by District Deputy Grand Master C. S. Smith of Warren: N. G., J. H. Shaw; V. G., M. M. Thomas. The appointed officers are: Warden, E. E. Kendall; O. G., H. E. Crofton; I. G., E. A. Buffington; Con., L. R. Holden; R. S. S., H. B. Coyle; L. S. S., W. F. Fillmore; R. S. V. G., J. H. Hutchinson; L. S. V. G., E. F. Shaw; chap., George H. Miller.

While the prices of meats in the neighboring cities and towns have advanced to a high figure, on account of the recent disturbances in the West, Palmer people have very little cause for complaint. On the first intimation of the strike some of the retail markets put in as large a supply as they could conveniently carry, and thus prices have been kept at nearly the usual figure. The wholesale firm of Clark & Hastings have had enough to supply all their customers.

The directors of the Palmer Bicycle Club met Tuesday evening to make the preliminary arrangements for the race meet to be held by the club Labor Day. It is proposed to have several good races for valuable prizes, and one great drawing card will be an invitation race for a leather medal, in which it is expected some of our business men will enter and make an endeavor to carry off the honors. A special meeting is called for next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and every member is requested to be present.

At a session of the probate court held in Springfield last Friday the following business of interest to Eastern Hampton was transacted: Administration granted in the estate of Charles P. Carpenter, late of Thorndike, Nettie D. Carpenter administratrix. Wills approved of Ezra S. Walker, late of Ludlow, Hubbard S. Kelsey executor; Julia Harris, late of Wales, Harry H. Moore executor. Accounts rendered in the estates of Ambrose Clough, late of Ludlow; Lucius Simonds, late of Ludlow; Benjamin Church, late of Monson.

Miss C. L. Hawes, an expert cataloguer from the Library Bureau, is engaged in recataloguing the books in the public library. The directors of the Library Association have decided to adopt the card catalogue system, and when completed the catalogue will always be fresh and up to date, new accessions being catalogued at once, so that patrons can always tell by looking at the cards whether any particular book is in the library or not. The original accession book of the library was burned in the opera house fire last winter, so that a new accession book is also being made out.

A horse owned by Harry Lombard of Brimfield was hitched to a post on Walnut street near the Nassowanno house Saturday night. Suddenly the horse commenced pulling, broke the tie line and ran away. The horse was unhurt, but the wagon was badly demolished. No cause could at first be given for the action of the horse, but it was finally discovered that he had received an electric shock. The pole is wound with wire to keep horses from gnawing it. This wire is not connected with the wires overhead, but was heavily charged by induction, and several people who touched it received shocks.

The Odd Fellows have their plans nearly perfected for their new building to be erected on the corner of Central and Pleasant streets. Specifications have been accepted and contractors will soon be given an opportunity to put in their bids. The structure is to be of brick, two stories high, with rooms for the Odd Fellows in the second story and an opera house on the ground floor, with a gallery, and will have a seating capacity of 820. The stage will be 32 feet deep and 50 feet wide, with all conveniences necessary for a travelling theater company. It is expected to have the building ready for occupancy by January 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Huntington narrowly escaped a serious accident while driving from Springfield one night last week. As they neared the Ely farm west of the village while going at a moderate gait the horse stumbled and fell, throwing Mrs. Huntington out on the side of the road, but Mr. Huntington managed to remain in the carriage. The horse in falling struck on his head, doubling it under him, and it was feared for a time that his neck was brokeen, but the animal was soon on its feet and all the damage done was a slight bending of one shaft. On returning a few rods Mr. Huntington found a large stone in the road, which was the cause of the accident and which had probably fallen from some team. Fortunately neither of the occupants of the carriage were seriously hurt.

The managers of Forest Lake Garden complain that of late there is a certain class who come there on holidays evidently for the express purpose of creating a disturbance, and making it as disagreeable as possible for those who patronize the resort on account of its former reputation as a quiet place for a day's recreation. At the recent Fourth of July celebration there, no unusual attractions were offered, but there was a large crowd in attendance, especially in the evening. There were numerous drunken rows, and the officers were kept busy trying to maintain any kind of order. Some arrests have resulted, the parties paying a fine in the district court, and there are others who took a hand in the different "scrimmages" who will be called upon at an early day to make reparation for their disturbances. As there is no lock-up or place of detention at the Lake some are no doubt inclined to think they can commit acts of rowdyism at their pleasure, but the managers have their eyes open and hereafter all such if not arrested at the time will be as soon after as arrangements can be made, as they say order must be preserved on the grounds.

A number of the young people of this place are planning for a picnic, to be held in Aldrich's grove. If the scheme should materialize an enjoyable time will be afforded all who attend.

Next Wednesday evening, Rev. E. E. Weeks will deliver a lecture in the Baptist church on the crisis which the nation is at present passing through. Every one is invited and a large audience is looked for.

Z. Landon has purchased a horse and buggy of Mr. Grigwire of Ware. The animal showed some of his mettle yesterday by showing the village people a lively runaway. The damage done to the vehicle was slight.

Master Harry Crossman of Springfield, who is spending a few weeks with his aunt, Miss Jenny Kendrick, went with a few friends to Beaver Lake one day this week on a fishing trip, and caught fifteen handsome fish in less than two hours.

Watson Coleman is doing credit to Three Rivers in the line of cyclists, as he has won about $1200 worth of prizes this season. Some of the premiums are very handsome, and include three beautiful diamonds, three high-grade bicycles and a magnificent parlor lamp.

Messrs. Lester of Warren are negotiating for the use of Mr. DeSaulnier's building on Main street, formerly used by him as a drug store, where they intend to open a meat market. As those young men are very enterprising, competition make be brisk the remainder of the summer.

The subject for the sermon next Sunday morning at the Baptist church will be "The In-dwelling of the Spirit," and the topic of the lecture in the evening will be "Vanity Fair." This is another of the series of discourses on the Pilgrim's Progress, and promises to be one of the most interesting.

Mr. Wright, who has been working as a mechanic in the machine shop of the Palmer mill for some time past, has resigned his position and is to take charge of a small machine in Eaglesville, Ct. Much regret is felt at the intended departure of Mr. and Mrs. Wright, as they were very desirable members of the community, and were active in church and social circles.

The concert in the Union church last Sunday evening attracted an unusually large audience. No servic was held in the Baptist church and consequently the attendance was much larger on that account. The decorations for the occasion were well appointed and a great deal of credit is due those who so tastefully arranged the profusion of potted plants, wild flowers and evergreen, which delighted everybody present.

Russet Shoes

are more comfortable for hot weather than black shoes. We have carried a large stock of russets this season, and sold five times as much as we ever did before.

You all know

Fuller does not believe in wintering summer shoes, and if you want a good pair of russets to wear the rest of the season now is your chance, for every pair will marked down from

50c. to $1.00

now is your time to make money.

GEO. L. FULLER,

Distributor of Fine Fitting Shoes

MONSON, MASS.

Miss Lizzie Symthe, formerly of Monson, now superintendent of the Home for Destitute Girls at New York, and her assistant, Miss Carter, spent Thursday and Friday of last week with Mrs. Henry E. Bugbee.

Harry Crosby, who has been employed at the south straw shop for several years, the last four or five as foreman in the dyeing and bleaching departments, has moved to Milford, Ct., where he has a similar position.

Wilbur Chapin has closed out his Maine street meat business. William Cavanaugh has bought the building, Herbert M. Noble the horse, and Mr. Nicholson the cart. Mr. Chapin is to work for the electric railway company of Springfield.

L. H. Todd of Providence has hired the store and tenement in Bacon's block recently vacated by Charles H. Tryon. He expects to carry a larger stock than Mr. Tryon did, but a similar line of goods. Mr. Todd and mother will occupy the tenement.

The M. E. church and Sunday school will hold their annual picnic at Forest Lake next Wednesday. A cordial invitation is extended to members of other churches and Sunday schools. Full particulars will be given in the Sunday school next Sunday.

The preachers at the Congregational church during the pastor's vacation are, so far as secured, as follows: July 15th, Rev. Theodore Alvord; July 22d, Rev. T. G. Colton, formerly pastor of the church; Aug. 5th, Dr. Clark of Salem; Aug. 12th, Dr. Coit of Boston.

The topic for the meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor Sunday evening is: "Right and wrong ways of seeking." At the Congregational church Miss Mabelle Anderson will have charge of the meeting and E. J. Osborne at the Methodist church.

The union Universalist picnic at Flynt's Park yesterday was a great success, in spite of the rain in the morning. Besides the four carloads of Springfield people, and two carloads of Palmer people and the Monson society, the other chuches of the town were well represented. An orchestra furnished music for the dancing. Pendergast furnished confectionery, ice cream, etc.

At the Congregational church Sunday the special responsive service was arranged, especially to be appropriate to National Day. The pulpit was decorated with the American flag, and flowers were abundant. The pastor spoke of some ways to help our country. He mentioned the following: Be intellegent, sympathetic, sacrificing, and a citizen who lives well, for we have a country worth living for and worth dying for.

The Universalist society held its annual picnic at Evergreen Park Tuesday. The small attendance was due to at least three reasons. It had been reported that a disagreeable odor arose from the pond bed; this was probably true, when the water first dried up, but nothing of the kind was noticeable Tuesday. Then the farmers were in the midst of haying, and lastly, the picnic was not decided upon until last Sunday. However those who were there spent a very pleasant day.

The contract for the water works is nearly completed and at figures satisfactory to the commissioners. E. E. Eglee of New York has the contract for the collecting well and the pipelaying. Mr. Eglee has had a large experience in this line and is now constructing works at Methuen, Arlington and Meredith, N. H. The pipe comes from the Warren, N. Y., foundry; the gates and hydrants from Ludlow Valve Co., Troy, N. Y., gate boxes from Bingham & Taylor, Buffalo, N. Y., special findings from Builder's Iron Foundry, Providence, R. I. Work will be begun August 1st on the collecting well and pipe laying. Local help will be employed. Two carloads of material for the works are already here.

Miss Alice E. Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Tucker, of Monson, was married to Dr. Percy H. Terhune, at 7 p. m. Tuesday, at the Presbyterian church at Passaic, N. J. The bride was given away by her brother, Fred D. Tucker. The maid of honor was Miss Mary Randall of Passaic, the best man, John King of the same place; the bridesmaids, Miss Mabelle L. Anderson of Monson, Miss Natalie Waterbury of New York, Miss Alice Butterworth of Morristown, N. Y., and Miss Elizabeth Randall of Passaic. The ushers were Ralph and Arthur Tucker, (two brothers of the bride), Messrs. Slade and Morell. The bride wore a very lovely dress of white moire silk and veil fastened with orange and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid on honor wore white organdie over white, the bridesmaids white organdie over green, and carried bouquets of sweet peas. A reception followed at the home of Mrs. James Randall. The presents were many and elegant.

Miss Stella B. Watts of New London, Ct., is visiting Miss Jessie A. Johnson.

WALES.

The famine has not reached Wales, but the rise in prices has been felt quite keenly.

Mrs. Walton of Boston is spending a few days with her brother, Rev. H. P. Smith.

The state road running through the town is completed and submitted to the selectmen.

Miss Anna Burley has gone to Martha's Vineyard for a month, to attend the training school for teachers.

Joe Long and Joe Swindell are busy haying for H. A. McFarland during vacation, to assist themselves in the way of attending high school.

Auctioneer McFarland will sell at auction Saturday, at 11 o'clock a. m., the old Kinney hotel property in Holland. This is a desirable location, and some one should purchase it and set up a first-class country hotel.

The Methodist Sunday school held a concert Sunday evening in the church, and the school did great credit to itself. Recitations were well committed and spoken in a clear tone of voice, audible to all. The choir sang several excellent selections and the children sang beautifully, showing much care in their training. On the whole it was a most excellent concert, and closed by a few very appropriate remarks by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Capshaw.

LUDLOW.

A spectacular entertainment was given in Joy's hall last night.

Almond Atchison of Boston is spending his vacation with his parents here.

Prof. Simmons of Pottsville, Pa., was the guest of Rev. Mr. Quick last week.

Deacon Jones is having a new windmill put in to supply water for his barn.

Miss Mabel Fuller is spending a two-weeks' vacation at her father's home in Thomaston, Me.

Magdalena Lombard, 73, a town charge, died Monday night and was buried Wednesday.

Miss Kittie Dempsey has returned from a short vacation spent at her home at North Wilbraham.

John O'Hern leaves to-day for Nantasket Beach, where he will spend several weeks on a much needed vacation.

Agent Stevens and son returned Saturday from Europe, where Mr. Stevens has been combining business with pleasure for six weeks.

The Masons held a special meeting this week and worked the third degree on two candidates. The regular meeting comes Tuesday.

Wilfred Carter, Herbert King, E. A. Morse and William Hansen left Monday morning for a two-weeks' camp-out at Saybrook, Ct.

Misses Anderson, Newton, Clark, and Miller, teachers in the schools here, have gone to Martha's Vineyard, where they will attend the summer school.

A ball game will take place Saturday afternoon between the machinists and overseers of the Ludlow Mfg. Company. The game promises to be interesting, as there is a good deal of rivalry between the two departments. The victors will be challenged by the merchants and their game will probably come off next week.

The meat supply at the Ludlow meat market has not been troubled very seriously by the Western strike. Although the price has been high yet this place has not suffered like other places. Many of the farmers are taking advantage of the market and are selling their cattle. It is safe to say that there has not been so much killing done in this vicinity for a number of years. Representatives of Boston houses are reported to have been up through the country looking for stock.

BELCHERTOWN.

Rev. Mr. Hall of Pleasantville, N. Y., is visiting in town.

Mrs. Geo. Smith and daughter from Hadley are visiting friends in town.

Gaston Plantiff of Waltham is visiting his parents, Mr and Mrs. F. L. Plantiff.

Fifteen members of the E. J. Griggs Grand Army Post from this place attended the encamp fire at Enfield last Friday evening.

The assessors find taxable property in town, both real and personal, to the amount of $820,190, and the whole number of polls, 575. The rate per thousand is $14.30.

Mrs. D. P. Clapp and daughter, Mrs. Hill, gave a lunch party Wednesday afternoon in honor of their guests, Mrs. Hill of Chicago and Miss Annie Sheldon of Brooklyn.

At the benefit entertainment given by the Williams Opera Troupe recently, the Guild netted $6. The new lamps recently purchased have been placed in the park, and are much appreciated by all.

At the business meeting of the Congregational church held Tuesday it was voted to call Rev. V. C. Harrington to the pastorate of the church. The society will be asked to concur with the church in the call.

Clinton E. Woods of Chicago, a native of this town and son of the late George Woods, has a position in the Standard Electric Company of Chicago. At ten years of age he was obliged to take care of himself, and since then has gradually worked his way up to his present place, and has shown much perseverance and ability. His friends will wish him success.

An interesting missionary meeting was held at the M. E. church last Sunday evening. The subject was "An Evening with Mary Reed." Miss Reed is a missionary of the M. E. church in India. Some time ago on the mission field she contracted leprosy. The disease developed while on a visit to this country and she returned to India to work among the lepers.

A recent change in time has been made on the Boston & Maine and New London Northern railroads, which has necessitated a change in the hours for closing some of the mails. The morning mail to Northampton now closes at 11.10, and the evening mail via the Boston & Maine to the West, closes at 6.30. The Block Island train by the New London Northern leaves Belchertown at 7.04 a. m., and returns about 8.25 p. m.

WARREN.

W. C. Gage and family have returned from a carriage drive to Woodstock, Ct.

Mr. J. B. Cameron is home after a week spent on his farm in Hampden, Maine.

Mr. Eugene Root and wife have returned from a week's visit with Mrs. Root's parents in Enfield.

Mrs. George Lincoln and daughter are visiting Mrs. Lincoln's mother, Mrs. Gibbs in Westfield.

The Christian Endeavor Society holds a sociable at the home of Mrs. William P. Robbins this evening.

The attendance at the concert at the Methodist church Sunday evening was large. The selections by the Epworth League Orchestra were well received, and the solos by Miss Sampson and William Hallows deserve special mention.

About sixty members of the Universalist Sunday school picnicked at Flynt's Park, Monson, Thursday. The bus left the church at about eight o'clock and in spite of the wetting received on the way over the party enjoyed the day very much.

The stores in the village will be closed Monday afternoon from 2 to 4 to enable the merchants to be present at the ball game to be played on the Knowles grounds between the Butchers and the Clerks. As both teams are confident of victory a good game may be expected.

Monday morning A. V. Dow caught his right arm in a lathe between the face-plate and tool post at the pump works. He succeeded in reaching the shipper with his left hand, stopping the lathe almost instantly, and averting what otherwise would have been a very serious accident. No bones were broken, but the arm is severely bruised, necessitating a vacation of a week or more.

The New Electric Lights.

The work of putting in the poles for the electric lights will be commenced Monday and they will be in operation about the first of October. The selectmen have contracted for 27 arc lights of 1200-candle power and 8 incandescent of 25-candle power. The lights will be run from dusk until midnight and on Saturday nights until 1 a. m. Following are the locations of the lights.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The new town of Longmeadow held its first town meeting Monday.

Holyoke claims a population of 40,510, and will soon be ahead of Springfield.

Canada's divorces for the past twenty years have just been figured up, and they amount to only 116.

Phœnix Block, Providence, suffered by fire Sunday morning to the extent of $50,000, and several firemen were injured.

Five trotting horses, valued at several thousand dollars, were burned to death at Mystic Park, Medford, Monday night.

Owing to many disputes in the mining trade the men at several places in Pennsylvania who were at work have struck again.

Hoodlums destroyed over $3000 worth of statuary at Waltham one night last week. Many of the statues were imported and prized highly.

W. H. Wallace, who was made postmaster of Jefferson, Ohio, by President Jackson sixty years ago, is still holding the office. He is 84 years of age.

Postmaster Clune of Springfield has decided to employ no women in the post office while he runs it. So far he has removed two women clerks and put men in their places.

Forest fires started by Portuguese berry pickers have wrought havoc with wood land near Cottage City. Hundreds of acres of oak timber have been ruined and the loss is heavy.

The automatic hanging machine upon which "Jack" Cronin is to be hung Aug. 24th, has been objected to by the Connecticut State Board of Charities, who claim that it is suicide.

Isaac Prouty & Co., of Spencer, who failed last March for over $700,000, have settled up all claims and will start up in a short time. The creditors have taken $50,000 worth of stock in the company.

Manufacturers in Franklin county are sending agents among the farmers to secure wood, fearing that coal will fall short of the demand in consequence of the labor troubles among the railroads and mines.

As a result of the recent big fire, the town of Hudson held a special town meeting Wednesday to take into consideration the widening of Main street and making it a fire ward, where none but fireproof buildings can be erected.

A seven-years'-old girl of Beverly, who had her mouth full of percussion caps, fell off a sofa and landed on the floor last week, when the caps exploded, shattering her jaws and cutting her palate off. It is thought the child will die.

A pontoon bridge at Levis, P. Q., on which 600 were people standing, gave way Monday, precipitating all of them into the water. One woman was killed, but the others were rescued. There were many narrow escapes.

Mrs. Jane Anthony Eames, a prominent literary and philanthropic lady of Concord, N. H., and widow of Rev. James H. Eames, D. D., rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church of that city, died Sunday night after a brief illness of paralysis.

The town of Williamsburg has a remarkable old man in Cephas Thayer, who is over 70 years of age, yet there is scarcely a boy in the village who is more active. He can play ball with any of the boys and thinks nothing of walking to Charlemont, a distance of 20 miles.

Mrs. Lucy Healy of Charlton, R. I., who was born in that place, was 99 years old Monday. Her father was a Revolutionary soldier, and she is a firm believer in the phantom ship Palatine, claiming to have seen it off Block Island. She has never been on the cars.

Two men who had been drifting about in a dory for seven days without food or water were picked up near St. Johns, N. F., Friday. In their hunger they had chewed the leather of their boots and pieces of canvas, and were nearly famished when found.

The 31st annual exhibition of the New England Agricultural Society will be held in connection with the 67th annual exhibition of the Worcester Agricultural Society at Worcester, Sept. 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th. Larger premiums and greater attractions than ever are promised.

The A. S. Holmes Refining Company of Buffalo, N. Y., has just recovered a verdict of $105,940 in the supreme court in that city in a suit against the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Company for the burning of the Holmes refinery, caused by a spark from one of the railroad company's locomotives.

A wagon containing nineteen persons, including men, women and children, returning from a picnic near New York Sunday, were struck by a train and tossed into the air. The wagon was completely demolished, the occupants hurled in all directions, but as the train was going slow none of them were killed.

A New Jersey farmer scratched his hand while carving a chicken recently by striking a fragment of bone. Two days later his arm was swollen to the shoulder, blood poison having set in. The poison reached his toes, and his entire body was swollen to almost twice its normal size. Despite all medical skill he grew worse and died.

About 100 men in the house of correction at Boston became tired of obeying the rules Monday and started a revolt, making it very lively for the officers for a time. There was a short battle, during which one of the prisoners was shot, but not seriously. The mob was speedily overpowered and all of the members locked up in their cells

Teeth extracted without pain, free of charge. Dr. S. L. Millard, Dentist, of 181 Tremont street Boston, will demonstrate here the local anaesthetic "Methyl," in the painless extraction of teeth. "Methyl" is simply applied to the gums and is guaranteed to produce no unconsciousness, sore mouth or after effects. It is perfectly harmless to use even on persons with the most delicate constitutions. It contains no cocain or other dangerous drugs, and the most difficult teeth can be extracted absolutely without pain. Every one with bad teeth should avail themselves of this opportunity to enjoy the benefits of painless dentistry without the danger or discomfort of inhaling ether or gas. Dr. Millard will be at the Hampshire House, Ware, Monday and Tuesday, July 16th and 17th, and at the Converse House, Palmer, Wednesday and Thursday, July 18th and 19th. On the first day in each town teeth will be extrated free of charge and guaranteed without pain.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

The value of persistent newspaper advertising is shown by the house of Jas. McKeon & Co., Springfield, dealers in Ladies' Suits, Cloaks and Furs. Four years ago they entered Springfield as strangers, but to-day the house is as fully and favorably known as any in the Connecticut Valley. In the midst of their last holiday trade they were burned out—their stock being a total loss—but a week later they opened at 373 Main street with a complete and elegant stock in all lines. They have already outgrown these quarters and have leased the store in Haynes Hotel Block, formerly Stimpson & Co's piano rooms. Before entering they will entirely modernize the place and when completed it will be one of the largest, most convenient and thoroughly equipped stores in Western Mass. A new iron front, unusually large show windows, the bringing of the floor to the level of the walk, new steel ceilings, splendid mirrors and an abundance of light, are some of the improvements planned. They intend to get into these quarters early in August, and meantime will close out everything possible so that they may open with an entirely new stock. We congratulate our patrons on their success.

South store.

Parts of the wash dress goods counters were crowded every day last week and it'll be the same this week most likely if the lots hold out. Prices are about half of what you've been paying for them; but the qualities and styles are just as they should be.

At 5c. a yard—six kinds, some worth eight; some worth ten and some worth twelve and one-half cents.

At 6 1-4c. a yard—five kinds. All made to sell for twelve and one-half cents.

At 8c. a yard—Extra desirable things, made to sell for fifteen cents.

At 10c. a yard.—A most sought after fabric for warm weather, 19 cents was the price a few weeks ago.

Left aisle.

A manufacturer's stock of skirts, including black sateen and black and gray mohair, bought so that we can sell them for one-half what they would be in the regular way. Skirts that are right in make and fit, and right in every way.

Black sateen at 97c., $1 and $1.10.
Black mohair at $1.50, $1.89, $2.19 and $2.50.
Gray mohair at $2.19 and $2.50.

Double those prices for the value. You must be quick if you want any. Such skirts at such prices won't last long when this news becomes known.

A Frugal Meal.

It's house-cleaning time. Every one tired and cross; every thing out of place and wrong end foremost. No time to fool away in cooking; no fire, probably; no appetite, perhaps; no comfort, certainly.

No Pearline—that's the cause of it. A little Pearline, when you're cleaning house, makes the whole thing smooth and easy. With anything about the house that isn't hurt by water, you can save time and hard work by using Pearline. You won't have to use that rub, rub, rub, in getting the dirt off. And that saves other things, your paint, for instance.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 318 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, wind in stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The little white lines are the nerves which convey the nerve force from the nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on this principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system is wonderful, as the thousands of unsolicited testimonials in possession of the company manufacturing the remedy amply prove.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

He Stood It Like a Man.

He went down to the dentist's to have a tooth pulled out,
And he stood it like a man.
The dentist went to punching,
To gouging and to hunching,
While the forceps kept a-crunching,
And he stood it like a man.

He had a spell of sickness that kept him in the house,
And he stood it like a man.
He felts all sorts of turnings
Of his insides, likewise burnings
Of his brain and painful churnings,
And he stood it like a man.

He got up in the middle of the midnight with his twins,
And he stood it like a man.
There was absence of caloric,
And his words weren't metaphoric
As he gave them paregoric,
And he stood it like a man.

He went to do some shopping with his wife one busy day,
And he did it like a man.
He went to forty places,
Sampled silks and furs and laces,
Till he laid down in the traces,
And he stood it like a man.

"George, I know you will forgive me," said the beautiful girl, bowing her head, "when you know the true reason of my breaking our engagement so soon. But when I became engaged to you I forgot—" "What is it, Gladys," he murmured sadly. "Be not afraid. Is it that you love another?" "No, indeed," responded the girl, indignantly, her eyes flashing at him through a veil of tears. "But—you know how superstitious I am—I forgot that you were exactly the 13th man I've been engaged to."—Chicago Record.

BEAUTIFUL SWISS CUSTOM.—As soon as the sun has disappeared in the valleys, and its last rays are just glimmering on the snowy summits of the mountains, the herdsman who dwells on the loftiest, takes his horn, and trumpets forth: "Praise God, the Lord!" All the herdsmen in the neighborhood take their horns and repeat the words. This often continues a quarter of an hour, while on all sides the mountains echo the name of God. Solemn stillness follows, and every shepherd on bending knees, with uncovered head, offers his secret prayer. By this time it is quite dark. "Good-night!" trumpets forth the herdsman on the loftiest summit. "Good-night!" is repeated on all the mountains, from the horns of the herdsmen and the clefts of the rocks.—Boston Journal.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

Perhaps you don't know what Guaiacol is, but you know something of creosote as a remedy for indigestion and other diseases. Well, is a refined form of creosote, and is made from the resin of beech trees. It stimulates a languid appetite as the air of the woods does. As long as they can and will eat, consumptives can fight their disease. That is why Guaiacol is combined with ozone, a very active form of oxygen, in Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil.

Guaiacol

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Waiting.

Each day, when my work is ended,
I saw, as I neared my home,
A sweet little face at the window-pane,
That was watching for papa to come.

The blue eyes closed one morning,
And I knew that never again
Should I see my baby watching for me,
With her face at the window-pane.

Yet I fancied to-night that I heard her
Call, just as she used to do,
When she heard my step at the open gate:
"Come, papa, I'm waiting for you."

And I think that maybe she is waiting,
As of old, in the soft twilight,
She watched, when the long day's task was done,
To welcome me home at night.

Some time, when my work is ended,
I shall see, as I near my home,
A dear little face in Paradise,
That is watching for papa to come.

TEA MAKING AS A FINE ART.

A few of the guests at a fashionable tea drinking in Buffalo, N. Y., fell to talking about the poor quality of the tea when the hostess was not within hearing, and one of them lowered her voice till it was almost inaudible as she said to another: "If you want a good cup of tea you must go over to England to get it." This remark was a wound to the patriotic feelings of the Sun's correspondent, who thereupon felt ashamed of her native country and of Buffalo. "There seems to be no good reason," she writes, "why we should not have the best tea that grows in any part of the world, and why we don't get it is a query which I would like the Sun to throw some light on for the benefit of us all."

It may be said at once, by way of reply, that the inquirer must make a study of the subject, and that she will find it worth her while to do so if she desires to become an expert in the delicate art of preparing tea as a beverage that soothes and cheers. She must spend a good while in experimenting and testing, in observing the aroma, the flavor, the natural qualities, the potency and the essential influence of the various teas in the market, whether they are grown in China or California, Ceylon or South Carolina, India or New Jersey. Let her, in the first place, visit some learned and honest tea merchant of Buffalo, or better still, of New York city, tell him of her perplexity, win his confidence, and ask his advice. Let her then buy from him a small quantity, perhaps an ounce, of three or four or more of his very choicest kinds of tea, and carry them home. Then begin operations; open one of the packages; scan the leaf closely; take notice of any peculiarities it may possess. Instead of sending it to the lass in the kitchen, she had better prosecute her own experiments in a leisurely way. The Chinese connoisseurs make the infusion in a cup, pouring the boiling water over the leaves and covering the cup with the saucer for a short time. But the Sun's Buffalo young lady would probably prefer to make it in a pot when she gives a tea party; and in this case she may find it advisable to take the advice of an experienced tea brewer, who says: "Use an earthen pot, and have it hot to begin with. Use fresh boiling water—that is, fresh water which has just come to the full boil; pour this boiling water into the pot, put in the tea leaves on top of the water, and, in from two to seven minutes, pour the infusion into the cups, which ought to be warmed, or into another teapot. The tea should be made of such strength as is suitable."

If the result of the experiment with the first package of tea is unacceptable, try each of the other packages on successive days, and, if all the experiments turn out to be failures, pay another visit to the learned and honest tea merchant, give him the facts, and ask him for further advice and assistance. He will be pretty sure to aid the earnest inquirer, and may even write to New York for information he does not possess. The Sun does not feel disposed to recommend any particular kind of tea; there are a good many kinds from which a most excellent beverage can be made.

The Chinese connoisseur likes clear tea; the Russian likes a little lemon juice in his tea-cup; the American mixes sugar and cream or milk with his tea. It is probable that the Sun's young Buffalo inquirer prefers to prepare it in the American way, especially when providing it for a tea party on the shores of Lake Erie. It can be made in the American way so as to be very good.

The main thing to be kept in mind, when considering this subject, is that tea-making must be regarded as a fine art. Taste and skill and experience are essential to it. All the details and processes of it must be carefully studied by every one who desires to win success in it or to become famous for it. The reason that some English people make tea pleasanter to the taste and more cheering to the spirit than that made by most of the people of this country is that they buy tea of a better quality and take more pains in the preparation of it for the drinker. The Buffalonians can make just as nice tea as the Londoners by giving thought to it.—New York Sun.

BY ACCIDENT.—R. G. Beveridge, a well-known amateur photographer, has secured a snap-shot picture of a rattlesnake biting a man, and, so far as known, the picture is the only one of the kind in existence. It is hardly necessary to state that it was obtained by accident.

Dr. J. C. Reynolds, formerly of this city, has been spending a few days in the woods in this vicinity, assisting Rattlesnake Pete Gruber catch snakes for the latter's museum, and to illustrate the process to his friends in Pittsburg he determined to take a series of photographs. The box of twenty-two snakes already captured, together with the photograph outfit, was taken to a ledge of rocks near Siverlyville by Dr. Reynolds, Pete and Beveridge. The snakes were photographed in different positions, and as a climax it was decided to illustrate how the biggest snake of the lot was captured.

It was on the top of a huge mass of rock and the doctor posed as if he had just caught sight of the reptile, and was motioning to Pete, who was climbing up the face of the rock. In his anxiety to get a good pose, Dr. Reynolds failed to notice that while he was getting in position the snake had worked his way to the edge of the rock. When Pete put his hand over the edge to steady himself the snake over five feet long, struck savagely at the moving finger, its teeth gazed the ball of the thumb, cut the skin, but did not draw blood and a quantity of venon spread itself over the thumb, but was washed off with the contents of a bottle of ammonia and did not do any damage.

The photographer was so startled by the snake's striking that he convulsively squeezed the bulb connected with the shutter of his camera, and secured what is probably the most unique photograph in the state.—Oil City Derrick.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in health and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. A MISTAKE.

The whistle had sounded its shrill refrain, the train was on the eve of starting, and Melicent Merivale was snugly ensconced in a seat on the shady side.

She was a pretty, high bred looking girl, with large blue eyes, a skin as fair as a rose leaf.

Melicent liked to travel; she liked a comfortable seat; she delighted in a new book and relished chocolate bonbons, and here they were all combined in one. And she drew a little sigh of relief as she turned the first page and bit her dainty white teeth into the crisp, brown side of a burned almond. Just then the dream was dispelled by:

"Is this seat engaged?"

Melicent's brow darkened. A lady in black was standing in the aisle.

"N-no," she answered in precisely the accents which, interpreted by a woman's quick ear, mean, "I wish you were in Jericho," and she moved about three inches toward the window.

The lady hesitated.

"Cannot you make a little more room?" she asked politely.

Miss Merivale, without deigning any verbal reply, moved perhaps an inch farther.

"The bag might go in the rack overhead," suggested the stranger.

"It is too large," briefly answered Melicent, growing more and more exasperated.

"On the floor, then, perhaps."

Miss Merivale made no answer, but opened her book. The lady bit her lip.

"Do you pay for two seats?"

Melicent looked up with a weary elevation of her prettily penciled brow.

"I have made all the room I can," she answered sharply.

And the newcomer, coloring scarlet with mingled indignation and embarrassment, was obliged to edge herself into the fraction of space left by Miss Merrivale and her traveling bag.

And a warlike silence ensued.

Melicent Merivale ate chocolate almonds until she was tired and then drew her veil over her face and mused over past, present and future.

Past—A situation as nursery governess at Mme. Ardeau's fashionable "Seminary For Young Ladies," not much money, plenty of work and a perpetual longing for change, for recreation, for opportunity.

Present—En route from New York to Philadelphia to visit Mrs. Addington Seymour, a second cousin of her mother, who was rich, fashionable, hospitable, and, moreover, endowed with two exceedingly eligible brothers-in-law.

Future—A veil, a wreath of orange blossoms and a trousseau. Goodby teaching music lessons, glove mending, dress darning and all such tedious economies.

It wasn't such a disagreeable kaleidoscope of mental changes, was it? "Mrs. Reginald Seymour," "Mrs. Julian Verschayle Seymour." Both were delightfully romantic names—she really could not make an election in the matter.

"Philadephia! Passengers for Baltimore and Washington keep their seats!" bawled a stentorian voice through the aisles as the train came to a pause. People started up, grasping wildly at their various articles of baggage. The through passengers sat looking on with mild and placid interest, while Melicent leaned back in her seat.

"Haste is vulgar," she said to herself, "and I don't doubt but that Mrs. Addington Seymour's carriage will be here to meet me."

At this instant a tall, distinguished figure entered the nearest door with a queer look on its features, and as if by instinct Melicent Merivale knew that this was the widowed brother-in-law of Mrs. Addington Seymour. She half rose involuntarily.

"Miss Merivale?"

Melicent smiled and smiled graciously, but at the same moment she became conscious that his face was brightening at the sight of someone else as he sprang forward.

"Fanny! Is it impossible! And you two have come on in the same train? How very pleasant it must have been! But—pray pardon my gaucherie—I see you are unacquainted. Miss Merivale, let me make you formally known to my sister-in-law, Mrs. Addington Seymour."

And Melicent, with a burning face and a sensation as if a good sized crack in the floor would have been an infinite relief, found herself bowing to the very lady whom she had been crowding so unmercifully all the way from New York.

Miss Merivale had some tact in the make-up of her nature, and she decided during the one hurried second in which Mr. Seymour was helping her on to the platform that apologies would only make matters worse. So she smiled and murmured some feeble inanity of conventional speech, feeling the while that she had ruined her own prospects.

She staid just three days at the Walnut street mansion and then went back to the infant class at Mme. Ardeau's, sadder and a wiser woman for that railway ride. And the wedding wreath and veil are yet phantoms of the future.—New York News.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

Charles Johnson, a negro, though of Swedish nomenclature, had been arrested for highway robbery out on Independence avenue. A toy pistol, which had served him in "making a bluff," and a handful of small coin were taken from him. He was then ushered before the captain for the usual catechism.

"Let's see, what were you in for the last time, Charley?"

"Never done bean heah befo', boss."

"Oh, come, now, Charley; you've been here a dozen times before."

"May de good Lawd 'nilate me, boss, I'ze tellin yuh de troof!"

"Well, take him and lock him up."

"Hol on der, cap'n, ain't yuh gwine ter let me hab my money?"

"Well, I guess not," said the captain, winking at the lieutenant. "This is my rakeoff. Do you suppose I can stay here for nothing?"

"But yuh'll let me hab it in de mawnin, won't yuh?"

"No, sir."

"Not after the jedge gits t'rough wid me?"

"No."

"Say, yuh can't fool me dat a-way, boss. I'ze bean heah befo'!"

Then the old darky was taken down stairs, wondering what everybody was laughing about.—Kansas City Times.

A story is going the rounds to the effect that a married lady had a birthday anniversary a short time ago, upon which her husband presented her with a pretty piano lamp. He was much flattered when she told him she intended to give it his name, until he asked her the reasons for so peculiar a proceeding.

"Well," said she, "you know, dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, it is handsome to look at, it is not remarkably brilliant, requires a good deal of attention, is sometimes unsteady on its legs, liable to explode when half full, flares up occasionally, is always out at bedtime, and is bound to smoke."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"You beat us," said the defeated yachtsman' "because you caught the breeze before we did." "That's because we watched for it with baited breath," replied the victor.—Chicago Tribune.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house, and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at the stores of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c. and $1.

Why Artificially Digested Food Improves the Appetite.

Recent Progress in the Treatment of Dyspepsia.

When you swallow a mouthful of pre-digested food, such as Paskola, it is at once absorbed and thus leaves the stomach empty. If other foods be taken with Paskola, it aids their digestion and thus also insures their prompt absorption. The moment the stomach is empty then appetite appears. Growing children are always hungry because their digestion is good.

The disappearance of appetite indicates that you are not properly digesting your food. Anybody can assimilate nourishment, if presented in a proper form; but many there are whom the simplest food distresses.

Paskola being as it is, artificially digested by ingenious processes, requires no further action of poor, dyspeptic stomach and thus virtually rests that tired organ. Not only is it a fattening and health-giving food in itself, but it aids the digestion of other foods. As a consequence one will find himself able to eat more heartily and of greater variety than was previously possible.

Food is the natural cure for diseases attended by thinness and loss of weight. Drugs and tonics will not answer. The good results following the use of Paskola are so immediate that no one who has tried it has any doubt that it is Paskola that did it.

Paskola is pleasant to the taste and needs no cooking. It has solved the problems presented to physicians who have known that nourishment was the only cure for derangements of the digestive organs. Nourish the system and it will throw off disease far more effectually than any device of man. One grateful user of this new product writes as follows:

"About six weeks ago, through reading one of your pamphlets, I began to use Paskola for Indigestion. I firmly believe it has given me more relief than anything I have ever used and I have certainly used pretty much everything that has been recommended for the past five years.

I have gained six pounds in flesh and feel better in health and spirits than I have for years.

MRS. CHAS. E. LOTHIAN,
111 West 45th street, New York."

Paskola is for sale by all druggists, and a descriptive pamphlet can be had free, on application for it to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

SPEAKS THE TRUTH.

Mrs. Hodsdon of Haverhill, N. H., says: "I know whereof I speak, when I say Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a positive cure for salt rheum, eczema, boils and sores. It cured me of an ulcerated sore leg." 16

Two Veterans of Gettysburg.

'Light, stranger, 'light! turn yo' horse out thar, on the grass;
Hit's gittin' on to'a'ds night, an' I 'low yo' oughtn't to pass,
An' resk bein' stuck on the road with nowhah 't all to stay;
Fo' houses they ain't nigh so plenty up yer ez over yan way.

Prospectin', I take hit, yo' air, fo' l'on an' copper an' sich?
Wall, this is God's own country; yo're shoah to strike on to hit rich
Somewhah, ef yo' keep on a hunt; for C'lina's the land o' the blest,
But 'light, stranger, 'light; that's right. Come up on the poach heah an' rest.

'Scuse my not risin'. My leg what I lost up at Gettysburg's fight,
Is troublin' me some, so I beg to be 'lowed to keep still ef I might.
War hurt thar yo'se'f? Wall, I thought that empty sleeve p'inted that way.
Now hadn't I better call Pomp an' have yo' hoss put up to stay?

War into that scrimmage myse'f. Great Jupiter, wa'n't hit hot!
We charged up that Roun' Top hill in a reg'lar hail-storm o' shot,
An' thousan's that went up the rise jist stayed thar an' never went back.
I rested a spell thar myse'f, spread out till the fightin' grew slack.

When we'uns went up with a rush, an' run ag'in you'uns kerslop,
An' did all that flesh an' blood could, an' arter that come to a stop,
I, somehow, got left on the grun' a little way off from the rest,
With the bones all smashed in my leg, an' the hole of a ball in my breast.

I thought I war dead when the sun went under an' the fightin' had quit,
An' the fiery thirst hit comes on till I thought my throat gwine to split;
Then I groaned, an' a young clap in blue without any baird on his chin,
Lyin' nigh, reached a canteen over, an said: "Heah, take some of this in."

"I'll give you some water," says he; "though I'm not feelin' pleasant at all.
I've lost one arm an' been dropped by the wind of a cannot call;
But I'm pickin' up now, though, an' when I go back to our lines," he said,
"I'll jist take you 'long; but doan kick, or I'blow off the top o' yo' haid!"

I reckon now, you's a Yank, but I hain't got no feelin' ag'in 'em.
Each fought fo' his prinCerples then, an' each done his best fo' to win 'em.
You won, an' come out with one arm: I lost, an' this stump shows how I did.
I reckon hit's best ez it is than havin' the Union divided.

W'at! You the boy Bluecoat ez give me a drink, an' the story will fit you?
You, Tom Rollins? By hokey, I've a good mine fo' to hit you!
Heah, give me that live hand to shake! Now, settle yo'self down fo' stoppin'
A month or so, while we talk on our meetin whah guns war a poppin'.

Sally! Say, Sally! oh, Sally! Send down in the cellar a-flyin',
An' git some o' that rar' ole peach from whah hit's so long been a-lyin'
A gainin' a beautiful flavor for a dozen odd yeah or moah;
Fo' heah's the old Bluecoat w'at took me a pris'ner into the wah!—New York Ledger.

THE END OF A FEUD.

It was certainly a first rate feud and a source of much pride to the settlers in and about Hickey Township, just as a haunted house or a murder mystery or a long-lived scandal might have been—only the feud was much more satisfactory, because it had been on for four years, and hardly a month had passed during all that time that had not witnessed some new episode in the affair, and each one seemed more startling than its predecessor. And so it was that the good people of Hickey Township held their heads just a little bit higher than their less fortunate friends who resided in more peaceful portions of the country.

It—the feud—all started on account of a yearling calf—that which, permit me(a stock-raiser of limited but fruitful experience) to interpolote, there never was nor can there ever be a creature more hopelessly, unreasonably "ornery," and one more productive of sinful language and display of sultry temper on the part of its keepers. Yearling calves have caused the recording angel more trouble, broken up more old friendships, produced more family jars, and in the form of veal begotten more indigestion and insomnia resulting therefrom than—but this is not an essay on the sinful, sportive steerlet and his shortcomings.

The Walkers and the Benedicts had been old neighbors for years, "back in Ioway." In fact, the elder Walkers and the elder Benedicts had been married about the same time, at the beginning of the war, and had just settled on adjoining homesteads when the first gun was fired on Sumpter. The men enlisted in the same company, fought side by side, ate and slept and suffered together: and at home their young wives waited and wept together. When the little Walkers and Benedicts grew large enough to run about they were playmates and boon companions; the children of one family felt as much at liberty in the home of the other as they did in their own—for twenty-eight years the two families lived in peace and amity, and then that miserable calf precipitated an irreparable row. It was too bad all the neighbors said, but it is a noticable fact that none of them attempted to patch up a peace—life in Hickey Township and at Hickey Corners would have been dull indeed, but for the feud, so everybody sat by and watched each new phase of the affair with nervous, morbid interest, and commented thereon, but not in a manner likely to prove conducive to a truce on the part of the disputants.

It was this way; the Benedict and Walker houses were built on adjacent corners of the homestead quarters and were quite close together; in fact, one well, sunk on the quarter-section line between the two homesteads, had furnished water for both families for the first four years after coming to Dakota, and only a short distance from either house.

But it came to pass that there was born and grew and waxed fat and "sassy" a brindle calf, with a right smart chance of white in its eye and plethora of deep-dyed mischief in its soul—and he(for he was a young gentl. man "critter,") while yet of tender age but of tough record, engendered the feud. He had wandered away the day before, and when he returned at night the gate of the calf-pen was shut against him, and in the morning when Papa Benedict arose from post-breakfast prayers, and followed by the younger male Benedict hied him to the stable, he beheld his neighbor's incipient steer nipping in the bud sundry young and toothsome cabbages and kicking out of the earth, in his bovine abandon, all he could not eat.

Then was Papa Benedict wroth, and thereupon did give way to naughty, profane words, while the young Benedicts surrounded the offending calf and brought him up for judgment.

Now Papa Benedict was a man of hasty temper, but easily calmed; so when the calf was tendered him at the end of a long picket rope his wrath had decreased several degrees, and he wound the rope around his hand and started to lead the calf home.

It was while he was pondering on what to say to the calf's owner that the calf suddenly remembered a previous engagement and started in some haste to keep it, heading directly across the croquet ground. Papa Benedict wished to follow with more dignity than the calf desired, and presently his feet were scraped from under him by a wicket, and he was being handled the way the vaqueros in South America are supposed to make butter—at the end of a lasso. He did not look very neat when a few minutes later he reached the Walker residence and called his neighbor out. He was holding the calf up short, but his temper had slipped its tether and caused him to say bad words, to which Pop Walker replied in kind—whereat Pop Benedict seized a convenient neck-yoke and killed the cause of the trouble.

Of course there was a fight and considerable ill-chosen language; then as soon as possible, Papa Benedict sued Papa Walker for the damage to his cabbages, and Papa Walker sued Papa Benedict for the value of his calf. After they had prosecuted each other for assault and battery; the younger members of both houses "sassed" each other at every available opportunity: Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Benedict did no more "neighborin'," and Mort Benedict and Nellie Walker "busted up" with each other. That is, Nellie broke with Mort, who, for his part, had a wholesome contempt for feuds and such nonsense, and would fain have ignored the state of affairs, so far as Nellie was concerned, except for the opposition any overtures from him would have received on all sides, and especially from Nellie. So he had to grin and bear it, leaving, however all hostilities to the others, and speaking pleasantly to any of the Walkers he chanced to meet.

But finally through a rash act of his own he was forced into the feud. There was a husking-bee of the good old fashioned sort at Thompson's one night, and the younger members of the hostile houses attended. During the evening Mort found a red ear in his pile, and—he never knew what impelled him to do it unless it was that Nellie looked so pretty and tempting—he took his former sweetheart in his arms and kissed her, not once but three times.

As soon as it could be done without the girls knowing it, Bud Walker and Harvey Free invited Mort and Pel Horner out into the moonlit pasture where Bud insisted on "having it out." Mort demurred, but in vain, and much to his regret was forced to "lick" to a standstill, not only the man he hoped some day to call his brother-in-law, but the latter's second as well; Pel Hornor being a cripple and unable to accomodate young Free, who was "pinin" on account of his principal's defeat.

That settled it. Thereafter even tender-hearted Mrs. Walker—who, like Mrs. Benedict, sincerely but silently regretted the trouble that kept her apart from her old-time friends these four long years, and who had always had pleasant greeting for all the family, especially for Mort, who was a great favorite of hers—cut him dead when she happened to meet him, and even the frigid inclination of the head which Nellie had been wont to recognize his presence on those rare occasions on which they met was now denied him.

All this cut Mort deeply, but he was made of too tough fibre to show it; so, till the end of the feud, he tried to act as though he did not care—just as did Nellie, who, however, was obliged to confess to herself once in awhile, that she did care "lots."

The spring of 188—is a memorable one in the history of many portions of the Dakotas. The amount of rain in the fall and the snow-fall of the winter preceding had been very slight, indeed, and there were no spring rains to encourage the farmers. The creek beds and coules were dry; the lake beds and sloughs were innocent of water as powder magazines, and the matted grasses and reeds standing in them were as dry as the grass on the prairies. Everything invited the fire fiend, whose work on the plans is so swift and thorough—and he accepted the invitation.

From the wheat regions up north came tales of this deadly work—of counties almost entirely laid waste, of hundreds made homeless and penniless, with nothing left even wherewith to wring their breath out of the soil.

In C— county and its neighbors, however, all felt secure. The fires were far north of them and being gradually exterminated. Besides, they were in the Jim River valley. It is curious how much confidence the proximity of a river will give to the settler who is threatened by prairie fires.

Mort Benedict and his father were returning from the county town one day, having been in to leave "mother" for a two days' visit and to have the breaking plow repaired. For a day or two there had been rumors of fires only twenty miles or so to the north, and they were talking of this as they crossed the bridge four miles from home. As they reached the top of the hill on the west side of the river Mort glanced at the northern horizon, which was not far distant on account of a range of hills running east and west, and—

Did his eyes deceive him, or was that smoke just rolling up above the line of hills?

"Look, father!"

Started, the elder man did so.

"Good God, Mort! She's a-comin,' an comin' fast, too! We got t' racet' save anything!"

And race they did, but the fire was racing, too, and when they drove their panting horses into the door-yard the flames were only a few miles away and coming down at lightning speed.

While Tom and Roy saddled their ponies and rounded up the live stock Mr. Benedict and the three elder boys and Bessie, in an incredibly short space of time, put into the two wagons everything that it was possible to save, after which Hal and George saddled their ponies, joined Tom and Roy with the herd, and the whole procession, headed by the two wagons, driven by Mort and his father, moved off at a rapid pace toward the river.

Then, and only then, did Mort notice that there was no sign of human life about the Walker place. His heart gave a leap.

"Bess!" he said sharply, "did—did they git away? Did ye notice 'em movin, 'round?"

The girl's eyes opened wide. "Oh, Mort! I haven't heard or seen a sign of 'em all day."

"Take them reins. I'm goin' back an' see."

He leaped from the wagon and ran back, noting as he did so how hot the air had become and how near the big wave of smoke was.

Mrs. Walker, singing softly as she bustled about the kitchen, was a bit startled to see who her unannounced visitor was.

"Mis' Walker, where's all your menfolks? No, I didn't come fer trouble—only this a prairie fire only a little ways off, an' comin' down like mad!"

Mrs. Walker sank into a chair. "Oh' heavens; and father sick abed, an' all th' boys over t' Berry's on a breakin'-bee!"

"Good Lord! Ain't I glad I come back! Where's th' hosses?"

"Oh, Mort! They're all loose in the pasture."

"Git what things ye wantuh save t' gether real quick! They ain't no spare time." And Mort tore out of the house like a madman and down to the pasture, not noticing that Nellie had entered the kitchen and was staring at him open-eyed.

Both Mr. Walker's wagon teams were composed of animals usually as docile as lambs, but today, bunched together in a corner of the pasture, they snifled the coming flames, and it seemed to put wild imps into their lumbering carcasses, and it was a long, trying time before Mort could catch two of them—swear, pray, try as he might—and the great fire rolled swiftly nearer. The wind had shifted from northeast to northwest. Mort saw with a sinking at his heart that there was an even chance of getting out of from the river.

* * * * * *

Mr. Walker was on a feather bed on the floor of the wagon and Mrs. Walker crouched beside him. Nellie ran back into the house for the family Bible, then climbed up beside Mort.

"Git up! Clk!" The heavy whip came down hard on the horses' flanks and the race was begun.

Faster came the flames; the billow of smoke rolled over them, now and then dropping feathery cinders as it passed; they could hear the roar of the fire and feel its hot breath whenever the wind increased in velocity—and Jim River so far away!

Nearer came the great wave of flame; the air was dense and suffocating. Mort in his frenzy lashed the now running horses, incessantly, cursing, praying, saying he knew not what. Mrs. Walker wept and prayed; Mr. Walker now and then gave a feeble moan; Nellie, on the seat beside Mort, kept her lips tight closed more desperately as the wagon bounced and lurched.

Mort looked at her; her silence angered him. "Git off'n th' seat!" he roared.

"How d'ye think I c'n drive, with you sittin' thar?"

The girl obeyed and fell, rather than climbed back into the box.

Mort Benedict's recollections of what occurred after that are very dim. He remembers driving deeper and deeper into the heat and smoke, and of tearing through a volume of flame that seemed endless—flame that burned his eyes, his nostrils, his throat, and scorched his hair and eyebrows—then with a final leap the horses dashed into the shallow river, and he knew no more.

* * * * * *

When Mort awoke he could not for some time realize where he was and lay for some minutes trying to remember. Oh, yes; he was in Will Berry's room. He remembered the antlers on the wall and the white curtains at the windows. Some one came in softly from the next room.

"Who is it?" he asked.

It was Nellie and she came and leaned over him. "It's me, Mort. I've been here all th' time. I thought ye knew me, sometimes. You've be'n sick."

"Are ye here t' stay, Nell—always, I mean?"

She sat down on the edge of the bed and put her hands on his shoulders.

"If ye want me to, Mort."

He drew her face down to his, but put her at arms' length presently.

"But how about th' feud, Nell?"

"They ain't no more feud, Mort."

THE LONGEST DAY.

The sun had sunk behind the hills, and far and wide the purple shadows thickened into night.

By the trellised gate, in the gloaming, the young man met the maid.

It was a new world to them now, for only the evening before he had claimed her as his own, and she had acknowledged the claim.

Is there a sweeter moment in life than this?

He had not seen her all that day, and now this meeting came to her like a benison.

"It has been the longest day in the year," he said, as he clasped her in his arms.

How nice of him it was to make this remark. She loved him for it. The day had been long for her as well.

"Dear heart," she sighed, and cuddled close, "why has it been so long?"

Of course she knew what answer he would give, but it is always sweet in love to hear the loved one tell what each one knows so well. 'Twas this that made her ask:

"Why has it been so long?"

"Because—because," he murmured, dallying with the thought, "because it is the 21st of June."

And so her heart went broke on that.—Detroit Free Press.

HELPED HERSELF.—The old southern mammy is one of the peculiar and picturesque relics of the past, now almost traditional, so seldom is one found in her native surroundings.

A young southern girl, who has been visiting in the north, gives this amusing bit of local dialogue which took place after her return to her home in Virginia, where Aunt Car'line, an old colored woman who had always been her attendant was waiting on her at table.

"Cream in yeh coffee, honey, same as befo'?"

"Yes, aunty."

"Sugar? Free lumps, same as befo'?"

"Please, aunty, let me help myself to sugar."

"Deed, indeedy, yoh don't, honey. Does you drop de lumps in yousef in de nor'?"

"Always, aunty."

"Yoh poor chile! I jes knowed dey 'bused yoh dar. Done put the sugah in her own coffee. It gibs me a misery jes to tink yoh get so fah way from home yoh has to do like dat. Dey mus' be pore shifless folks to let yoh do dat, suah enuff."

"And," writes Miss H., "she is still pitying me for having met with such a misfortune, and insists on giving me four lumps in every cup as a compensation."

JOY FOR THE MARRIED SMOKER.—If your husband is an inveterate smoker and the odor of the tobacco has got into the curtains and hangings, don't further mar the poor man's pleasure by scolding, but get a small bale of hay, and that will restore peace in the house for many days.

There is small choice between a smoke-house and a stable, you say. Perhaps that's so; but in this case there will be neither, for a patient little woman who used to worry herself almost to death about it has discovered that a pail of water containing a handful of hay, if placed in a room where there has been smoking, will absorb the odor of the tobacco.—New York Herald.

"Whiskey never misses fire," said a man to us the other day. No; it never does. It is sure to bring down its victim sooner or later, whether he be high or low in a social or intellectual scale. And fluttering all about him will be the wounded hearts of mother, father, wife, children, sisters, brothers and friends, while beyond and behind all this is too often a total of ruined virtue and contaminating influences. At least six hearts on an average carry a life-long, overshadowing, dreary sorrow, for every victim alcohol brings down. The undertow of all family and social life is largely silent sorrow and dreary heart-ache over the victims of alcohol. No, whiskey never misses fire, never.

Eastern Jealousy.—Wal, now, if that don't beat all. I've jist been readin' about them Colorado rain-makers, and now I see they've got a clearing house in New York."—Life.

Scattered Roses.

A little maiden strayed one day
Where roses bloomed along the hedges,
Where dancing daisies decked the way,
And ferns peeped out from mossy sedges.

She heaped her little wooden cart
With the bright blooms to overflowing,
Then turned to go, her little heart
Unconscious where her feet were going.

A hillside lay along before,
With every step the child ascended,
She spilled her roses more and more
Till all were gone, and day was ended.

And when the maiden came not back
Came anxious loved ones out to find her
And traced her by the rosy track
Of all the flowers she left behind her.

Our little maiden grows in grace,
Her path along life's highway leading,
Her still ascending feet we trace
By flowers she droppeth, still unheeding.

A RED-SHIRTED BROWN NEWSBOY.

He was a little newsboy and was a nice cinnamon color. He looked neat, for his mother knew how to sew, and she made him fine short breeches and red calico shirts, and let the collars lay over his shoulders in quite a stylish way. The other boys called him "The Dude." He used to take his papers and run away to the great Central station, where he had lots of customers among the commuters, who liked to buy their papers of the little brown fellow in the red shirt.

Tod had his ambitions. He wanted to learn to read real well, so he could read the beautiful Indian stories in the "Border Weekly." He wanted to save $10 before next Christmas and he wanted, in the dim and enchanting future, to be a real sleeping car porter and wear a uniform, and be the recipient of "tips" from ladies. He used to tell his mother how he would bring home "bushels of quarters and dimes," and wondered where they could hide them until they could get enough to carry them down to a bank—a real bank, where rich people put money and kept it safely.

Grand dreams these were and much discussed over the ironing table where Mrs. Franklin worked of evening. Tod spelled to her out of the third reader. Tod's mother was young yet and pretty, and she worked hard for her boy, and he rewarded her by being loving as well as industrious. He helped a good deal by his paper selling, and picked up so much to tell her and to question about. On Sundays they took walks and in the summer the two went out to the Zoo or off on a steamboat ride to Coney Island. They thought the country quite the most beautiful thing in the world.

There was one gentleman who always bought a paper of Tod and gave him a quarter once in a while. And our nine-years-old boy soon began to watch for him. Tod knew he had some little boys of his own somewhere, for he had once or twice seen them with him. Tod also found out that the kind friend had an office in a big building that was not very far away, and that he was very punctual as to hours of leaving and taking the train. He watched the windows where the light would be turned out, and knew that, in just so much time, there would come the portly form and the kind, smiling face that he knew so well. It became Tod's little romance to carry home. It would be: "To-day he gave me a dime, mammy," or "I believe he sometimes has roomytiz, mammy. He limped a little." Once Tod had the delight of showing him to mammy, for when they were at the Zoo, they met the gentleman, and Tod was recognized with a kind smile and word.

One night as Tod waited for his "friend" he saw something that alarmed him and made his little brown hands shake until the papers nearly fell from his fingers. He saw two men, bad looking men, on his own side of the street watching the lights of those windows. He crept close to them and heard one say: "'Bout all gone but him now. I'll just slip up!" Tod's heart jumped to his throat. He couldn't think very hard, but he determined to watch the man who had crossed the street, and to follow him. Whirling around in street boy fashion, yelling his papers, he deserted his usual post and dashed over the street. Yes, the man was slipping up the stairway noiselessly, and there was the second man coming across the street to station himself in those dark halls. Tod had to think quick. He did think quick. He flew to the speaking tube and touched the bell. The hearty tone he loved so well came clearly to him: "What is it?"

The second man was almost to the curb. "Look out!" cried Tod. "Fur a bad man comin' up yer way! Lock yer door! I'll get the cop." Then he slipped nibly out before the second man, quietly opening the storm door, knew what had passed him.

Tod knew the policeman on the corner. "O, please come!" he pleaded. "I seen two fellows goin' up, slippin in the dark, after the capting. Come on, les' go on up—but I told him to lock 'is door," he went on. "Squealed froo the tube!"

"Yer a rum one," said the policeman admiringly. "Yer might get hurt, son. I'll step up.

But Tod stepped up behind. He thought he'd die if he stayed down stairs. On the second floor the policeman saw a slipping shadow, but it was in a corner and easily nabbed. The man on the third floor could not get down save by the stairs. The policeman sent Tod across to the big railway station for help, and when it came, they mounted to the floor above and found the other man in a similar corner. He had a murderous revolver, but seemed to think it best to assume an air of injured innocence, declaring it all a mistake.

"Open the door capting," squealed little Tod. "We hev got 'em."

The door opened and the captain appeared. He was very white. He looked from one rascal to another. "I saw them to-day as I came out of the Third national," said he. "I cashed a larger check than is usual. I su

PALMER NEWS.

A Stolen Bicycle Recovered.

A Columbia bicycle billed to Chandler Bros. was stolen from a freight car in the Boston and Albany yard, probably on the night of May 5th, and was recovered yesterday in the possession of Patrick Hartnett at Warren. The wheel was shipped from Hartford May 3d, and arrived in Palmer Saturday night; sometime before Monday morning the seal of the car it was in was broken and the wheel and a cheese stolen. No trace of the machine could be found, although bicycle agencies and pawnbrokers were notified of the number of the wheel. One day this week however the wheel was taken to the bicycle factory at Brookfield to be repaired, and the young man who did the work remarked that it was a fine machine. The man who brought it in said that he considered it a good one, and that he secured it cheap, having paid only $19 for it. The workman knew that at that price it must have been stolen, though he said nothing, but he secured the number of the machine and notified the Pope Company at Boston, who informed Chandler Bros. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Chandler and Station Agent Rice went to Brookfield to investigate the matter, and found that the wheel was held by Patrick Hartnett of Warren, and Mr. Rice swore out a warrant for his arrest. The document was served by Deputy Sheriff Studley about 5 in the afternoon, and the first remark Hartnett made after the reading of the warrant was: "How much will it take to settle this?" The wheel was recovered, though in pretty hard shape, having been badly used, and brought to Palmer last night with Hartnett, who gave bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance to-morrow morning, going down into his pocket and producing bills for that amount. Hartnett claims that a man came to his place of business in Warren, which was in charge of his brother, May 17th, stating that he was en route from Gilbertville, where he had been working, to his home in Blackstone; that he was hard up and wanted $25 on his wheel, though he accepted $19, all the brother had at the time. The fellow left his name and address, though of course there is no likelihood that either is correct.

The Water Supply.

The water in the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Co. is getting scarce, and has reached a lower point than ever before since the reservoirs were built. The lower reservoir is not full, and there is not more than enough water in the upper one to fill it, while the stream running into the upper reservoir is very small. Altogether there is not more than a quarter of the usual supply, though there is enough, probably, for all necessary purposes if used carefully, and as the water supply is one which affects the entire community, takers of water from the Palmer Water Company will do well not to waste it. Chief Engineer Hitchcock became alarmed for the safety of the fire district last week in the event of a possible big fire, and visited the reservoir. He came back more alarmed than ever, and when measurements showed that the water was going down at the rate of 1⅛ inches a day the matter assumed a serious aspect. Mr. Hitchcock and the prudential committee of the district held a consultation last Friday with Mr. Gamwell, the manager of the water company, who could suggest no way of stopping the rapid lowering of water, but Mr. Hitchcock advised the shutting off of the tanks of the Boston and Albany road, and the filling of them by means of the pump near the bridge over the river, by which they were formerly filled. Arrangements was made with the railroad, and the pump was started Monday, in charge of John Jones, the engineer at the Rogers-Osgood Hat Works. The shutting off of the immense drain by the railroad, 12 to 15 locomotives a day taking each from 300 to 500 gallons, was at once perceptible, and the water is about holding its own. A pipe has been connected with the tank opposite Main street, and the watering cart is filled from it, commencing its rounds again yesterday afternoon much to the gratification of the business men.

Dr. H. M. Auger has opened an office at the Weeks House.

A party of about 20 will go on a straw ride to Forest Lake this evening.

Geo. W. Ely has moved into the Rich house beyond the Point of Rocks.

C. L. Alexander has moved into Dr. Holbrook's tenement house near the Point of Rocks.

A party of young ladies took a trip to Springfield Saturday on their wheels, returning by rail.

Isaiah Hiscock bought the Kinney hotel property at Holland, which was sold at auction Saturday.

Joseph Jawovek of Thorndike came before the court Monday charged with an assault, and paid a fine of $10.

The carpet mill did the largest month's business in its history last month, turning out 6000 yards of goods.

Mrs. L. M. Shaw has had her house on Walnut street connected with the Palmer Water Company's mains.

Rev. H. F. Moulton expects to be out of town next Sunday, but the pulpit of the Universalist church will be supplied.

The board of health suggests that it would be a safe thing if people would boil the water they use for drinking purposes.

Mrs. W. Hunt of Thorndike street is making preparations to move to Springfield, where Mr. Hunt has been employed for some time.

The Rogers Osgood Hat Co. is getting out its samples for the fall and winter season, and the shop will resume operations about September 1.

A handsome drinking fountain of Georgia marble, the gift of A. T. Wing, is being placed in the public library, in the wall opposite the desk.

The iron for the front of Holden's block has all been placed in position, and the masons and carpenters are rushing the walls and interior woodwork.

At the session of the probate court held in Springfield Friday, Elizabeth R. Streeter was appointed trustee under the will of Charles Sands, late of Holland.

Joseph Provost has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., and purchased a liquor business. His business in Palmer will be continued under the management of P. M. Wellman.

Yesterday and to-day have been hotter than——well, make your own comparison. The mercury has hovered about 100°, and there has been almost no air stirring.

Jeremiah Connors, whose foot was injured in the recent wreck on the New London Northern road, was taken to the city hospital at Springfield yesterday for treatment.

The duty call brought the firemen out at 4.10 Tuesday afternoon for a fire in Dr. Stowe's woods on Thorndike street. It did but little damage and was soon extinguished.

F. F. Marcy is making alterations in the store in Cross's block recently vacated by S. H. Hellyar & Co. It will be occupied by a merchant from Brockton as soon as completed.

George Reynolds of Holland was to have come into court Saturday to answer to charges of illegal liquor keeping and larceny. He failed to appear, and his bail of $400 was declared forfeited.

The members of the Sunday school of St. Paul's church, at its session last Sunday, tendered a vote of thanks to W. N. Flynt of Monson for courtesies shown them on the occasion of the late picnic.

District Deputy M. D. Gay of Winchendon, accompanied by Grand Guide G. A. Adams, made an official visit to Quaboag Council, Royal Arcanum, Tuesday evening. Refreshments were served after the regular exercises.

Frank Taylor got his thumb in the picker at Holden & Fuller's mill Tuesday, and the flesh on the first joint was badly lacerated. He was attended by Dr. Auger, who hopes to save the injured member from amputation.

J. A. Palmer has purchased the Desmond property east of the village for about $1000. This property adjoins a farm of 89 acres owned by Mr. Palmer, and the two combined make a desirable farm centrally located.

The Boston and Albany road is selling round-trip tickets to Saratoga, including board and lodging for three days, at prices ranging from $9 to $18, according to the hotel. The tickets are good every Monday on the 10.59 a. m. train.

E. Goodes, who has occupied the store on the corner of Main and Thorndike streets for a number of years, finds the quarters inconvenient for his increasing business, and is contemplating moving to the stores recently vacated by E. A. Buck & Co.

Two 'bus loads of children, members of the Methodist Sunday school of Monson, passed through the village early Wednesday forenoon on their way to Forest Lake, where they picnicked for the day. Several ladies went through later on their wheels.

William H. Wilson, one of the inmates of the town farm, had a paralytic shock Tuesday night and another Wednesday morning, remaining unconscious until this morning, when he died. He was 71 years of age, and was formerly a shoemaker at Three Rivers.

The season at Lake Pleasant has opened, and the fare from this station to that summer resort and return is $1.45. Those who desire to attend the Douglass campmeeting at Willimantic can procure tickets for a fare and a third, good going till July 29, and returning Aug. 2d.

It may appear a little singular, but it is a fact nevertheless, a man walked something over a mile recently to notify the chief engineer of the fire department that his services were needed at a brush fire, when a few minutes' exertion on his part would have extinguished the blaze.

Mrs. J. C. Wing and son have returned from Peterboro, N. H., where they have been visiting Mr. Wing. The latter will remain at Peterboro for some time, as he is superintending the carrying out of a large contract for the Flynt Building and Construction Company at that place.

Local parties are talking of buying a plot of land in the northern part of the village and constructing a one-third mile track for bicycle racing. It is proposed if the track is built to build training quarters, and an effort will be made to get some of the fast riders to train in Palmer another season.

The Young People's Union at its meeting Friday evening elected these officers: President, Arthur Wells; vice president, William A. Blakeslee; secretary, Helen Wells; corresponding secretary, F. W. Washburn; treasurer, Norman W. Chandler. The Union voted to hold its meetings at 7 o'clock p. m. instead of 6.

Andrew Pinney has a curiosity at his home on Maple street in the shape of an evening primrose, which blooms between 7 and 8 in the evening, the blossom being yellow. They open in a peculiar manner, the unfolding taking place all at once, and not gradually, as with most flowers. There are two large beds of the plants, and more of the blossoms are expected to open this evening, about 200 blossoms unfolding last night.

A tract of land on Mt. Bunyan has been purchased by a company, under the firm name of The Mt. Bunyan Granite Co., and a quarry is to be opened there. It is said the company has large financial backing and proposes to commence business at once. Although the quarry will be in Monson, the offices of the company are to be located in Palmer, and this town will no doubt derive great benefit from the new enterprise.

The Boston and Albany railroad will run an excursion to Block Island next week Saturday for the benefit of the people of Westfield, Springfield, Indian Orchard and Wilbraham. The trip will give six hours' sail on the steamer Block Island, and those who wish to stop on the island till July 31 for the return passage can do so on payment of fifty cents to the purser of the steamer in addition to the regular fare for the trip.

A story of domestic infelicity and wifely inconstancy was reported yesterday morning by a resident of Fox avenue, the gay Lothario being a friend who had been given a lodging the night before. The host was given money to buy a pail of beer, but becoming suspicious took the pail and instead of going for the fluid returned in a short time to find his suspicions confirmed, he thinks. No arrests have been made as yet, and there is some doubt as to the correctness of the spouse's surmises.

The present war between the ocean steamship companies makes it a good time for any of our citizens to cross "the pond" who have a desire to do so at a small expense. A person can now go by steerage passage to either London, Liverpool or Queenstown and return for about $19, including outfit. One who takes steerage passage cannot expect superior accommodations, but then you get 6000 miles of sea travel, and the expense would hardly be as great as many often incur on a fishing trip near home.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach four sermons on "Christian Endeavor Echoes," as follows: July 22 (morning) "Forty Thousand Young People and What They Represented," (evening) "Methods for Capturing the World;" July 29 (morning) "Good Citizenship," (evening) "Christian Social Life and Its Amusements." These sermons will not be mere reports of the Cleveland convention, but a free handling of the greatest modern movement in the church and of the truths it is emphasizing.

These sultry July afternoons are responsible for some things not down on the books. Not long since a gentleman, whose fame is not confined to Palmer, became wearied with his daily task and sought the luxury of an easy chair on his front piazza. He made one of the quickest trips on record to the Land of Nod, which fact he soon announced to the public by a succession of snores, of such explosive effect as were doubtless never heard in Palmer before. The sound was echoed to the adjoining street, where the inhabitants listened with wonder to the sustained power of the afternoon sleeper, and unanimously voted him the champion nasal musician of the county.

The premium list for the annual fair of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society is in the hands of the printers, and will be issued soon. Among the attractions will be two races for local horses, one for Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville animals, a 3-minute class, and the other for horses owned in the towns of Palmer, Monson, Ludlow, Brimfield, Wilbraham, Hampden, Wales, Holland, Belchertown, Ware and Warren, a 2.50 class. The managers have engaged the Jewell Brothers of Newark, N. J., to give two balloon ascensions and parachute drop, one on each day of the fair, and can guarantee this part of the programme, as the Jewell Brothers have a reputation throughout the country for successful ascents, not failures.

A lady from Worcester, who is visiting friends in town, came very near arriving at this station last Saturday evening without her pocketbook. She had in some manner dropped it in the car, without noticing that it was missing. At Warren a man who sat in the seat behind her arose and got off the train. He saw the pocketbook on the floor and picked it up. Brakeman King saw him do so and followed him to the platform. He accused the man of having taken property from the car which did not belong to him, and threatened if it was not returned to cause his arrest. The pocketbook was reluctantly returned, and the brakeman gave it to the owner, who had not missed it. Mr. King resides in Springfield, and deserves the thanks of all honest people.

The Palmer Bicycle Club held a special meeting Tuesday evening and arranged the following programme for its race meet to be held Labor Day: One-mile novice, first prize, bicycle suit; second, sweater; third, bicycle shoes. Half-mile open—First, diamond stud; second, silver chronograph; third, silver cake basket. One-mile, open to riders from Monson, Ware, Warren, Spencer, North Brookfield and Palmer—First, silver tea set; second, silver water pitcher; third, silver shaving mug. Half mile, for boys 15 years or under—First, gold medal; second, silver medal. One-mile special, for the Waite prize cup, now held by the Central club of North Brookfield. Half-mile special match race. One-mile handicap—First prize, gold chronograph; second, gold chain; third, gold ring.

The new state law prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the sidewalks went into effect last Saturday, and the riding of these machines on the sidewalks, or on any path which is laid out by a town or by an individual and cared for and maintained as a sidewalk, is prohibited, though foot-paths outside the thickly settled portions are not included. Any person can enter complaint against an offender at any time within two months after the offence, and the fine is not to exceed $20. Bells must also be carried on all wheels, and ten miles an hour is the limit of speed. The law has been generally complied with in Palmer, although occasionally a rider forgets himself, and from the force of habit takes to the sidewalk. As all wheelmen must now confine themselves mainly to the road, it may be the means of bringing us better highways. If the bicycle riders of the state should unite in a demand for good roads perhaps it might be the means of making our Legislature give a little more attention to the matter.

A Palmer man who had become possessed of a most elegant "jag" one day last week was sobered off in a manner which would discredit the homeopathic theory that like cures like. He was standing on the bank of the river looking at nothing with an intenseness which was painful, when two men appeared on the scene. One remarked that if the inebriate would only fall in the water it might sober him somewhat, whereupon the other, agreeing in the surmise and wishing to help his fellowman to the full extent of his ability, approached him from the rear and suddenly assisted him into the placid waters of the Quaboag. There are persons however who prefer to take their medicine in their own way, and this fellow was one of them, for as he crawled out on the bank and laid down to dry off, a process which occupied the greater portion of the day, the air assumed a sulphurous hue which lingered in the vicinity as long as the victim stayed there, and followed him to his home in the latter part of the afternoon.

About sixteen of Miss Mable Rutter's young friends helped her to enjoy her sixth birthday last Wednesday evening, and the little ones all had a really pleasant time. A very palatable collation was served, games were indulged in, and on leaving everyone present gave the happy little girl a souvenir of the occasion.

Mr. Keith of Stafford, who has purchased a large wood lot from the Palmer Mill company, is to move his family to this place, where they will reside until Mr. Keith has the lot cleared. It is expected that a gang of men, with teams and lumbering apparatus, will arrive early next week, to commence work.

Owing to the long drought, many of the springs which supply water to the inhabitants of this place are becoming exhausted. This state of things is causing anxiety to many real estate owners, in consequence of which some steps may be taken in the near future in regard to having a more perfect water system. At present F. A. Ruggles is supplying water to Captain Potter's tenements, and he may greatly enlarge his system before the fall season.

A young man in this place, who is exceedingly popular with the fair sex, was somewhat unfortunate one day this week. It seems that a short while ago he decided to have himself initiated into the mysteries of dying cotton, and while occupied in that way he neglected to descriminate between the liquidity and solidity of an indigo vat, and accordingly was unceremoniously immersed in the purple liquid, and if it had not been for the prehensile power of the young fellow's extremities, a metamorphosis might have taken place which would have transmuted an Adonis into a modern "Bluebeard." However, the boy received no injuries, except a momentary embarrassment.

Now that the weather is so dry and water so scarce, there is a complaint entered against parties who draw water by the barrel-full from the watering tub near Mayette's store building. There is scarcely enough in the well or reservoir to keep the tub full for horses, and it should not be taken in this manner.

The announcement this week of the death of Charles Plummer of Maine, formerly a resident of this village, was a surprise to his many friends here. Mr. Plummer was employed by the Thorndike company as second hand in the cloth room for a number of years, and his jovial and friendly manner won for him a large number of friends, who wish to extend their heartfelt sympathy to his wife in her sad affliction. Mr. Plummer has been in search of health for some time, but finally succumbed to lung trouble, from which he died on Friday.

A Sensational Elopement.

"Two souls with but a single thought," and that to get married in spite of all obstacles, were those of Miss Angie Lord and George Trembly of this place, who eloped last Saturday morning. The elopement was the result of a train of circumstances which had not been exactly pleasant to either of the young people, but the cloud had a silver lining, and George and Angie are now living happily together. George is a young man of 23, who was employed by the Thorndike Company in the No. 2 mill. Miss Angie is the younger daughter of the Lords, and also worked in the mill. It is said that some time ago George began paying Angie's elder sister attentions, which met with the approval of the father. Miss Angie, however, is a local belle, and George soon found himself captivated by her charms. He therefore transferred his attentions to Angie and his troubles commenced. Mr. Lord did not approve of George as a suitor for Miss Angie's hand, considering her much too young. She claims to be 19, but her father says she is but 16. He talked to George and Angie, but the young people had ideas of their own, and to stop the growing intimacy Mr. Lord forbade George the house. This seems to have added fuel to the flames, and George became more than ever determined to meet his little sweetheart. As the paternal fiat had gone forth that they should not meet, they were compelled to do so on the sly. This, it is said, resulted in several sprinting matches between George and Mr. Lord, but George always managed to get the lead and keep it. Finding that his daughter did not obey his commands, Mr. Lord locked her up. In a measure this was successful, but as she could not always be kept in confinement, it did not prove to be a great success. Last Friday George was discharged from the mill, and Mr. Lord thought it would be better for Angie to remain at home Saturday. He finally consented to her going to work, however, but told the boss of her room not to let her out on any pretext. As she passed George's boarding house, he was seen at the window, and signs passed between the lovers. Soon after the mill started up Angie asked permission to leave the room, but was refused. About 8 o'clock George wandered down past the mill and was seen by Angie from a window. She asked permission to go home, but it was not granted. Her boss finally left the room for a short time, and when he returned found that Angie had gone out, leaving her hat. Angie and George met outside, but were seen and a chase commenced. They increased their speed, and took to the Palmer road. Mr. Lord was notified and at once called an officer. He found that he could do nothing without a warrant, and started for Palmer to get one. He secured a warrant against his daughter for being a stubborn child, but could not get one for George. Returning to Thorndike a search was instituted, which proved unsuccessful. George and Angie went up the hill to the cemetery, where they took to the woods, and went across lots to Three Rivers. George then proceeded to Palmer, where he secured a marriage license. Returning to Three Rivers he hunted up Justice of the Peace Stebbins, and in a few moments the knot was tied. Officer Luman found the couple at the house of a friend in Three Rivers Saturday evening, and placed the girl under arrest. There was no charge against George, but he insisted on accompanying his bride to the Palmer lock-up. He hustled around and secured bail, and both appeared in court Monday morning. Rather than face the crowded court room during a long trial, Angie pleaded guilty to the charge brought against her and paid a fine of $10, and she and George left the court room with expressions on their faces which testified to their complete satisfaction with the outcome of the case.

G. L. Fuller, the shoe dealer, is giving a pair of shoes to every tenth customer, all being required is to clip his advertisement from the columns of the JOURNAL and present it when you make your purchase. If you are fortunate enough to be one of the tenth you can have your shoes for nothing, whether they cost $1 or $5.

Of course Monson would like a new passenger station, and will probably have one some time, but meanwhile the railroad people would confer a favor on the traveling public if they would fix up the platform about the present structure. Loose boards and holes through which a foot is likely to drop do not speak well for whoever is supposed to look after the matter.

Howard, the six-years-old son of A. C. Page, had an exciting experience while fishing in Ellis's pond one day this week. He had a small trout line and hook, but succeeded after considerable of a struggle in landing a pickerel which measured 19½ inches and weighed 1¾ pounds. Just as he got the fish ashare the line broke, but the little fellow dropped on the fish and held it close, shouting lustily for help, which finally arrived.

M. O'Grady, one of the oldest Irish residents of Monson, died at his home on Washington street Sunday morning at the age of 68. He had been in poor health for about two years, though confined to his bed for only six weeks. Mr. O'Grady was born in County Kerry, Ireland, coming to this country with his parents when quite young. He landed in South Carolina, but came to Monson in 1840, having lived 54 years in the town, 40 of which he was employed by Merrick & Fay at the north straw shop. He was prominent in the building of St. Patrick's church, and was for many years its sexton. Besides a widow he leaves a son, T. O'Grady of Stafford, and a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Hines of Monson. The funeral was held Tuesday, the interment being at Thorndike. Rev. John D. Coyle of Stafford Springs and Rev. F. J. Lynch of Thorndike assisted Rev. Fr. Lee. Forbes & Wallace's.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., July, 1894.

Are you going to the seashore? The bathing suits and the caps are all ready—a nice line to select from.
Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Nothing cooler for house or street wear these hot days than those white and printed lawn suits, and the price is away down where it can be easily reached—$2.50 a suit.
Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Some of the qualities of wash dress goods that we started the bargain sale with two weeks ago are all gone, but there is still a big handsome collection to choose from. Prices are about half of what you expect to pay; but they're the good reliable qualities for all that. The Nun's cloth at 6¼ cents a yard is simply irresistable.
Right aisle.

Laces are being used more than ever—we are using more than ever:

White and ecru Nottingham laces, 3 to 8 inches wide, at 10, 12½, 15, 20 and 35 cents a yard.
White Oriental laces, 2 to 10 inches wide, 5 to 37½ cents a yard.
White Valenciennes lace edge—we have plenty of it—not so everywhere, 3 to 25 cents a yard; 25 cents to $2.50 a piece.
Black Bordon laces, 4 to 8 inches wide, 25, 37½ and 50 cents a yard.

South Store.

Users of the best French corsets will find many points of similarity between them and the new Z Z French corsets. We make special prices on two of the most popular styles while introducing them:

Coutil corset, long waist, 5-hook, silk flossed, sateen strip, four side steels, sizes 18 to 26, at $1.78.
Fast black sateen corset, long waist, silk flossed, sateen strip, 5-hook, four side steels, sizes 18 to 26, at $1.98.
South store.

More of those rattan back and seat veranda rockers at $1.50. They'll go as quickly as the last very likely.
Third floor of Pynchon street building.

Some new Japanese paper napkins just received.

Size 14½ by 14½ inches, well assorted, 19 cents a hundred.
Size 16 by 16 inches, well assorted, 28 cents a hundred.

Which—Man or Shirt?

Has the man grown, or has the flannel shrunk? Usually, the shirt's to blame. No, not that, either—but the way it's washed.

Flannels ought to be washed with Pearline. If you're buying new ones, start right. Have them washed only with Pearline (direction on every package) and they won't shrink. As for the old ones, Pearline can't make them any larger, but begin with it at once; it will keep them from growing smaller. It will keep them from the wear of the washboard, too.

Danger As one wash is sufficient to ruin flannels, great care should be exercised as to the use of the many imitations which are being offered by unscrupulous grocers or peddlers. Pearline is never peddled. 314 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Tired, Weak, Nervous Could Not Sleep.

Prof. L. D. Edwards, of Preston, Idaho, says: "I was all run down, weak, nervous and irritable through overwork. I suffered from brain fatigue, mental depression, etc. I became so weak and nervous that I could not sleep, I would arise tired, discouraged and blue. I began taking and now everything is changed. I sleep soundly, I feel bright, active and ambitious. I can do more in one day now than I used to do in a week. For this great good I give Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the sole credit.

It Cures."

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

The Economy of Love.

HE.

He was a great philosopher, methodical and wise,
And he had theories by scores, which he could anyalyze;
Could tell the weight of a distant star, and follow out its track;
Could tell about a comet's path, and when it would come back.
He poked into the planet's crust; had expert views on stone,
And with the greatest ease distilled the straightest liquids known.
He argued evolution, too—the great eternal plan;
He also talked profoundly on the future state of man.
But one thing roiled his bulging brain, and made him sad, indeed,
There was, he said, an awful waste, of which there was no need—
A waste of sun, a waste of rain, a waste of nature's force;
And man, a child of nature—why, he wanted most of course.

SHE.

She was a bright and winsome thing, as gay as any bird;
The ripple of her silver voice the sweetest ever heard;
Bright, laughing eyes and dimpled chin, and wavy, sunny hair;
Her every move was grace itself, and she was wondrous fair.
She went to church each Sabbath day, as all good people do;
She talked a little French, and just a bit of music knew.
No ponderous thoughts came to her mind, no theories complex;
No questioning doubts of life or death came to her soul to vex.
Her world was rich in health and love, her life a holiday.
The sun might waste, the rain or what, she'd never say it nay;
Suppose there was an awful waste throughout the world so wide—
Sure, no one felt the loss, for quite enough was left beside.

BOTH.

They met one day, the grave and gay, philosopher and maid;
Along there happened Cupid then, and scheming plans he laid.
The wise man's wisdom quick gave way, by lighter thoughts displaced;
He straightway fell in love with her—she had so little waist.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

THE OLD, OLD SORROW.

He clapped his hand upon his breast!
"What is it, John?" his wife cried. "Speak!"
And John in a faltering voice confessed
That the letter she had given him with instructions to mail at once, as it was of the utmost importance, and he had promised so faithfully he would drop in the letter-box as he passed the post office on his way down town, had been forgotten until this moment and he was very sorry to say he had been carrying it in His inside pocket for a week.

"Er man kin run into debt," said Uncle Eben, "but when it comes to gettin' out he's got to crawl."

He seized and kissed her hand. "I protest," she cried, "that I am entitled to more consideration." He seized and kissed her.

The rich American had a nobleman for a son-in-law, until the funds were cut off, and then the gentleman removed himself. "By the way," said a friend, who had not heard how the affair turned out, "is n't your son-in law a peer?" "Not exactly," admitted the old gentleman; "he's a disappear," and then he explained how that brand of nobility happened to be.—Detroit Free Press.

Little John was given a penny to put in the Sunday-school collection. Visions of long sticks of candy arose in Johnny's mind, and forgetting the far away heathen, he pocketed the cent. When he returned home, his father inquired if he had contributed cheerfully to the cause. "Now, tell me, John," he said, "are you guilty or innocent." "I am in a cent," was Johnny's reply.—Truth.

"Your Highness," said the menial, "the man with a bullet-proof shirt is in waiting in the ante-room." "Show him in." Meekly the inventor entered. "Has this garment been subjected to every possible test?" inquired the potentate. "It has, please Your Majesty." "Er—has it been to a steam laundry?" The inventor fell to the floor in a swoon. "Foiled again," said he, as he fell. —Indianapolis Journal.

"Paw," said the small boy, "kin I have any fireworks on the Fourth of July?" "Yes; if you will let me shoot them off for you," replied the prudent father. The proposition was evidently not completely satisfactory, but it was accepted as being better than nothing. After a minute or two the youngster said: "Maw." "What is it?" "Is there any more pie?" "Yes." "Well, I'd like a piece if paw won't want to eat it fur me."

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

It is as easy to explain a cold as to catch one. The skin, exposed to a sudden change in temperature, ceases to throw off waste matter, and double duty is imposed upon the lungs. Hence, inflammation of the bronchial tubes and frequently consumption. A medicine to cure consumption must help not only the lungs but the stomach, because good appetite and good digestion are required to fortify the system. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, is a great flesh-maker.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

From Little Things.

It commenced with a bow and a smile,
A formal polite "How d'y do,"
A few moonlight nights at Belle isle,
A blissfully cranky canoe,
A buggy that scarcely held two,
A waist that was easy to span,
Soft eyes that were tenderly blue—
And that was the way it began!

Confession—and bliss for awhile,
The skies of a roseate hue,
A ring that exhausted his pile;
Then widely the wedding cards flew.
Alas! if young Love only knew
The risks he unthinking ran,
These little mishaps would be few—
But that was the way it began!

AN EAR FOR MUSIC.

In the good old times they used to speak of a person who did not readily distinguish tunes as having no ear for music; and the child of whom this was said was never given any opportunity of acquiring such a thing, his developement as regards music being considered hopeless. But in these later and better times it is declared that no child with a normal physical ear—that is, with one meeting the usual requirements of hearing—is hopelessly deficient in the matter of music. The total absence of the power to discriminate between tones, or to give pitch correctly, will always argue either an ill-formed ear, a species of deafness, or a deficiency somewhere in the brain, and, at any rate, an abnormal condition in that one respect. When it is observed that a child does not try to hum to itself, does not make little attempts at song when about a year old, it may then be suspected that the sense of melody, the power to distinguish tunes, is absent or dull, since most children, almost as soon as they can walk, will make melodic sounds that can be recognized as the fragments of tunes that are sung to them.

Most generally, when one has reached maturity, and still has no ear for music, it is owing to neglect in childhood—neglect so far as there has been wanting any endeavor to stimulate the appreciation of tone and to exercise and develop that part of the brain to which the ear conveys its sensations. This can be done only by reiterated effort, by the repetition of a few tones till the ear has become able to discriminate between them and carry the sense of their differences to the brain, and the brain has in turn learned to order the voice to express them. Sometimes the brain never learns this last perfectly, even when it enjoys and recognizes tune itself. When the voice is able to express the tune it does not signify if it be weak and harsh or sweet and strong, since that belongs to another organ, the ear having to do only with discrimination of tonal difference. The effort should not be given up till practice has shown that there is positively no sense for melody, no observation of the succession of the various tones.

Very possibly a child who never heard music might never sing—a child whose mother never hushed it with lullabies or amused it with gay songs. Music, then, may some time come to the grown person as a revelation of delight, and the development of the ear would take place at a later period. We often find a child who cannot "turn a tune" in the beginning gradually acquire the power to do so as well as any. But where it is a possible thing to avoid, no child should be left in such forlorn beggary as never to hear music. If a mother cannot sing herself, she should see to it that the nurse she employs can sing, and if she is unable to hire a nurse she might find it possible, through exchange of work or kindness, to procure singing of some sort enough to give her child the opportunity of comparing tone and of acquiring an understanding of them, since it would seem as palpable a duty to develop that as any of the child's powers. It is fortunate that almost everywhere the Sunday school, with its singing of simple elementary tunes, is ready to supplement this deficiency, among others of the home life.—Harper's Bazar.

BENEVOLENCE AT A DISCOUNT.

The resourceful newsboy is not a product of America alone. He is found in London as well as in New York, as the following story, told by a clergyman some years ago, attests.

A benevolent old gentleman, having observed for several nights in Trafalgar Square a youngster selling "evenings," who seemed particularly sharp and above the average in every way, conceived the idea of benefiting him, and, as he expressed it, putting him in the way of getting a living. One night, therefore, the boy was accosted with,

"I say, my boy, wouldn't you like to give up selling papers and have a situation where you could be good, and away from bad company?"

"How much a week?" promptly inquired the lad.

The old gentleman was taken aback at such a very practical question, and hardly knew what to answer. At last he said,

"Well, I don't know; perhaps four or five shillings."

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the lad "that's good. Why I pay my mother fifteen bob a week now."

The old gentleman collapsed, and has given up trying to get "paper" boys into situations.—Harper's Young People.

A Household Treasure

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. Kings's New Discovery in the house, and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottle free at the stores of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c. and $1.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in health and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

BROILED CHICKEN.

She was a Canadian girl, and she has condescended to work for a West side family for $3.50 a week and three afternoons out, says the Buffalo Express. When she came she gave the mistress to understand that she had worked in many of the best families of the town, and knew all there was to be known of cookery and its accompanying branches of household science.

Now, the mistress of the particular establishment where this particular girl worked is a thrifty little body, who knows a thing or two about cooking herself. So it happened that when she bought a pair of chickens for Sunday she thought that she would have some cream of chicken soup for Monday. The man of the establishment likes broiled chicken better than almost anything else, and these chickens were to be broiled. The mistress, having the cream of chicken soup in mind, went out to the kitchen on Sunday, and told the Canadian girl to save the bones, adding that, with some stock which she had on hand and the cracked bones, the soup could be prepared.

"What did you say about the bones?" asked the girl.

"I said that we would crack them."

"Oh," replied the girl, and that was all.

After the oysters on Sunday evening, the girl brought in a platter which contained some curiously flattened, brownish yellow objects.

"What's that?" asked the husband.

The mistress looked at the platter. She picked one of the queer-looking objects up with a folk, and examined it attentively. Then she said: "I'm blessed if I know."

"What were you going to have for dinner?" asked the husband again.

"Broiled chicken."

"Is that it?"

"It bears a sligh resemblance to broiled chicken, but it has the appearance of having been under a piledriver. I'll ask the girl."

The mistress rang for the servant, and she came in. "Mary," she said, "what on earth is that?"

"Broiled chicken, mum," replied Mary.

"Well, what have you been doing to it?"

The girl tossed her head. "You told me to crack the bones, didn't you?" she said, "and I did it, even if I did have to take a flatiron to mash them all."

Mary lost her job.

HE ANSWERED THE DESCRIPTION.

The old gentleman, in his heart, did not object to the young man as a son-in-law, but he was one of that kind of old gentlemen who like to raise objections first and then reach an agreement, as though he were conferring a favor, and when the young man called on the important mission he was ready for him.

"So," he interrupted fiercely, before the youth had said two words, "you want me to let you marry my daughter, do you?"

The young man got his second wind on the first jump.

"I didn't say so, did I?" he asked coolly.

The old gentleman gasped.

"But you were going to say so?" he insisted.

"Who told you I was?" inquired the applicant, seeing his advantage.

"But you want me to let you marry her, don't you?" asked the old gentleman, softening.

"No."

"No?" and the old gentleman almost fell off his chair.

"That's what I said."

The old gentleman thought he had made a mistake.

"Then what in thunder do you want?" he exclaimed.

"I want you to give your consent," replied the youth pleasantly: "I'm going to marry her anyhow, but we thought your consent would'nt be a bad thing to have as a starter."

It took the old gentleman a minute to recover his equilibrium. When he did he put out his hand.

"Shake, my boy," he said. "I've been looking for a son-in-law with some sand in his craw, and I guess you'll do."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FECUNDITY OF FLIES.

The common house fly does not, in the ordinary sense of the word, migrate, though, of course individuals of the species frequently travel long distances. The remarkable fecundity of the fly is quite sufficient to account for its numbers during the early summer. A few individuals, in the torpid state, survive even the coldest winter, and with the first warm days of summer, lay their eggs. When deposited under favorable conditions these are hatched in from twelve to twenty-four hours, and in twelve days the worm changes into a nymph, and in ten days more into a perfect fly.

A fly will lay four times during the summer, about eighty eggs each time, and careful calculations have demonstrated that the descendents of a single insect may, from the first of June to the end of September, exceed 2,000,000. Were it not for bats, insect-eating birds and the innumerable microscopic parasites with which the fly is particularly afflicted, there would be no worse pest in the world than the fly.

COULDN'T EVEN RAISE HIS VOICE.

They say that the mountaineers of Kentucky, Tennessee and adjoining states have no sense of humor, and possibly not. Be that as it may, as I rode by a miserably poor hillside farm one day, on the head waters of the Big Sandy, I saw the farmer sitting on the fence chewing a bite of long green very complacently.

"Good morning," I said; "how far is it to Fanshaw's mill?"

"'Bout three miles in the way you've got to go," he replied in a whisper.

Another question or two brought the same whispered answer.

"What's the matter?" I asked. "Have you got a cold?"

"No, mister," he whispered again: "'tain't that. It's this yer farm. I've lived on it fer 10 years, an' the land's so durn pore I hain't been able to raise my voice on it fer the last five."—Detroit Free Press.

WILLIE AND GERTRUDE.—It was night. The weather was bitter cold.

"Oh Willie!" said little Gertrude, "what shall we do? We are so poor that we have no fuel with which to cook a porter house steak for our dear mamma."

"And it is of no use for us to try to borrow from the neighbors."

"No. There is nothing left to borrow."

"Where's the cat?" asked little Gertrude.

"Here," replied Willie.

"Put her up on the woodshed and twist her tail."

Willie did so.

In a short time the windows of the neighborhood opened and boot jacks showered down. Gertrude gathered them up and said: "There, Willie; put the kitty carefully away; we may need her again when these boot jacks are burned."

Was not Gertrude a wise little girl to profit so well by what she read in the comic papers?—Washington Star.

"How many things did the woman next door borrow to-day?" asked Mr. Figg.

"Only the telephone," answered Mrs. Figg. "It was the first time she had ever used one, and I don't think I ever saw a woman more disappointed."

"Couldn't she use it?"

"Oh, yes, she learned how to use it quickly enough, but what broke her heart was that it was fast to the wall. She had thought she could take it home with her to keep till we called for it."—Indianapolis Journal.

GIVE THEM A REST.

The Only Restorative for Tired Men and Horses.

Is a tired horse, which has worked all day, lashed because his strength is flagging? Sometimes, when a savage or a fool drives him. A wise man lets tired horses rest. Tired organs in the human body are often lashed with so-called "tonics," that are supposed to be strengthening. Nothing gives strength but food.

Paskola is a food, rich in nutritious elements. It is pre-digested, and requires no work of feeble stomachs. So Benjamin Helms, of Bridgeton, N. J., found out after medicines had failed to relieve him of indigestion. He writes May 4, 1894:

"I felt a beneficial result from the very first dose, am gaining in strength daily and have a ravenous appetite. In fact, I can eat the most hearty and rich food that has been repulsive to me for a year past. My heart is much stronger, and I am free from sinking spells."

Mrs. Charles E. Latham, of 111 West 45th street, New York City, writes:

"For five years I have suffered from gastric indigestion, and have tried all the so-called remedies for indigestion, besides courses of treatment from physicians all over the country, from which I received only temporary relief.

"My symptoms were heartburn, flushing heat, dizziness, bloated feeling after eating, depression of spirits, severe and acute attacks of cramps and inflammation, and chronic constipation.

"After taking one small bottle of Paskola I felt very much better. I have now taken only seven small bottles, and have never felt better in my life. I have gained ten pounds, and now eat anything my appetite craves. My friends say 'How fat and well you look; what have you been doing?' My answer is, 'Paskola.'"

You can buy Paskola of any druggist. A descriptive pamphlet, free, if you apply to

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

SPEAKS THE TRUTH.

Mrs. Hodsdon of Haverhill, N. H., says: "I know whereof I speak, when I say Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a positive cure for salt rheum, eczema, boils and sores. It cured me of an ulcerated sore leg." 16

The Pitcher of Tears.

The woman had closed her eyes,
A-weary with weeping.
She leaned on the empty cradle,
And sobbed in her sleeping.
Her breast, like the wave of the sea,
Was rising and falling.
Her heart, through the mist of sleep,
On her baby was calling.

Then her soul was lifted away
To the garden of heaven,
Where flowers shine like stars in the grass,
So smooth and so even;
And she saw where 'mid roses and May
An angel did wander,
With bright children who looked in his face
To dream and to wonder.

Alone, and apart from the rest,
A little child tarried,
And in his small arms, soft and round,
A pitcher he carried.
His sweet eyes looked wistfully toward
His mates in the meadow.
Heaven's glory was bright, but his face
Bore the touch of earth's shadow.

The woman knelt down where she stood.
"My own and my dearie,
Now why do you wander alone,
With little feet weary?
If you cannot come back, come back
To the arms of your mother,
'Tis your sweet hand the angel should hold,
And never another."

"Oh! mother, the pitcher of tears,
Your tears, I must carry,
So heavy it weighs, that behind
I linger and tarry.
Oh! mother, if you would smile,
And cease from your weeping,
My place by the angel's side
I'd gladly be keeping."

The woman waked by the cradle,
And smiled in the waking.
"My baby, the pitcher of tears
To my heart I am taking.
Go, frolic and sing with your mates;
My smiles shall be given
To make a new light round your head
In the Garden of Heaven."

MISS POLLY PEABODY'S PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM.

At the time of the war, thirty years ago, Miss Polly Peabody lived alone, with the exception of her servants, in a handsome house set in beautiful grounds on the main street of the village of Atwater. There was a large veranda in front of the house covered in summer with woodbine, clematis, and other ornamental vines. Miss Polly was very proud of her old home, and the culture of her flowers was her greatest pleasure; in her garden she spent the greater part of her time, and reared some of the choicest and rarest roses, whose names she knew, and whom she used to talk to like human beings. Woe to the little urchin who ventured to come in and pluck one of them! Sometimes she would call some of the girls of the village and give them flowers, but occasionally, though not often, some ragged youngster from the lower village would rifle her garden of its choicest blooms.

One lovely summer morning when Rhoda, the colored housemaid, opened the front door, she was surprised to see what she thought was a heap of clothes lying under the bench on the veranda. She poked it with the broom, wonderingly, when it suddenly unrolled and resolved itself into two little boys, one about six years and the other not more than four. They rubbed their sleepy blue eyes and gazed at Rhoda's shining black face and white cap in astonishment and fear. The younger began to cry in a frightened sobbing way, but the elder said: "Now, Jacky boy, keep quiet, and I will ask for some breakfast. Please ma'am, can we have some bread and milk?"

"Who are you in de name of peace, and whar did you come from?" asked Rhoda.

"I am mamma's little man," answered Teddy, "and we came to-day—no, yesterday, in the cars by ourselves."

"By yourselves? Lord love you, little boy, nobody wouldn't let two young 'uns like you trabble by yo'selves."

"But we had to come somewhere," persisted Teddy. "The men took mamma away on a visit, and said they would take us to the almshouse to wait for her, and Jacky and I guessed we could find her ourselves, so we got onto the train, and the conductor didn't see us till we got here, and then he put us off at the station and we walked right up here, for this is the beautifullest house we ever saw, and we will wait for mamma right here, and now please give us some breakfast."

Just at this moment Miss Polly appeared at the hall door, ready for breakfast, and seeing Rhoda talking to someone, came forward to see who it was. Each little fellow took off his cap and bowed politely to her, showing that they recognized her as a lady, and that they had been well taught. This pleased Miss Polly at once, and she exclaimed:

"Why boys, where is your home? What are you doing on my porch? Have you been here all night?"

"Yes'm," answered Teddy. "We came because it is the prettiest house in town, and we would rather wait for mamma here, if you please, than anywhere else. But we are very hungry, ma'am, and if you give us some bread and milk it would be nice, I think."

"Well, well, well!" said Miss Polly. "Rhoda, we must give them their breakfast, and then see if we can find out who they are and send them to their friends, who will be greatly alarmed at their absence."

The boys were soon seated at table, and though they chattered and laughed continually, Miss Polly could not discover by their talk who they were or where they had come from, only that they had ridden a long way in the cars, and were to wait for their mamma. At last she sent them out in the front yard to play, watching them carefully through the slats of her Venetian blinds, while she sent her man Eben for the minister, Mr. Hallowell, whom she wished to consult about the matter. She saw Teddy and Jack roaming from flower to flower, and once was almost startled to see them pause before a magnificent Paul Neyron rosebush, fully expecting every blossom to be torn from its stem. But no. Teddy gently drew down the flower, and looking into its pink depths, touched it lightly with his lips, and let it go again.

"They are boys in a thousand!" exclaimed Miss Polly to herself. "They are such little gentlemen, and they must have a gentle, well-bred mother. I do wonder who they are. Here comes Mr. Hallowell, I do hope he will be able to discover all about them.

All that could be elicited from Teddy, was what he had already told Rhoda, that they had come a long way in the cars, because some men had taken their mamma away, and they were going to wait for her in this lovely house.

"And, ma'am, if you will let us stay until she comes," said Teddy, gazing wistfully up into Miss Polly's face, "neither Jacky or I will be any trouble to you at all. We will be good little men, as dear mamma always told us to be. But oh, where is mamma? Why doesn't she come to us now—right away—we do want her so," he sobbed suddenly. "Won't you bring her soon, sir?" turning to Mr. Hallowell, who stood looking at him with tears in his eyes.

"My dear little boy," said the clergyman, "I will do what I can to find her for you. Just stay with Miss Polly to-day, and be quiet and obedient boys, and this evening I will come and tell you what I have found. I will telegraph in every direction, Miss Polly, and there will certainly be some clew to their identity." So he took his leave, and Miss Polly turned her attention to the boys.

"Come here, Jacky boy, and sit in my lap, and tell me where papa is, and what mamma did, and what the house looks like where you lived," said Miss Polly.

Jacky responded quickly to her invitation to sit on her knee, but instead of answering questions, he laid his curly yellow head on her bosom, and cuddling up comfortably in her arms, fell fast asleep.

"Jack's no good at answering questions," said Teddy, with a superior air. "He always does just like that—goes to sleep. But I can tell you everything, Miss Polly."

"Well, my boy, tell me what kind of a house you live in, and where it was."

"It wasn't a house at all, Miss Polly. It was only one room, and there were, oh, ever so many stairs up to it. You see Mrs. Flanigan lived first, then Mrs. Dougherty, and then mamma. We had a stove, and a sewing machine, and mamma sewed hard all the time, and then she sewed when she was lying down on the bed, and I threaded her needles, and one day she said to me, "Teddy dear, I am going to my father's house." Then Mrs. Flanigan came and took us down stairs to play with Eddy, and when I heard a noise, and ran up stairs to see what was the matter, the men said to me that mamma had gone, I s'pose to her father's house, and told us to wait for her. But we could not wait, Jacky and I, so we slipped out early and got on the cars and came here, and you will let us stay till she, comes won't you, Miss Polly?"

"But where is your papa, Teddy?"

"Oh, papa—he was killed in the war, and mamma cried, and cried, and cried, and I told her I would take care of her, so she always called me her little man. Oh, I do wonder where she is now, and if she won't soon come to us. Don't you think she will come soon?" he asked earnestly. Miss Polly gave a tightening clasp to Jacky—his warm little body nestled so closely in her lonely arms, and said huskily:

"We will see, Teddy, dear; we will see."

She laid Jacky down on the lounge, and covered him comfortably with her Rob Roy afghan, and then looked about the room for something wherewith to entertain Teddy, while she held her daily consultation with the cook. At last she took a large photograph album from the shelf and seating the boy in a chair by a little table in the bright sunny window, she left him turning over its leaves, with many injunctions to be careful in looking at the pictures, and on no account to let it fall. She had scarcely begun her conference with cook when a loud shout in the hall startled them both. The quiet house was unused to such vociferous calling as now sounded through it.

"Miss Polly—Miss Polly—Miss Polly—e-e-e," rang out in Ted's sturdy voice. "Miss Polly, Miss Polly!"

"What in the world can be the matter?" cried Miss Polly, as she and cook ran as fast as their nervousness and stoutness would allow them up the basement stairs, to see Ted with the album in his hands, dancing up and down in great excitement and shrieking for "Miss Polly" in the most alarming manner.

"What is the manner, Teddy? Did a bee come in and sting you, or what are you screaming about. Stop this moment," and Miss Polly, all breathless from her hurried flight up the stairway, seized him by the arm.

"Oh, dear, Miss Polly, just look here," sobbed the little fellow. "Here is dear mamma before she went away—just as she used to look—dear, sweet mamma. And here is a picture of papa, like she had at home! Oh, if she only would hurry back to her little boys!"

Miss Polly took the album with a shaking hand, and gazed at the picture before her, of a sweet-faced girl in a simple white gown—her wedding gown—beneath which was written one word—"Fanny."

She dropped the book on the floor and clasping the wondering Ted closely in her arms, cried aloud over him until he was frightened, and put up his little hand to smooth her cheek in a comforting way.

"Oh, you darlings!" cried Miss Polly. "You are Fanny's boys, and I never knew it! Fanny dead! My dear niece whom I treated with such harshness and neglect, because she would marry Richard Warford! God has punished me for my wickedness! I always meant to find her out and atone for my harshness! Too late! too late. Oh, Rhoda, these are Miss Fanny's children," she said, as Rhoda appeared upon the scene.

"I knowed they was no common white trash," said the maid, "as soon as I laid eyes on 'em."

Just then Mr. Hallowell arrived, bringing with him a man who was in search of the children.

Mrs. Warford had died suddenly—her body had been buried by the directors of the poor—her children were to be kept by Mrs. Flanigan until otherwise disposed of—for no clew had been found to her friends, though her room had been thoroughly searched, except a scrap of an envelope, which bore the postmark of Atwater.

When the boys disappeared so mysteriously it was thought probable that they had gone to some one at Atwater. So the whole mystery was cleared up. Miss Polly adopted Ted and Jack as her own children, to atone partially for her unkindness to their lonely mother; though she could never forgive herself for not having gone to Fanny, when she first knew that Richard Warford had fallen at the battle of Chattanooga.

The old home at Atwater now resounds with the joyous laughter of children. Miss Polly's heart is full of tenderness for all, and she sacredly cherishes the photograph album which brought such a happy discovery.—Religious Herald.

CLOTHES HELPED HER RECOVERY.—"One of the things that helped my recovery," said a woman recently, who has just regained her health after a serious illness, "was a pretty bed jacket which my sister brought me one day in lieu of jellies and fruit. It was becoming and I enjoyed it.

"The doctor when he first saw me in it said I looked 20 per cent better than the day before; man-like he didn't appreciate the reason, and my spirits, and consequently my condition, bettered in proportion.

"Too often invalids are wrapped in any old thing that is handy. I remember laughing once when a friend showed me a dainty, lace-trimmed sick gown, 'for me,' if I ever need it.'

"The notion struck me as absurd, when she was never ill, but after my experience with that bed jacket I appreciate better the value of attractive environment under depressing circumstances."—Boston Globe.

The Other Side of Life's Troubles.

I didn't ask to come here, and I do not want to stay;
I don't find much place for me—as a rule I'm in the way.
What I feel as if I could do I get no chance to try;
I see no fun to live for, and I have no right to die.

I'm made no part and struggle for what I'm not to win;
I hate myself to meanness and I'm just cut out to sin;
I'm set racing down a road for a goal it does not lead to;
I'm held liable for lots of things I never have agreed to.

The life I never wanted I'm expected to give thanks for;
I'm required to draw prizes that I'm given only blanks for;
I'm here without my sanction, yet in duty bound to stay;
I yearn to build a marble house, and I must work with clay.

Well! I didn't ask to come here, and I do not care to stay;
And—though I face the music—I've just a word to say,
Life's hard enough to swallow, I don't want the bitter pill;
But it's quite too much to take it and be licked for being ill!

HOW THE MESSAGE CAME.

Many a little hero is covered with fur or feathers, and dies as bravely while doing his duty as any soldier who ever laid down his life for his country or his king. Mr. Darwin tells of one such hero, an old baboon, which rushed out among some hunters who were shooting and capturing his companions, and rescued a little baboon which probably was a relative. But that now-famous animal was no more an hero than any brave dog that loses his life while defending the property of his master, or any bluebird that dies while trying to drive a snake from the nest of its young ones. Almost any animal will face death without a second's hesitation in order to save a creature that it loves. Such cases are so common that little notice is taken of them, but we have learned of an instance of another sort of heroism in which a bird gallantly lost its life last autumn while trying to do a service to a young lady.

Everybody remembers the races of 1893 between the Vigilant and the Valkyrie for the possession of the America's cup—the international yachting trophy. It was during the first race that the feathered hero lost his life. Among the smaller craft that sailed down New York Bay on the morning of October 5th was the schooner-yacht Yampa, and among the passengers on board were five carrier-pigeons. They belonged to a gentleman living in West Fifty-seventh street, New York, and one of them was to be freed at each important point in the race, and bring the news back to the city to the daughter of the Yampa's owner. As a carrier-pigeon flies from fifty to one hundred miles an hour, it is the best possible messenger between a vessel and the shore, and if all went well, the exact condition of affairs in the regatta outside Sandy Hook would be known in West Fifty-seventh street thirty minutes after every critical period in the race. It may not be known generally, but the name of a carrier-pigeon's owner is usually stamped on the bird's larger feathers, so that if he is wounded or lost, and falls into the hands of persons who know a carrier-pigeon when they see him, word may be sent to his owner.

The starting point of the first international regatta last fall was the Sandy Hook Lightship, which lies out in the Atlantic beyond New York Bay. As persons interested in yachting may remember, the British yacht got away first, and as soon as she crossed the line a slip of thin paper bearing a message was fastened to the foot of a strong gray and white pigeon, and the bird was tossed into the air.

As may be seen by examining the photographs of the message printed with this article, one side of the paper read, "11.20—Wind light, N by West," and the other side read, "Valkyrie over first." If all had gone well, this message would have reached the house of the pigeon's owner sooner than any other news of the regatta. The pigeon rose high into the air, made several circles, each larger than the one before, and finally darted off like an arrow towards its home. Nobody has ever discovered how a pigeon finds out which way to fly on its return journey. If taken hundreds of miles from home in a basket, and then liberated, it will rise in the air, fly about in great circles for a few minutes and then choose the direction which leads in a straight line to its cote. As the race progressed, changed into a drifting match, and the Vigilant overhauled and passed the Valkyrie, the other four pigeons were let loose from the Yampa, each with a message fastened to its leg.

When the passengers on the Yampa reached home late at night their first inquiry was for the pigeons. Four had arrived safely, but the first one released—the one bearing the news that the Valkyrie had crossed the starting-line first—had not been seen. It did not reach home the next day, nor the next, and was given up as lost. But though the pigeon never reached home, one of his feathers and the message did arrive there safely, as the following letter received by the bird's owner will show:

BARREN ISLAND, Oct. 7, '93.

MR. HUSSON,—I thought perhaps you would like to know what become of your pigeon. I hereby notify you that I seen a hawk flying with a pigeon, so I shot at him and the hawk dropped the pigeon; it was the hawk that killed him. This slip of paper was on his leg. Yours,

JAMES MCAVOY,
Barren Island, N. Y.

The pigeon evidently got his bearings correctly, and was hurrying home with his message when death in the shape of a hungry hawk overtook him. Barren Island lies in the middle of Jamaica Bay, off the southern shore of Long Island and in a straight line between Sandy Hook Lightship and Fifty-seventh Street, New York. Is is one of the dearest places on earth. On it are fish-oil manufactories and other devices for making bad odors, and to this ill-smelling place gulls and other birds of prey flock to feed on refuse. It was one of the highwaymen of the air that seized the carrier-pigeon and killed him before a shot from Mr. McAvoy's gun frightened the hawk so badly that he dropped his booty. The name on the pigeon's feather showed who his owner was, and so the feather with the stamped address and the blood-stained message reached their destination after all.—Harper's Young People.

A little fellow had been seriously lectured by his mother, and finally sent into the garden to get a switch with which he was to be punished. He returned soon, and said, "I couldn't find a switch, mamma, but here's a stone you can throw at me."

The Robin and the Nightingale.

My little robin, seven years old,
Awoke one morning, bright and early.
And what a fearful dream he told
About a bruin bold and burly!

"A most modendous bear," he said,
"Came up to me, his eyes were gleaming!
He scared me almost out of bed!
Why, papa, didn't you hear me screaming?"

And when I laughed to hear his tale,
He answered, with his sweet face beaming!
"I guess it was a nightingale—
I often have them when I'm dreaming!"

WHERE A DOLLAR LASTS A LONG TIME.

A good story illustrating one phase of the silver question was told by Lawyer Solomon Lincoln at the Boston Merchants' club, of which he is a member.

"People living on the border between Mexico and the United States ought to be pretty well satisfied with the present condition of affairs," said he, "with things as they are in the vicinity of El Paso, Tex.

"El Paso is located on the Rio Grande. If you cross the river you are in Mexico. In El Paso an American silver dollar is worth 100 cents, but if you go over into Mexico it is worth only 85 cents.

"A Mexican silver dollar on the other hand, is subject to a discount of 15 per cent in El Paso. So that there is retaliation, you see.

"When a citizen of El Paso is thirsty he steps into a bar-room in his town and orders a lemonade or something stronger and planks down an American silver dollar on the counter.

"The drink is placed on the counter.

"After the customer has quenched his thirst he picks up his change.

"This does not consist of 85 American cents. Oh no! The price of the drink was 15 cents, but the change consists of a Mexican silver dollar, worth but 85 cents.

"Later in the day the citizen of El Paso crosses the river and pays a visit to the Mexican town on business or pleasure.

"He becomes thirsty again.

"Entering a Mexican bar-room he steps up to the counter and says:—

"Whisky!"

"The drink is placed on the bar, and after draining the glass the El Paso man settles. This time he pays for his drinks with a Mexican silver dollar.

"The Mexican bartender smiles deprecatingly as he gives the customer his change—an American silver dollar, worth, of course, but 85 cents.

"Then the American crosses over to El Paso again. He can go home and spend the night with his family or he can buy another drink in his town and get another Mexican silver dollar.

"He can go back and forth all day, you see, get all he wants to drink, and still have a silver dollar in his pocket.

"It may be an American or it may be a Mexican silver dollar, it makes no difference to him.

"Is it any wonder that the people of El Paso are satisfied with the present status of the silver question?"—New York Advertiser.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE COMMON COW.

The possibilities of the common cow have been strikingly demonstrated by interesting experiments at the Cornell experiment station in New York. Prof. Roberts says, as reported by the Homestead, that the average farmer can make a better dairy cow than the Island or Jersey ever saw, and with common stock to start with. They started with common stock at Cornell with a production of less than 3000 pounds of milk per cow per year, and have now secured an average of 8000 pounds. The herd includes both Holsteins and Jerseys. They have Jerseys that have gone beyond the 6000 line. A good dairy farmer can do better than this, because he has the direct control, and does his own work of feeding and milking, while Prof. Roberts, with his class-room and other work, has to care for the stock at arm's length. The grain fed at the Cornell university farm for average animals consists as a rule of about eight pounds of grain per day for each cow in milk. This grain is composed of one-fourth cotton seed, one-fourth bran and one-half oats, corn or other grain that can be got at a reasonable price. These foods are easily procurable by almost every farmer. Now what the farmer should do is to procure these foods and experiment in his own barn with the ordinary stock of his neighborhood. This should be done by the use of the very best type of dairy bulls and selecting the best of heifer calves.

Prof. Roberts purchased from the country two cows that were, so far as known, destitute of blood, and to the everlasting credit of these two "scrubs" one gave 8655 pounds of milk and 382 pounds of butter fat, and the other 10,754 pounds of milk with 440 pounds of butter fat in one year. Their best Jersey gave 8028 pounds of milk and 391 pounds of fat; their best Holstein gave 11,162 pounds of milk and 174 pounds of fat. The common cows ate the most food, gave the most milk and fat and at the least cost. The milk of the two commons cows cost 53 cents per 100 pounds and the fat 12½ cents per pound. The milk of the Jerseys cost 78 cents per 100 pounds and the fat 15 cents per pound. The cost of 100 pounds of Holstein milk was 58 cents and that of a pound of fat 17 cents. The real point is that the common cow has not had justice done her. Feed and treat a well-selected herd of common cows as if they were Jerseys and you will soon think that you have a herd of thoroughbreds.

The New Law Regarding the Drawing of Jurors.

Probably few persons know that the last Legislature passed an act relative to the selection of jurors, and that it goes into effect on the first of August. It has been charged that in some cities there has been great laxity, if not corrupt manipulation in the drawing of jurors, and the new law aims to regulate that matter more for the best interests of the public. It certainly will tend to the retention of a better class of names on the jury lists, and while busy business men may find it inconvenient to attend at times, the tendency will be to lessen those verdicts which are sometimes rendered manifestly because the jury is composed largely of men who are on a near level with the one being tried, and sympathize with him. The new law reads as follows:

Section 1. When jurors are to be drawn in any city, the mayor and city clerk shall attend, with the aldermen, at the aldermanic chamber. The ballots in the jury box shall be shaken and mixed together, and one of the aldermen, to be designated by the mayor, shall, without seeing the names written thereon, openly draw therefrom a number of ballots equal to the number of jurors required. Such alderman shall announce in a clear and distinct tone of voice, the names of the jurors so drawn, and shall then hand the ballots drawn by him to the mayor, who shall examine and verify the same. The mayor shall then hand such ballots to the city clerk, who shall announce in a clear and distinct tone of voice, the names upon the ballots, and return the same to the jury box, after making the indorsements thereon now required by law, and the names so drawn shall be recorded as part of the proceedings, and shall be published if and when the proceedings are published officially. In the absence of the mayor the chairman or president of the board of aldermen shall perform the duties required of the mayor by the provisions of this section.

Section 2. The board of aldermen of any city shall not strike any names from the jury list, as prepared, except of a person who has been convicted of a crime and has not been pardoned on the ground of his innocence of such crime, or of a person who is not qualified by law for service as a juror.

Section 3. The jury lists in cities shall be published as a public document, with the address and occupation of each juror. In towns the list, with the occupation, shall be published as part of the annual town report.

Section 4. If any person is guilty of fraud in the drawing of jurors, either by practising on the jury box previously to a draft or in drawing a juror, or in returning into the box the name of a juror which had been lawfully drawn out and drawing or substituting another in his stead, or in striking a name from the jury list, or in any other way contrary to any provision of this act, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500.

Section 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Section 6. This act shall take effect on the first day of August in the year 1894.

The Palmer Water Company to Increase Its Storage Capacity.

The scarcity of water during last summer and this has led the Palmer Water Company to take some measures toward securing a greater supply, or for storing a larger quantity than can now be held, and surveyors are now at work on the ground. Briefly, the plan is to build another and larger reservoir than either or both now in use. In both of the present reservoirs are numerous springs, while into the upper reservoir flows a brook, the water being admitted to the mains from the lower reservoir. The upper reservoir is about 800 feet long, and the plan is to go still further up the brook and build another dam, forming another reservoir, which shall have no connection with the mains. The middle reservoir will then be deepened to admit of greater storage capacity, and also to still more open the springs which abound in its bottom. The two lower reservoirs will then be used for drinking purposes, and the water from the brook will be stored in the new reservoir against a sudden demand in case of fire or in case of drouth. The capacity of the new reservoir will be twice or three times that of the two now used. Work is to be commenced at once, and completed this year.

Miss Annie Fish will enter the Vermont Seminary at Montpelier, Vt., at the beginning of the fall term.

John Foley went to the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston Tuesday to have an operation performed.

H. W. Smith is employed in the grocery store of Robinson & Taylor during the absence of D. G. Buskey.

An excursion from Springfield to Block Island will be run over the New London Northern road to-morrow.

Rev. Mr. Gleason of Warren exchanged pulpits last Sunday with Rev. Mr. Moulton of the Universalist church.

Four boys ran away from the state primary school last week, and two have been returned, being caught at Stafford.

H. E. Huntley is employed in the post office during the absence of the regular clerk, Charles Kempton, on his vacation.

The Palmers went to Three Rivers last Saturday afternoon and defeated the Three Rivers team 30 to 18 in a game of ball.

The interior of J. F. Foley's grocery store has been freshened up this week with new paint and paper on the walls and ceiling.

The plans for the Odd Fellows block have been accepted by the state inspector, and will be presented to the lodge at its next meeting.

The choir of the Congregational church will take a rest during the month of August, next Sunday being the last before the vacation.

The New London Northern road ran an excursion to Newport this morning, by way of New London and the steamer City of Lowell, 12 tickets being sold at this station.

A rear wheel on Northrop's ice wagon collapsed on Main street Tuesday morning, delaying the delivery of the congealed fluid to customers for a short time.

A number of the sportsmen were out after trout Monday, but the strings were small, the rain of Saturday night, although heavy, not having raised the brooks a great deal.

The case of Patrick Hartnett of Warren, for the larceny of a bicycle, which was called in the district court last Saturday, was continued until to-morrow.

St. Paul's Universalist church will be closed during the first two weeks of next month in all of its departments; after thi one or more will probably continue their work.

The fishermen report some excellent catches of black bass recently, the largest being that of F. O. Munger, W. A. Fitzpatrick and W. P. Webster, who captured 62 on Wednesday.

A new heater is being placed in the basement of the bank block. It is a Mills boiler, made by the H. B. Smith Co. of Westfield, and the work is being done by the Phillips Mfg. Co. of Springfield.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will meet next Tuesday afternoon to arrange the programme for the annual fair in September, and complete the necessary arrangements.

W. A. Hunt, formerly a conductor on the New London Northern road, has secured a position on the Connecticut River division of the Boston and Maine road, and moved his family to Springfield Wednesday.

The members of the Grand Army post were surprised at their last meeting to find a handsome clock in place at one end of the room. No one appears to know how it came there, but the post is grateful to the unknown giver.

Another ball nine has been organized with Twiss, p; King, c; Holbrook, 1b; Hastings, 2b; T. Rooney, 3b; Nolan, ss; Roach, lf; Cross, rf; M. Rooney, cf. Efforts are being made to have a game to-morrow afternoon with some out of town team.

M. J. Dawson, brakeman on Conductor Sedgwick's train on the Ware River road, was struck in the eye by a hot cinder Wednesday, which burned on so deeply that it had to be cut off, the operation being performed by Dr. Ellis of Monson.

The types were hard on the Palmer Carpet Company last week, announcing that last month had been the best since the company's organization, 6000 yards of carpet having been turned out. Now 6000 yards is a rather small month's work; the word month should have been week.

H. P. Holden, chairman of the selectmen, has received a letter from the Italian vice consul at Boston making inquiries about Edward Costello, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of his child. He did not make his object known, and no one can imagine the cause.

The board of health reports that with the exception of the two persons killed by the cars, there have been no deaths in this village since the first of April, a remarkably good showing. The number of deaths in town during that time has been 34, ten of which were from cholera infantum.

Mamie, a daughter of Oliver LaSalle, was bitten Monday afternoon by a small dog owned by F. L. Pierce, the animal's teeth drawing blood on the inside of the leg just below the knee. The dog is not full grown, and was evidently playing with the child, as the animal is not cross and there was no provocation for the bite.

The machinery at the shop of the Rogers-Osgood Hat Co. is being put in order for the fall work, and the work of sewing sample hats will commence probably about the 15th of August. The prospects for a good season are bright, as the hat market is completely cleaned out, and all goods sold next year must be made between now and then.

An excursion from Palmer and stations north will be run over the New London Northern road to-morrow to Lake Pleasant. Trains will leave Palmer at 8.35 and 11 a. m., Three Rivers at 8.42 and 11.08, arriving at the Lake at 9.50 a. m. and 12.15 p. m. Returning the train will leave at 5.25 p. m. The fare for the round trip is only $1. A balloon ascension is to be one of the attractions at the Lake.

A boy about 5 years of age had a narrow escape from injury Tuesday morning in front of the post office. He was standing on a sack of meal in a wagon, when the horse started and he was thrown over the front of the wagon upon the horse, going down between the crossbar and the animal's heels. Fortunately the horse did not step on him, and although he cried lustily at first he soon discovered that he was not much hurt.

Several of the members of the Palmer Bicycle Club indulged in a short road race for fun Tuesday evening. The contestants were Blakesley, Marsh, Tracy, Graham, Adams, and Allen Atkins, and the run was from the club rooms to the factory at North Monson and return, the distance being said to be six miles. Blakesley finished first in 18.46, with Marsh second in 20.20, Tracy third and Atkins fourth. Graham and Adams both had falls, as did also Atkins.

The rain which had been so long hoped for came last Saturday night, doing an immense amount of good, as trees and shrubbery were suffering for the lack of moisture, and many gardens and lawns were nearly ruined. The rain began to fall early in the evening, and continued nearly all night, a part of the time coming in torrents. Parched vegetation received a new lease of life, and the springs which had been running low were partially filled. Much more rain is needed, however.

Saturday night's rain materially bettered the water supply at the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company, though there is yet a much smaller amount than is desirable. The lower reservoir is nearly full, and while the upper reservoir does not contain more than an eighth of its capacity, there is about four times the quantity held before the rain. The size of the stream running in is not materially increased by the rain, and is only about large enough to keep the water at its present height if there is no unexpected drain.

The following will be the officers at the bicycle tournament of the Palmer Bicycle Club on Labor Day: Referee, F. U. Wetmore of Palmer; judges, W. H. Osgood of Palmer, C. L. Smith of Spencer, W. E. Draper of North Brookfield; timers, G. F. Lord and A. J. Adams of Palmer; starter, W. F. Waite of Palmer; clerk of course, W. S. Trickett of Palmer; scorers, H. W. Holbrook, J. E. Breckenridge and Calvin Hastings of Palmer; umpires, Ezra Kempton, John French, F. L. Gunn and J. Lacouline of Palmer.

Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock entertained the former members of her Sabbath school class at her residence on Squier street last Friday afternoon. Seven of the nine, with five children, were present, and enjoyed themselves, notwithstanding it was the hottest day of the season. Those present were Mrs. Arthur Barlow and daughter of Worcester, Mrs. W. W. Hall, son and daughter of Providence, R. I., Mrs. W. H. Laird, son and daughter of Palmer, Miss Anna Shaw, Miss Alice Brown, and Misses Julia and Lily Allen of Palmer. Regrets were received from Mrs. H. B. May of Lee and Miss Mabel Sedgwick of Palmer, who was at the White Mountains.

An excellent opportunity for Palmer people to visit Block Island will be offered by the New London Northern road next Wednesday, when a special excursion will be run. The train will leave Palmer at 7.35 a. m., and reach New London at 9.45. The boat will stop at Mystic Island and Watch Hill, and reach Block Island at 12.45, giving a delightful sail of three hours on the water, to be duplicated on the return trip to New London, where the boat will connect with the train for Brattleboro and intermediate stations. The fare for the round trip will be only $1.50, and the tickets will be good to return Thursday if excursionists desire to remain over night on the island.

Business at the district court has been brisk this week, but if half the drunks in town Monday and Tuesday had been brought in it would have required an immense number of cells to accommodate them over night, and the court would have been compelled to hold night sessions. On Monday Henry Hogan of Southbridge paid $5 for drunkenness. On Tuesday John Conlon of Providence, Eugene Deery of Ware and Peter Watson of Lowell disgorged $5 each, while and Louis Nephew of Palmer, with Mark Kempton of North Brookfield had their cases continued until Wednesday, when they were also relieved of $5 each; $5 was also collected of Thomas Lillehan of North Wilbraham.

Eugene Deery of Ware attempted to "do" a French physician hailing from Montreal out of a valise at the passenger station Monday. They came from Ware to Thorndike together, where they had several drinks, and then came to Palmer. Arriving here Deery offered to carry one of the Frenchman's valises, and on being given it took it to the baggage room and had it checked, refusing to give up the check, claiming that the Frenchman owed him 15 cents. The latter sought the assistance of Sheriff Studley, who vainly endeavored to persuade Deery to give up the check provided the 15 cents was paid him, and finally arrested him for drunkenness. It cost him $5 in court the next morning, in addition to what he paid the lawyer he employed. The Frenchman got his grip again.

Friends of Dr. W. H. Stowe will be sorry to learn that the blood poisoning with which he is afflicted does not seem to yield to the methods which have been employed to dissipate it, and that he has gone to the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston in order to have the best care and treatment. Some time during the winter he cut his finger on the shell of a castanha nut while cracking nuts for the birds, he being an enthusiastic ornithologist. The wound did not heal well, and a little later he had a severe attack of the grippe, and, being considerably worn out with work, he did not recover rapidly. Blood poisoning set in, and he took a vacation with friends in Vermont, going later to Thompson's Island in Boston harbor. While there the trouble grew worse instead of better, and his friends finally persuaded him to go to the hospital for treatment, where it is hoped he will be soon on the road to complete recovery.

Enrico Poggioli, the Italian who runs the fruit stand between the Nassowanno and Strong blocks, had an exciting experience with a runaway Monday afternoon. He was coming down Main street with a load of stuff for his stand, when some part of the harness gave way, and the horse started to run, getting under pretty good headway by the time the crossing at the foot of Central sfreet was reached, where the animal cleared itself of the wagon, which, however, kept right on down grade. Poggioli remained on the seat, apparently indifferent to the turn affairs were taking, but the wagon evidently knew its destination, for it kept right on toward the stand, and would have brought up there all right if the post holding the sign of the Postal Telegraph company had been a few inches nearer the sidewalk. But as it was the wagon struck the post and stopped, wherein it differed from Poggioli, who kept right on, headed for his place of business, only about twenty feet away; and literaly headed for it; neither did he stay on the order of his going, for so anxious was he to get there that he went over the dashboard head first, but his momentum was so great that he brought up in the road all in a heap, though with no serious injuries, a lame shoulder the next morning being the worst of his bruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and Miss Mattie Collis of Monson, who have been visiting their father and brother, Charles Collis, started from here Tuesday to take a carriage drive to Portsmouth, N. H., to visit their brother, Mark Collis.

The Bondsville nine played with the Amherst College nine last Saturday, the score resulting 13 to 11 in favor of Bondsville. The second nine played with the Belchertowns at Belchertown and were victorious, 22 to 18.

Orren Bowen and wife went to Lawrence Saturday to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Hattie Gretchen. She will be remembered by many Bondsville people, as she formerly lived here. Besides a husband and child she leaves a mother and two brothers.

There was a pleasant gathering of friends and children Monday at the residence of Luther Collis, to celebrate his 83d birthday. There were three generations present. Mr. Collis is still able to superintend his farm work. His children were all at home but one, who lives in New Hampshire. Four children and five grandchildren were present.

THREE RIVERS.

Rev. G. S. Butler and family have returned after a two-weeks' absence.

Mrs. Wright and family left yesterday for their new home in Eagleville, Ct.

Miss A. Belanger of Lowell, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Belanger during the past few weeks, intends to leave for her home to-morrow.

Charles Haynes has taken a contract to build a new dwelling house for Porter Jenks, on his property on the Belchertown road, adjoining P. A. Forte's land.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the U. E. church will give a lawn party on F. W. Lavene's and S. B. Barnes's lawns next Tuesday evening. Ice cream, cake and watermelon will be among the good things to make the evening enjoyable.

Captain Potter has made arrangements to increase his water system on East Main street, and is to put in a steam boiler and engine, together with other appliances, as soon as possible, in order to supply his tenements with water.

Many people have been wondering if Dr. Bliss's new bicycle is of an invisible nature, but some are beginning to believe that, as every other such article, it has the quality of tangibility, and are sure that the Dr. may be seen any morning before sunrise, wrestling with the machine.

The A. O. U. W. is to hold a clambake in Aldrich's Grove a week fromto-morrow, in the afternoon. P. A. Forte, B. Avery, J. Needham, J. Tricket, W. Twogood and H. Eaton, of this place, with C. K. Gamwell and W. A. Barnes of Palmer, are members of the committee for arrangements.

John Manning, who has for the last two years been engaged in the Overman bicycle shop in Chicopee, intends to open a meat market in the building formerly used by Desaulnier as a drug store. Mr. Manning has many friends here, who all hope that when he commences business on the first of August it will be in the most auspicious manner.

While Charles Haynes's men were boiling tar in a large caldron on East Main street yesterday the stuff became ignited and the dense clouds of smoke which it produced caused quite a commotion around town, as many thought that a fire had started in the vicinity. Prompt attention prevented any damage being done.

What would certainly have resulted in a conflagration which would have ruined the property of F. A. Ruggles and that of his immediate neighbors, was averted by the promptness and composure of Mr. Ruggles and his family. It seems that while Miss Nellie, his oldest daughter, was arranging a Florence heater on Tuesday to do some cooking, the utensil toppled over, spilling the kerosene and igniting a large quantity of kindling wood in the shed. Mrs. Ruggles, who fortunately was in the kitchen, immediately realized the danger and called for Mr. Ruggles, who hurried to the spot and brought a force-pump into requisition, with which, aided by his family, he succeeded in quenching the blaze. Soon after, as the family were seated at supper, some of them thought that smoke might still be smelled, and on investigation a large quantity of fine chips in an adjoining apartment proved to have caught fire through the wall from the former blaze. This again occasioned the sturdy use of the force-pump and the help of the family to carry water. This fire was also extinguished, but the people were thoroughly frightened, and believe that no residence has ever had a narrower escape from destruction.

THORNDIKE.

Dennis F. Sullivan will leave this week for a vacation.

Patrick Lynch of Holyoke is visiting friends in town.

Patrick Reiley, the blind boy, is at Boston for a few weeks.

Miss Lena Hefferman of Boston visited friends in town recently.

Annie Smith of Somerville is spending a few weeks with relatives here.

Miss Amanda Gay returned on Monday from her stay with friends in Gardner.

Miss Lizzie McAuliff left on Thursday for a ten-days' vacation with friends in Boston.

Edward Paradise moved his family Monday to Indian Orchard, where they will live.

Mrs. A. T. Nichols returned on Wednesday from an extended visit with friends in Enfield.

A new picket fence is being built around the Thorndike Co's. property on Pleasant street.

Miss Mamie Leahey of Holyoke spent Sunday in this place as the guest of Miss Nellie Coffee.

Miss Kate McAuley of Ware, formerly of this place, was the guest of Miss McAuliff on Monday.

Miss Ada Downey of Palmer spent part of the week in town, the guest of the Misses Hutchinson.

Mrs. Nathan Talmadge and daughter Lucy are having a vacation with friends in Swampscott.

Miss Toomey of Springfield was the guest of her sister, Mrs. William Lawton, during the past week.

Mrs. C. Morey and daughter Flora are soon to leave on a visit to friends in Gardner and Springfield.

The local court of Foresters was favored on Tuesday evening by a visit from some of the Ware brethren.

Mrs. D. F. Kennedy of Fitchburg has been the guest of Mrs. Dennis Crowley during the first part of the week.

Marshall Simson, formerly of this place, now of Gardner, was in town on Wednesday renewing acquaintances.

Miss Moran of Wilbraham and Miss Julia Hurley of Boston are the guests of Miss Mary Keefe of Pine avenue.

The overseers and second-hands in the mills had an enjoyable time at their clambake yesterday at Mr. Prescott's farm.

The Lillian Tower Company opened the season here on Wednesday evening with a fair sized audience. The performance was fair.

Several from this place attended the clambake at Indian Orchard yesterday, which was given by John Heydt, formerly of this place, now proprietor of the Indian Leap Hotel.

Misses Maggie Hartnett, Jennie and Nellie Hutchinson, Hannah Kennedy, Mary Keefe and Annie Flemming paid a visit to Flynt's Park one day this week, and enjoyed a very pleasant time.

Mrs. James D. McFarlane has a handsome evening primrose which is attracting considerable attention, and many have had the pleasure of watching its yellow blossoms open each evening. It is considered a fine specimen.

Some of the citizens complain of the manner in which they were awakened last Friday night—or early Saturday morning—by the blowing of fish horns by a party passing through the village, and hope that the occurrence will not be repeated.

The Thorndikes will play their second game at home with the West Warrens or the North Wilbrahams one week from to-morrow, and if the game is not patronized enough to pay expenses the games during the remainder of the season will be played out of town.

The ball game at Wilbraham on Saturday between the Thorndikes and Wilbrahams resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 8 to 0. Flemming of the Thorndikes pitched a winning game, but was given poor support in the field. The Thorndikes go to West Warren to-morrow afternoon to play the club there.

A bicycle owned by William Burdick of Monson was damaged by some unknown party on Sunday evening while at the house of a friend. The wheel was left near the house, and when about to return home it was found that the tires had been punctured quite badly. Should the guilty parties be discovered they will be brought before the courts.

Mrs. Cornelius McAuliff of Main street performed a very delicate as well as a skillful operation upon a small chicken one day this week, which is quite worthy of mention. The chicken could not eat, its throat was swollen badly, and to all appearances its end was near, when Mrs. McAuliff located the trouble in its throat, and after making an incision with a sharp knife, removed the obstruction, which was a large angle worm, which had become stuck in the throat. The worm was removed and the cut sewed up, which necessitated the taking of seven stitches, and at this writing the bird is the liveliest of the flock, and to all appearances will be as well as if nothing had ever occurred.

Death of Miss Mary Gerald.

Miss Mary Gerald, 21 years of age, one of the most popular and well known young ladies in town, died at the home of her parents on Pleasant street Saturday morning after several months' illness of consumption. Miss Gerald previous to her illness was employed in the mill here, and by her pleasant and ladylike ways won for herself a host of friends who deeply mourn her loss. The esteem in which she was held was shown on Monday by the large number who were present to take a last look at their friend and shopmate. The funeral took place from her late home, and the remains were taken to St. Mary's church, where prayer was offered. The interment took place in the Palmer Center cemetery, and was largely attended. The bearers were C. McAuliff, P. Fleming, M. Kelliher, M. Hurley, Thomas Longtine and John Donovan. Her parents and relatives have the sympathy of many friends in their deep sorrow.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss. PROBATE COURT.—To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Michael O'Grady, late of Monson, in said county, deceased, Greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court, for probate, by Timothy O'Grady, of Stafford, in the state of Connecticut, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, and that he may be exempt from giving a surety on his official bond as such executor.

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Palmer Journal, published at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least before said court, and by mailing postpaid or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in said estate, seven days, at least, before said court.

Witness, WILLIAM S. SHURTLEFF, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twentieth day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

3-4?6 SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, sitting in equity for the County of Hampden.

Petition of the Selectmen of the town of Palmer, in said County.

Your petitioners respectfully represent that they are of the opinion that it is necessary for the security and convenience of the public that an alteration should be made in the crossing at grade of the public way known as the Palmer and Belchertown road and the railroad of the New London Northern Railroad Company, in said town of Palmer, which crossing is between the Quaboag river, on the line of said railroad, and the village of Three Rivers, in the approaches thereto, and in the location and grade of said public way so that said public way may pass under said railroad at a point about 75 feet southeasterly of the present location of said crossing at grade.

Wherefore they pray that a commission may be appointed as provided in chapter 428 of the Acts of 1890, to decide if such alterations are necessary, to prescribe the manner and limits within which they shall be made, to determine which party shall do the work, or to apportion the work to be done between said town and said railroad company, and apportion between the commonwealth and said town their proportion of the cost of such alterations.

Dated July 14th, 1892.

W. H. BRAINERD, CHAS. E. GEICHELL, JOHN F. TWISS, } Selectmen of Palmer.

The subscribers, having been duly appointed a commission, pursuant to the prayer of the foregoing petition, hereby give notice that a public hearing will be held before this Commission upon the subject matter of said petition at the District Court Room in Palmer, in said County of Hampden, on Thursday, the twenty-third day of August next, at eleven o'clock a. m., at which hearing all parties interested therein may be present and heard.

It is ordered that the petitioners give public notice of said hearing by serving a true copy of said petition, the foregoing notice and this order upon the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the New London Northern Railroad Company, at least thirty days before the date of said hearing and by publishing the same in the PALMER JOURNAL, once a week, for three successive weeks, the last publication to be at least fourteen days before the date of said hearing, and posting the same in two public places in the town of Palmer, at least fourteen days before said hearing.

Dated this 14th day of July 94.

TIMOTHY M. BROWN, CHAS. E. HIBBARD, HENRY G. TAFT, } Commissioners.

A true copy of the petition and order of notice thereto annexed.

16-3 H. A. NORTHROP, Deputy Sheriff.

A move is on foot to establish a state highway from Monson to Palmer. The necessary plans and papers have been filed, and the state highway commission is expected next week to view the road and act in the matter. The great advantage to Monson people of a fine macadam road connecting Monson with Palmer is readily seen, and every effort will be made to further the project.

Mrs. Ellen Cuddihy died at 2 p. m. Tuesday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sullivan, in the Ellis village. The funeral was at St. Patrick's church Thursday morning, and the burial at Ware. Mrs. Cuddihy was 75 years of age, and her home had been in Monson the greater part of the time. She leaves, besides Mrs. Sullivan, two children, a son, John Cuddihy of Monson, and a daughter.

A most ingenious and artistically wrought conception is on exhibition in the Boston Store, and is attracting the attention of hundreds. It is a counterfeit of the Providence line steamer Massachusetts, sailing down the bay past Pomham light. The steamer is built of spools of cotton, over 3000 being used, and is 10 feet long, 2 feet 4 inches beam and the height of the topmost flagstaff in proportion. The background is a scene embracing a portion of Narragansett Bay, the chief point being a picture of Pomham light. The steamer rests on a layer of greenish cloth, and the whitecaps which have been artistically put on the top of the waves are an excellent substitute for salt water. The idea is a novel one, but the steamer is going to pieces, the spools being sold six for ten cents until all are gone.

WILBRAHAM.

Thomas E. Besolow, a former student at Wilbraham Academy, sails from New York to-morrow for his African kingdom, after having been nearly ten years in this country. He came here a prince, received an English education at Wilbraham Academy and entered Williams College and doubtless would have completed his course, but death entered the royal family and by the law of succession, Besolow returns a king. He has written several books, among which are "From the Darkness of Africa to the Light of America," and "A Prince in Exile," and has lectured extensively throughout the eastern and middle states. Besolow's province is situated in Central Africa.

The grocery store of Frank Gurney was entered by burglars Sunday night. The thieves gained admittance by removing the glass from a rear window. The money drawer was forced open with a small hatchet, which was found in the store, and robbed of its contents, which fortunately was only a small sum of money. The store was littered with burned matches, and a wooden box, which was used as a cover for the lamp, was pretty well charred. Many of the things in the show-case were left around the store, and Mr. Gurney is unable to say how much was taken. This is the second time this store has been broken into, and evidently it is the work of boys acquainted with the place.

BELCHERTOWN.

Local wheelmen are making themselves familiar with the course over which the road race will be run, and may be seen to start out singly and in pairs any pleasant evening, but no one can find out what time they return, although several have been snapped on the start.

It was Tuesday evening of the present week that they went rowing on Crystal Lake. But time will pass away, and ere long they returned to the shore. He repaired to the house with the oars, leaving her by the lake side. On his return he saw a form in the darkness leaning on the railing near the lake, and supposing of course that it was his companion of the evening crept stealthily toward her and placed both arms around her in a friendly embrace; he seemed to be earnest about it, too, but he found that the old adage "look before you leap" was still true, for it was a stranger whom he had saluted, his companion having taken a waiting walk toward home while he was at the house with the oars.

Mr. Covell of Worcester.

Hardly anything was accomplished at the special town meeting last Saturday. C. H. Walker was chosen moderator. The balloting for constables resulted in the reelection of those elected at the April meeting. The successful candidates and the votes given them were as follows: Thomas Cunningham, 141; H. B. Smith, 138; W. A. Putnam, 122; Clarence L. Thompson, 118; and John L. Quinlan, 115. The other candidates and their votes were: Frank Tomlinson, 64; John Collins, 60; S. J. Dufresne, 54; and J. Sheehan, 36. It was voted to ask the Massachusetts highway commissioners to build a piece of state road between this village and West Warren. The articles relating to the purchase of a hose wagon for the fire department, and the building of a wall on Southbridge street were passed over. Four hundred dollars, just enough to cover the present contract, was appropriated for street lighting, and the selectmen were instructed to use what money was available to improve the town hall building.

The convention of the Spencer Union, Y. P. S. C. E., held in the Congregational church Wednesday afternoon and evening, was a success in every way. The races of to-day and to-morrow at the Ware driving park have been carefully arranged and much real sport is expected. The classes for to-morrow are 2.37 trotting, and 2.25 trotting and pacing. There are 24 horses entered for these races, 14 in the 2.37 class and 10 in the 2.25 class. The arrangements have all been made under the National rules, and good racing is expected.

Last Friday Mrs. Sarah P. Winslow celebrated her 80th birthday. Her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren assembled to give their congratulations and best wishes. Towards evening tables heavily laden with the best of eatables were spread on the lawn and enjoyed by all present. One of the pleasant incidents of the day was a poem written and read by her granddaughter Mrs. William G. Cummings.

CARD.—To the many who by their words of consolation and acts of kindness manifested their sympathy in our recent bereavement, also for the contributions of flowers, we would extend heartfelt thanks.

Don't Scold

about washing powders. If you feel like it, it's because you haven't got the right kind. Get Pearline and see the difference. There are all kinds of imitations; powders that save work, but ruin clothes; powders that don't hurt, and don't help you; powders that are cheap to begin with, but dear enough in the end. Try them, if you won't take our word for it. But don't get them mixed up in your mind with Pearline.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S ALWAYS FALSE. Pearline is never peddled and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest and send it back. 319 JAMES PYLE, N. Y

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

MRS. HARRY E. STARR, Pottsville, Pa.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Mis' Smith.

All day she hurried to get through,
The same as lots of wimmin do;
Sometimes at night her husban' said:
"Ma, ain't you goin' to come to bed?"
And then she'd kinder give a hitch,
And pause half way between a stitch,
And sorter sigh, and say that she
Was ready as she'd ever be,
She reckoned.

And so the years went one by one,
An' somehow she was never done,
An' when the angel said as how
"Mis' Smith, its time you rested now,"
She sorter raised her eyes to look
A second as a stitch she took;
"All right, I'm coming now," says she;
"I'm ready as I'll ever be,
I reckon."

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

AND JOY WAN'T THEIR'N.

Oh, I longed her devotion to earn,
For love's passion my poor heart did burn;
And I thought, "Oh, dear me,
How happy I'd be
If I could but call myself her'n!"

"Oh, wilt thou be mine, lovely vision?
Pray give me your final decision!"
But she wept and she sighed,
And dramatic'ly cried,
"I can't, for I'm already his'n!"

Ere long the maid, demure and staid,
With outing suit begirt,
Will merrily go seek the sea
And flirt and flirt and flirt.

A REVISED VERSION.—It happened in Sunday school. The subject under discussion was Solomon and his wisdom. A little girl was asked to tell the story of Solomon and the woman who disputed the possession of a child. She timidly rose up and answered: "Solomon was a very wise man. One day two women went to him quarreling about a baby. One woman said, 'This is my child,' and the other woman said, 'No, this is my child.' But Solomon spoke up and said: 'No, no, ladies; do not quarrel. Give me my sword and I will make twins of him, so each of you can have one!'"—From the "Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine.

A CONSCIENTIOUS PARSON.—A wedding took place a short time back in a large town in the north of England, the service being conducted by a rather eccentric vicar. Two days after the ceremony he called at the house of the bridegroom's mother, but she happened to be out, so he said he would call again, which he did later on in the day, carrying two large bags under his arm."

This time he found her in. So he began by asking them to clear the table a little; then he opened the green bags, from which he took the registers. These he opened and in a most solemn tone said:

"Mrs. Williams, you have forgotten to dot the 'i' in Elizabeth."

The family breathed once more.—London Answers.

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among the medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

An Extraordinary Opportunity!

$4.80 Worth of Sheet Music, Best Book on Hypnotism, 75 Complete Stories, neatly bound, Our Monthly for one year,

All for 50 cents to every person answering this advertisement,

Transportation all prepaid,

And Also a Fine Watch Free, as a present, to the person sending each thirtieth answer received from day to day in reply to this advertisement.

IS THIS POSSIBLE? YES, IT IS TRUE!

We repeat: For 50 cents, received from you, we send you the $4.80 WORTH OF SHEET MUSIC, the best BOOK ON HYPNOTISM, also 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, and our household monthly for one year; and, besides that, we make a present to the sender of each thirtieth answer to this advertisement of a fine watch (ladies' or gents,' as desired) of excellent appearance and workmanship (regular price, $7,) absolutely free.

THE MUSIC is strictly first-class, new, COPYRIGHTED, regular 40-cent sheet music, printed in the finest manner on a superior quality of paper, with engraved title. (Publisher's price, 40 cents a sheet.) It does not consist of old or hackneyed pieces, but of perfectly new copyrighted pieces, which will be sent to our subscribers monthly, as published. As the newest pieces will be included, it is impossible to give the titles in advance, but it will comprise the latest and best vocal and instrumental pieces by the leading composers. When you see this music you will be filled with wonder at our being able to furnish it for less than several dollars. If you want to see it before accepting our offer, a sample sheet will be sent for 10 cents.

THE BOOK ON HYPNOTISM is a complete exposition of the wonderful and mysterious sciences of Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Clairvoyance and Mind Reading, and explains the secrets of these peculiar sciences so clearly and forcibly that those things which to most people have appeared strange, unreal, mysterious and supernatural, are made as plain as the light of day.

THE 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, are a collection of the most excellent and absorbing stories of love, heroism and exciting adventure.

Was so much good value ever offered anywhere for so small a sum? Here you have a supply of fresh and splendid music for a year, and an attractive supply of tip top reading for the same period, all for the small sum of 50 cents, and then you may be one of those who will receive the watches as well. This is an important thing for you to remember. We are anxious to double our subscription list within 60 days, and we have realized that a supreme effort is required, in view of the dullness of the times. If you do not already grasp the magnitude of our offer, please read it again and "take it in." Let us hear from you at once. If you can get up a club of thirty persons to join in answering this advertisement you thereby make sure of the watch, as one of the latter is presented to the sender of each thirtieth answer or subscription. The thirty subscriptions can all be sent in one letter to us. Each subscriber in such a club of course receives each and every one of the premiums mentioned above.

You need not cut out this advertisement. Simply state that you accept our offer and enclose 50 cents. Save this advertisement, as it is our contract with you, which we will carry out in every particular.

Reader, we ask you to favor us with your own immediate response. Your particular individual support is worth much to us. Address, HOMES AND HEARTHS PUBLISHING CO., No. 21 Park Row, New York. 2-17

TWO CROSS WORDS.

"Lucy, if you mean to sew on this button, I do wish you'd do it—I can't wait all day."

Tom didn't speak a bit cross, only emphatic; but I was out of temper that morning, and my head ached badly from sitting up late the night before. Tom had gone to a supper—for the second time since our marriage—given by some of his bachelor friends, and had come home the worse for it. It had provoked me intensely. So I had followed him to bed in solemn silence, and awoke none the better pleased after my sleep, on the morning alluded to. To make the matter worse, just as he spoke to me about the button, the knife with which I was cutting the bread for his lunch slipped, inflicting a deep gash on my hand, and the baby awoke and set up her sharp little cry from the cradle, all in one and the same moment.

"You can wait as long as I did last night, I reckon," I replied sharply, really angry at last. "Don't hurry me—I do all I can, and more than I am able to do with one pair of hands."

Tom dropped his button and turned toward me with a startled "Why, Lucy!"

"Don't Lucy me," I retorted, throwing down the bread and catching up the baby, while the blood streamed from my hand over her white gown. "You've done enough—you've broke my heart! I wish I had never seen you—I wish I was back again with my father and mother."

I broke down with a sob of hysterical tears, and, seeing the blood on my hand, Tom came over and knelt down beside me. "Why, Lucy," he said, his voice and eyes full of tenderness, "you've cut your hand. Why didn't you say so? Here, give me the child while you bind it up—see how it bleeds."

He held out his hands for the baby, but I snatched her away and went on sobbing.

"Don't cry, Lucy," he continued, stroking the hair back from my forehead—"please don't; I know I have done wrong, dear, but I didn't mean it. I fell in with some of the old boys, and they persuaded me against my will. But it's the last time, Lucy—the last time."

Why didn't I turn to him then, and help and encourage him? Because my mean, tyrannous temper got the better of my woman's heart.

"Oh, yes!" I said sneeringly, "it is easy enough to make fine promises—you told me the same thing before. How can you expect me to trust you now?"

Tom was spirited and quick tempered; great, loving-hearted men always are. He sprang to his feet like a flash, and, before I had time to speak or think, had left the room. I tossed the child into the cradle and rushed to the door, but it was too late; he was gone. I just caught a glimpse of him turning the corner.

I went back to the little breakfast room; how blank and drear it looked, and what a sharp, stinging thorn there was in the very core of my heart! I loved Tom, and he loved me. We had been married only eighteen months, and this was our first quarrel. I sat down with the baby in my arms, heedless of my morning work, and fell to thinking. All the old, happy days came back, and one in particular, when we sat in Dumberry Wood. It was in autumn, and all the world seemed in a blaze of gold, as the sun slid down and the squirrels scampered overhead, dropping a ripe nut now and then into my lap as I sat there, with the last rose of summer in my hair, knitting a purse for Tom.

"Lucy," he had said, as I wove in the last golden stitches, you've knit my love—my very life—up in that purse. Tell me now, before you finish it, how is it to be? Am I to have you, and—oh! I won't think of it even, Lucy, it would be too dreadful!"

"No, Tom," I answered, "you are to have the purse, and the hand that knit it, too."

Poor Tom, he cried then just like a little child—he, the bravest man in the village.

"No fault in him, only a little too wild, too fond of gay company; but you must tame him, Lucy, as your mother did me."

That was my old father's advice on our wedding day. My heart smote me dreadfully as I recalled it to mind that morning. Had I done my duty? Had I followed the example of my mother, who never let fall an unkind word?

But Tom would be home to his dinner. The thought brought me to my feet. I did my work briskly, and went about cooking just such a dinner as I knew he liked. The plum pudding was done to perfection; the baby in a clean slip, and myself all smiles to receive him when the clock struck one, but he didn't come. I put up the untasted dinner and prepared supper, and lit a bright fire in the little parlor. He should have a pleasant welcome. But he did not come. Eight, nine, ten o'clock, and I put by the untasted supper, and baby and I went up to the nursery to wait and watch. How the little thorn in my heart pierced and rankled! Tom had broken his promise, and my unkindness was the cause! Nothing else rang in my ears through the long hours.

About two o'clock I heard a noise below and went to the window. There was a man on the porch; I could see him in the dim light.

"Tom, is that you," I asked softly, putting out my head.

"Yes; open the door, Lucy; quick, the police are after me."

My heart sunk. The police after him! what could he have done? I ran down swiftly and unlocked the door. But as I did so two men wearing official badges stepped upon the porch, and one of them laid his hand on Tom's shoulder and said:

"I arrest you, sir."

"For what," I cried.

"For murder."

The floor seemed sliding from beneath my feet, but I caught at the door to steady myself and looked at Tom. At that instant the officer uncovered his lantern, and, oh, my God! there was blood on my husband's hands,

All the rest is blank. When I came to myself again I was in my own room, and kind, compassionate faces were around me. I asked for Tom. He was in prison awaiting his trial. There had been a quarrel at the tavern, whither my cruel words had driven Tom, and Tom had struck his antagonist. The man wasn't dead, though they thought he was at first—but he was badly hurt about the head. But if he recovered—well, it would not go so hard with Tom.

I arose and went to the prison; but they would not admit me. No one was to see my husband till after the trial. Another day crept by; a night; and when morning came I went to the door and opened it, with a vague feeling of expectation which always accompanies severe afflictions, and looked out. The sun was rising—God's sun—rising grandly and brightly over the black stone jail. The frost hung thick and sparkling over everything, even on the scrap of folded paper that lay at my feet. I stooped and picked it up idly, as we catch at a straw or a twig sometimes, without any motive or power of volition. The superscription caught my eye; it was my own name, and my husband's hand-writing. I tore it open, and read:

"DEAR LUCY—I have broken out of jail, and am going—well, no matter where. I didn't strike Hastings with an intention to kill him. I was intoxicated and it was more his fault than mine; but he may die and then—at any rate, it is better for you, Lucy, for me to go. I never was worthy of your love. Now you can go back to your father, and forget me and be happy. You will find the bonds for that money I have in the bank in the desk; it is enough to make you and the child comfortable. Forgive and forget me, Lucy. God bless you—you and the baby. TOM."

This was the end! That was the reward that my cross word had purchased for me! Truly, truly, the wages of sin are death. We shall not need one pang of corporeal punishment, one spark of real fire, to perfect our torment if we are lost. Conscience is all sufficient—remorse, that worm never dies. It is not for me to attempt to talk about what I suffered in the days that followed that morning! Words could not express it, save to one who has passed through the same furnace of affliction. But I lived, for sorrow and death rarely walk in each other's steps, and nursed my baby, and did what my hands had to do. I did not go back to my father. I remained at Tom's home; and kept his things all about me, even his cap hanging on the wall. Forget him? Does love ever forget?

Hastings did not die. He recovered, and made a public statement. He was more at fault than Tom was. Then he put a notice in all the papers, telling Tom to come back; but he did not come.

The winter passed away with long, long nights of bitter remorse, and tender recollections of the dear husband whose strong arms had once been my stay and support. The spring came—the summer—another winter. Three years went by—crept by.

My child, Tom's little baby, grew to be a fairy little thing, with blue eyes and golden hair, and a tongue that never tired of its childish prattling. All day long she sat on the doorstep, where the evening sunbeams slanted in, lisping to her doll and listening, while I told her of the father who would come back to us some day. For surely he would come. Surely God's mercy would vouchsafe some compensation, some pardon for such repentance as my soul had poured forth.

The third spring was peculiar; somehow the far-off sky seemed to drop down in nearer, bluer folds; the sun wore a softer radiance; the trees, the grass, the flowers, a diviner, tenderer beauty. I rose every morning and looked out of my little window at the kindling glories of morn, with a feeling of strange, tremulous expectation. I seemed to feel the shadow of some great event that winged its flight above me—one prayer of my heart seemed about to be answered.

One evening—oh, that evening! A May sky, soft and blue, hung over a green, blossoming earth. The turtle dove cooed in the distant wood, and the robin twittered to her young brood amid the milky bloom of the orchard. God's love shone in the golden brightness of the westward going sun. My child, little Effie, sat on the doorstep talking to her doll and watching the birds. All at once she clapped her dimpled hands and bounded to her feet.

"Mammy," she cried gleefully, "pappy comin'—pappy comin'; Effie go meet him!"

The words stirred my heart to its utmost depths; and, dropping my work, I followed her out of the door. A man was coming up the garden path—his garments tattered, his step slow and uncertain. A beggar, no doubt. I called Effie to come back, but she ran on heedless of my command. Tom's little spaniel that I had petted and taken care of for his sake, darted from his kennel with a peculiar cry, such as I never heard from it before. What did it all mean? My heart throbbed and my knees trembled. Little Effie ran on, holding out both dimpled hands, her golden curls blown all about her rosy face. "How-de-do, pappy? I'se your Effie," she lisped, as she reached the man's feet.

He stopped and raised her in his arms, and then his glance rested on me. And such a glance—such a face! Pale, haggard, worn by sorrow and suffering to a mere shadow. Tom's ghost came back from the grave. Not that, either, for my arms grasped some tangible form.

"Oh, Tom," I cried, "is it you? Speak, speak and tell me!"

"Yes, Lucy, it's me. I could bear it no longer. I'm dying, I believe—and I couldn't go without seeing you and the little one again."

My arms held him fast, tattered, garments and all; my kisses fell on his poor, pale face like rain. I would never let him go again.

"Tom, Tom," I sobbed, getting down on my knees before him, "oh, forgive me! forgive me! I have suffered so much.'

"It is me that must ask forgiveness, Lucy," he said humbly, "not you—I was wrong—"

But I stopped him short.

"No, Tom, my cross word did it all," I said; "but for that, we might have been happy together all these weary years."

"Mammy, mammy," interposed Effie, twisting herself around on her father's shoulder, "don't cry no more; pappy's come back.

Yes, thank God, he has come back, poor, and tattered and hungry—like the prodigal—but my Tom, my husband, nevertheless. I would never speak cross to him any more.

It is spring time again. The sweet May sunlight steals in at my window as I write, and I hear the turtle dove in the distant wood. My husband is a man now, standing up proudly, his feet upon the grave of the old temptation. I know that God's mercy is equal to His justice, and His love greater than either.

NO MYSTERY AT ALL.

In fact, the Gold-fish did Spill the Water.

If you put a gold-fish in a vessel filled to the brim with water, why won't the water overflow?

This question was once discussed at length by a learned society. One day a plain, practical man made the experiment. He found, of course, that the fish, like any other body, displaced its weight in water. Thus we see the danger of jumping at conclusions. It has been thought that a man who takes much open-air exercise must eat meat and other solid foods. But what if his stomach rebels against them?

James C. Collin, of Syracuse, N. Y., suffered agonies with indigestion and lost flesh fast. Read what he says: "In justice to Paskola I will say that I average about five miles of walking daily (Sundays excepted) and eat no meat or fish of any kind, because I do not crave them. Paskola is indeed a food and a royal one too. I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends."

In less than a month, while using Paskola, Mr. Collin gained 6½ pounds. Beside nourishing the body itself, Paskola assists in the digestion of other foods.

J. Calvin Barnard, of London, N. H., says: "I began taking Paskola January 1, 1894. I had been sick seven or eight weeks and was so low as to be unable to be weighed; could not turn myself in bed alone.

"My friends and the doctor thought I must go down. The first dose of Paskola gave me a little appetite and I began to revive. My strength increased so that in a week from the time I took Paskola I weighed 83 pounds and the next week I weighed 88 pounds; while in five weeks from the first I have gained 20 pounds.

"I feel encouraged. I am yet weak, but my strength is increasing every day. My general weight is from 140 to 150 pounds. I verily believe that, with the help of the good Lord, Paskola has done a wonderful work for me. For years I have suffered so much with indigestion and constipation. I have doctored and taken this and that, but of no avail."

A pamphlet telling just what Paskola is, will be sent free on application to
The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

SPEAKS THE TRUTH.

Dr. David Kendedy's Favorite Remedy will do all that is claimed for it. "I was a sufferer for years with dyspepsia and kidney complaint. Favorite Remedy cured me."

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

Missing.

Our children they number—well seven,
There's Richard, the lawyer, you see.
And Asher, the doctor, while Ezra,
The scholar has took his decree.
Then, too, there is Ivan and Linus,
And Arthur, the painter, at Rome.
But dearest of all is our Edgar—
The lad who has never come home.

He went off to war in the sixties,
With his knapsack and musket so brave!
He fought, so they told us, at Shiloh,
The papers the whole story gave,
And then after that we lost record,
His regiment was sent here and there,
And mother and I simply waited—
We couldn't give up in despair.

We had but one letter from Edgar,
All faded and yellow to-day;
It tells of some wearisome marching,
And how near the enemy lay;
And next came a terrible battle,
When half of the regiment went down!
Our poor lad was never seen after—
His mother put on a black gown.

But still I keep watching and waiting,
And can't believe Edgar is dead,
He stood just six feet in his stockings,
And his was a handsome young head,
With eyes the merriest of hazel,
Ah, yes, I remember him well!
His brown hair was glossy and curling—
It was never known that he fell.

Perhaps, he is living and happy,
And quite forgot mother and me.
He may have gone West, I am thinking,
Or stayed there in old Tennessee;
He may fill a grave 'neath the South sod—
Yes, after all, that would be best!
We couldn't bear knowing our dear lad
Was hiding away from the rest.

I still count him in with his brothers—
He's one of them dead or alive.
Our brightest, and eldest, and bravest,
The fittest it seemed to survive.
He may be a wanderer—roofless!
The years have been many to roam,
I wait for him, yet, all unknowing—
My lad who has never come home.

—Mrs. F. Amden.

AN UNCONSCIOUS HERO.

"Now, Ik, here you are again, werking for us, when you ought to be tending to your own place," remonstrated Mrs. Harold.

Ik started, scrambled up from his kneeling posture, jerking his excuse for a hat from his kinky head, and stood before his former mistress with a countenance indicative of having been caught in the midst of unworthy deeds, a quaint, shabby, grimly figure in garments that defy my feeble descriptive powers, an unmistakable son of the darkest Africa, of uncertain age, and indescribable personality.

"Ef you please, Miss Mary," said he, with look and tone expressive of profound apology, "I was jest a-weedin' Miss Nell's pansy blossoms. Dey's choked up wid de grass, dey is, and needs 'tention mighty bad, dey does."

"So they do, Ik. And so does everything else about the place. However," she added with a sigh, "unless I manage better in the future than I have in the past I will soon have no claim upon it."

"Whot dat you sayin', Miss Mary?" asked Ik, lifting his head quickly, "ain't gwine to sell de ole place, is you, mistress?"

"Sell it, Ik! Don't you remember Mr. Grimsby's mortgage?"

"I 'members it, mistress, well enough," responded Ik, with deep dejection, dropping his head again and moving uneasily from one foot to the other, "but I t'ought dat bu'ness done been 'ranged long o' Mars Philip an' Mars Grimsby."

"So it was for a time, Ik,; but another payment, the last payment, will be due on the last day of this month, and unless I can meet that payment promptly, Mr. Grimsby declares the old place must go."

"Can't Mars Phil?",begun Ik anxiously.

"No," said Mrs. Harold. "He has done all he could, as a lawyer and as a friend, for us, and he can do no more. He is a poor man himself, and he has a large family of his own. Five hundred dollars is not easy to get these days, Ik," with a faint smile.

Ik looked up quickly again.

"Five hundred dollars, Miss Mary?"

"Yes, Ik, five hundred dollars. And if I could pay it the old place would be my own again, and with a little help, I could soon have it in good condition and be comfortable once more, Ik, and put Miss Nell at school, and be able to help you and Martha along. You have done so much for us!"

"Five hundred dollars!" repeated Ik again, thoughtfully, anxiously. Then with a quiver in his humble tones, "As to me'n Marthy, mistress, whot's me'n Marthy done fer you? Whar'd we be only fer you and marster dat's ded? Didn't he give us dat place of ourn, and sot us bof free long 'fore freedom come and keered for us an' helped us long as he lived? Mistress you done forget all dat."

"No, Ik, and I haven't forgotten all your faithful service to your master, and to me since your master died, and I am not likely to forget. You deserve a great deal more than you ever have received or ever will receive."

Ik shook his head, drew his hand across his eyes, and opened his lips twice in unavailing effort to articulate some sort of protest.

"Well, well, Ik," said Mrs. Harold, gently, "perhaps things will come out all right somehow. We'll try to make the best of them in any case. How is Martha to-day?"

"Fa'rely, mistress, fa'ley. Dat ile you sent her helped her rheum'tism might'ly."

"I am glad to hear it Ik; I'll go down to see her in the morning; I sent Nell down today."

"T'ank you, mistress; I left Miss Nell dar when I come up here dis afternoon. Is you gwine to de sto', Miss Mary? Let me go fer you?"

"No," said Mrs. Harold, moving away down the garden path, "I am going to see Lawyer Graves. See that Miss Nell comes home before dark, Ik."

She walked slowly on, and Ik stood still and stared after her, thoughtfully but vaguely.

"Five hundred dollars!" muttered he, "An' she's got to hab it by de las' of dis mont' and dis is de middle! Five hundred dollars! An' to tink I 'members de time when marster t'ought nothin' o' spendin' five thousand dollars, and when dat same old Grimsby'd a-ben in de po'house, long o'his kin, ef it hadn't a-been fer my marster, an' now he think to take de roof from over my mistress' head. Him dat ain't no better'n de dus' under her foots! 'Fore God I hopes he'll swing from de gallus fust, I does!" and Ik fell upon his knees again and began an unnecessarily savage onslaught upon the fresh green grass among Nell's pansy blossoms.

"Ef you please, Mars Phil!"

"Well, Isaac," said Lawyer Graves, turning from his desk and looking kindly and inquiringly at his sable visitor, who stood hesitatingly half in and half out of the office door, "come in. What can I do for you? A message from Mrs. Harold!"

"No, sah," said Ik, approaching to within a few yards of the lawyer and pausing abruptly, shifting from his right foot to his left as he stood, and twisting his old black hat unmercifully with his two coal-black nervous hands. "I'se come on a little bus'ness o' my own dis mornin', sah.

"Business of your own, eh, Iks Well, out with it, old man. Let us hear what it is."

"Ef you please, Mars Phil," said Ik, hesitatingly and doubtful, "I—I's sold my place, sah!"

"Sold your place!" exclaimed the lawyer, astonished. "Why, Isaac, what possessed you? Mr. Harvey told me two months ago that you refused a good offer from him."

"So I did, Mars Phil, so I did, sah! but—but—I's sole it to him now. You see, Mars Phil, it was jinin' o' dat fiel' o' his'n an' he wanted it mighty bad," added Ik, apologetically.

"I see, Ik. But what do you want to do? What do you want me to do for you? You are not going to leave the country, I hope?"

"No, sah, I ain't no such notion as dat. You see, Mars Phil, sah," continued Ik, still shifting uneasily and staring down at the persecuted hat in his restless hands, "I was kinder tired like livin' in one place so long, an' I 'cluded 'twould be de bes' for me'n Martly to live nigher de big house. Dere's a little bit of a shanty in de back yard by de kitchen dat Miss Mary'll let us have till, till, sumudder 'rangements kin be made, and we'll be nigh enough to help Mistress and Miss Nell more'n we does now, an'—"

"Ik," interrupted Lawyer Graves, "does Mrs. Harold know that you have sold your place?"

"No, sah," responded Ik with evident reluctance.

"It was a nice place, Isaac, and you were very comfortably fixed. A very nice place."

"So 'twas, Mars Phil. So 'twas, sah!" assented Ik eagerly. "Marster hoped me me 'long wid it, and hoped me to pay fer de house, an'—an'—but Mars Harvey wanted it powerful bad, an'—"

"How much did he pay you for it, Ik?"

"Seven hundred an' fifty dollars, Mars Phil; more'n he offered me at fust. An' so," continued Ik, still bent on apologizing for the disposal of his own and lawful property, "I 'cluded to sell out and live nigher de big house' and keep Miss Mary an'—"

"But, Isaac," said Lawyer Graves, "do you know that within a week's time, in all probability, Miss Mary will no longer have any claim upon the big house? You ought to have consulted her before you sold your place. You are better off to-day than your old Mistress, Isaac. I've worked hard to set things straight, but I don't see any help for her. What are you going to do with your seven hundred and fifty dollars, Ik? If"—he stopped abruptly and looked hard at the shambling, awkward, uneasy figure, looked so hard and searchingly that the anxious, wishful eyes fell beneath his gaze.

"In a week's time, did you say, Mars Phil, sah?"

"In less than a week's time, Isaac, your old mistress and her daughter will be houseless and homeless, as far as I can see to the contrary."

"Mars Phil," stammered Ik, hurriedly still looking down and crushing the shapeless mass in his hands, "I done come here dis mornin' to tell you,—to ax you—to—but I dunno how to go 'bout it. Me'n Marthy wuz thinkin', Mars Phil, sah, could'nt you—couldn't some white gem'man—"

"Isaac!" shouted Lawyer Graves, springing to his feet, grasping him by the shoulder and shaking him till his teeth chattered and his unfortunate rag of a hat fell from his trembling hands. "What have you done? What have you done?"

"Mars Phil!" uttered Ik, in frightened tones, shrinking from the lawyer's grasp, "'deed, Mars Phil, I didn't mean no harm. I didn't mean my mistress to know de money cum fum me! She told me, you told me, Mars Phil dat de money couldn't be got nohow, an' we couldn't b'ar, me'n Marthy, to see de ole place go like dat, an' so—an' so O Mars Phil, sah, 'deed I didn't mean no harm!"

"Harm!" cried the lawyer, with shining eyes and unsteady lips, "Isaac! Isaac! You have done what the noblest gentleman in the land might be proud of having done, what not one 'white gem'man' in a million would think of doing! You have sold the roof from over your head, you, in your old age have thrown yourself out of house and home to—O Ik, Ik!"

"You'll do it den, Mars Phil?" cried Ik, eager and excited, appoaching the lawyer as he sank back into his chair and touching his hand with the tip of his black finger; "you'll save de ole place an' never let 'em know,—min' dat, Mars Phil!—never let 'em know whar de money cum fum!"

"I'll do it, Ike. Who wouldn't do it! But where's your money, Isaac?"

"Here, right here, Mars Phil!" and drawing an old stocking from somewhere about his person, Ik emptied its contents into the lawyer's hands.

"Isaac! Isaac! said Lawyer Graves, "give that stocking to me. I'll keep it so long as there's a shred of it left, and who else will be able to show a like souvenir? Who else will be able to tell a story such as I can and will tell? There's two hundred and fifty dollars I'll put down to your credit till you call for it. That's over and above the five hundred, you know. There's something else written against your name in a mighty book, Isaac—but I'm talking Greek to you! Go along, and tell Mrs. Harold I must see her immediately, and that I have good news for her. But no! Send Grimsby here. I'll settle with Grimsby first, and then I'll see her."

And Ik, with beatified countenance, picked up his disreputable headgear and shuffled off as fast as his feet in their ragged coverings could carry him.

"Ik! Ik!" cried Mrs. Harold in broken tones. The shambling, awkward, ungainly figure stood before her in her own room, nervously turning and twisting that disgraceful hat, his manner the manner of a culprit called to account for dire misdeeds.

"Ef you please, Miss Mary, Mars Phil—he promised not to tole you, he did," muttered Ik, in the lowest depths of humiliation and confusion.

"O Isaac, Isaac! I don't know what to do for you, I don't know what to say to you!" continued Mrs. Harold. "How dared you do such a thing? How dared you think of it? But, O, Ik! Ik! I'm glad to know that there's such a creature in the world! You don't know, you can't know what you have saved us from, what you have done for us Isaac; but some day you shall have a home of your own again, you and Martha. And some day, Ik, some day, when you meet your dead master face to face in a better world—"

Ik lifted a suddenly glorified face. "Dat's whot I's hopin' an' tryin' fer, Mistress," he whispered under his breath, "to meet my marster, some, day, in dat better world. 'Tain't so fur away, Miss Mary, dat day, an' when I meets 'em dar, Mars Guy an' my heabenly Marster, I wants to feel dat I can look 'em bofe in de face without fear an' tremblin'. Dat's what I's hopin' and tryin' for, Mistress," and turning away, he shambled softly from the room and back to Nell's flowerbeds, wholly unconscious of the deed he had done, mindful only of, thankful only for, in the simple, humble, unthinking ignorance of his untaught African soul, the fact that the old home of his dead master was safe, once more, in the possession of those who loved and honored it for that dead master's sake.

Help One Another.

"Help one another," the snowflakes said,
As they cuddled down in their fleecy bed.
"One of us here would not be felt,
One of us here would quickly melt;
But I'll help you and you'll help me,
And then what a big white drift we'll see."

"Help one another," the maple spray
Said to its fellow leaves one day;
"The sun would wither me here alone,
Long enough ere the day is gone;
But I'll help you and you help me,
And then what a splendid shade there'll be!"

"Help one another," the dewdrop cried,
Seeing another drop close to its side;
"This warm south breeze would drive me away,
And I should be gone ere noon to-day;
But I'll help you and you help me,
And we'll make a brook and run to the sea."

"Help one another," a grain of sand
Said to another grain just at hand;
"The wind may carry me over the sea,
And then, O what will become of me?
But come, my brother, give me your hand;
We'll build a mountain and there we'll stand."

ELEMENTS OF GOOD NURSING.

The elements of good nursing are the qualities of mind, of heart, and of body which characterize the ideal nurse; and in order that you may see these qualities, not in the abstract but in a living personality, I will try to describe her. I say her, because the ideal nurse is a woman. In this work, man with all his boasted superiority can not compete, for woman is by nature preeminently fitted for it. Her touch is gentle, her heart is kind, and she embodies within herself the soul and all the resources of home. With what true instinct we turn to her—the heaven-appointed guardian of the helpless—when overtaken by sickness, or accident, or age.

But to my theme. My space is brief and will admit of allusion to only the most important of these characteristics. First of all then, the ideal nurse is intelligent. Intelligence presupposes knowledge, for it is in itself both the ability to acquire knowledge and the product of knowledge obtained. We learn from our own experience and from the experiences of others; and the intelligent nurse is she who, remembering all gained in the former way, adds thereto the richness obtained in the latter, and thus becomes possessor of both. Her knowledge may have come from within the schools, or from without, it matters not. She holds it all at her fingers' ends and knows just how to apply it. She considers the circumstances of every patient and shapes her course accordingly. If means are abundant she sees that the best things are supplied. If not, she uncomplainingly improvises something to take their places. She knows something about the human system, and the laws of health. She understands the normal rate and character of pulse and respiration, and is quick to appreciate the signification of any departure therefrom. With her the catheter and the clinical thermometer are familiar instruments. She knows the use of stimulants, the danger of their mis-use, and the importance of self-possession in emergencies. She never lacks an expedient. Whatever happens she will at least do something, if not the best thing, and thus preserve order and confidence until the doctor comes. She is discreet. She knows what to say, and when and how to say it. And, best of all, she knows when to be silent. She knows when visitors may be admitted, and whom to admit; and, under the physician, her word is law.

Her knowledge is not of the head alone; she is skillful, her hands are taught as well. The soothing touch is no accident. She knows the possibilities of the art of rubbing, and how to soothe thereby the restless nerves, or stimulate an enfeebled circulation. She has the knack of adjusting the pillows perfectly, and of smoothing every wrinkle from the sheets. She bathes her patient without exposure, and changes his clothing without fatigue. She is at home in the kitchen as well as in the sick-room. She can build a fire and make it burn. All that the culinary art can accomplish to tempt a capricious appetite she knows how to do. She can feed her patient with either hand, and will not spill his food, whether she has a feeding-cup or not. She crosses the room without jarring it, for the foot-fall of the snow-flake is not lighter than hers.

And with all these accomplishments she is faithful—faithful to her own quick conscience and faithful to the physician in charge. She understands that it is not hers to usurp his authority, or to undermine his influence. She respects him, if for no other reason, because he is her patient's choice, and seeks to supplement his every effort. And so she always follows his directions in the fullness of the spirit, even when circumstances arise which prevent her from carrying them out to the letter. Her faithfulness makes her alert. She is quick to observe changes in symptoms and prompt and accurate in reporting them to the doctor.

But she never betrays her fears to the patient. She is always cheery. Come what will, come what eventually must, her face is bright and hopeful. She never speaks a discouraging word. She never gives a discouraging look. In the blackest gloom and in the deepest distress she finds reason for gratitude that things are not worse. She feels secure in this position, for she knows her power. She well knows that a cheerful word, an apt story or a hearty laugh will do more to rout dismay, disease, or even death itself than half the drugs that are given. She knows that happiness and health are man's best angels, heaven-sent and inseparable; that it matters little which she strives most to assist her patient to gain, since the winning of the one insures the companionship of both. And if she fails—but she never wholly fails; for even when the inevitable comes, her cheering presence and strong defence sustains the shrinking spirit until its forebodings are lost in the eternal calm.

The ideal nurse is neat. With her, cleanliness not only ranks next to godliness, but next above it. She realizes that sick people are sensitive, fastidious, dainty; that really delicate dishes are little relished, others positively repulsive, and she governs herself accordingly. She doesn't make a large quantity of broth or gruel and bring it before her patient, in the selfsame bowl, from day to day till all is eaten. She doesn't use the same spoon for milk and for medicine. She doesn't leave the cuspidor until filled, or limit the number of napkins her patient may use. She doesn't wipe the fever-thermometer with her handkerchief, or with her apron, or with the corner of the sheet. She doesn't scent her breath with snuff, or cabbage, or onions. She doesn't wear tartar on her teeth or decorate her nails with cerulean borders. No. Her dress is as immaculate as the snow, her hands pure as a naiad's and her whole appearance fresh as a morning of June.

Of course she is well. The blind can lead the blind better than one invalid another. She never taxes the sympathies of her patient with complaints; never meets the mention of pain with mention of "just the same thing," or "wore" in herself. She doesn't even wear a look of distress or fatigue. She is a host in herself, for she never admits anything to be impossible, or owns that she is tired. When emergency or crisis comes she stands day and night at her post of duty, nor trusts another to take her place. Will she hold out? Can she hold out? She must hold out, for a priceless life depends upon it. She never falters, never murmurs, but always endures until danger is past.

Do you wonder? Then you do not know the delight that thrills her heart when, after long and anxious watching, she sees an apparently hopeless patient coming back to life. Behold her at the bedside of such a one. The suspense is over. The crisis past. The struggle between nature and disease has been fierce, but nature is gaining the mastery. The fitful, bounding, lapsing pulse grows steady beneath her fingers. The temperature is falling. The breathing is easier, softer, deeper. There is more color in the lips. The delirium has ceased. A warm perspiration moistens the skin. The patient sleeps. Do you wonder that the face of the watcher glows with enthusiasm? Not if you understand the faith she has in her calling. Not if you understand the love she has for her work. Not if you know her invincible determination to succeed. Enthusiasm! 'Tis the crowning quality of her character. It scorns pity, for it is not self-denial. It challenges respect, honor, admiration; for it is self-forgetfulness. Enthusiasm! 'Tis the inspiration of the countless heroines who are giving their lives in camp, or hospital, or home, the wide world over for the relief of human suffering—heroines of whom the illustrious Clara Barton, Dorothea Dix, and Florence Nightingale are only examples.

What then is the ideal nurse? Not the crusty old spinster whom nobody would have. Nor the whining misanthrope never appreciated. Nor the opinionated bigot, too conceited to confess her ignorance, and too old to learn. Nor yet the narrow religionist who sees nothing good except in a hymn-book or Bible-concordance. But rather a noble, sweet-spirited, Christian woman, intelligent, discreet, skillful, sympathetic, strong, enthusiastic. This is she. And blessings follow in her footsteps as flowers in the pathway of the sun. N. W. RAND.

OLD JACK AND THE DEER.

"D' I ever kill a deer?" cried old Jack. "Well, now you are gettin' personal. Me! Ever kill a deer! Kin you doubt it, lookin' at me? Do I look's if I'd ever done anything but kill a deer? Yes, sirree; why, I killed a deer five times once, on'y bein' a not very intelligent deer, he didn't know it until some other feller planted a bullet in betwixt his two eyes. He was a deer an' a half, that deer was. Perfect beauty. Had eyes onto him like diamonds, an' as for venison steaks, he was just covered over with 'em. I guess there was more venison steaks in that air deer than any other deer ever had. I ain't exaggeratin', boys, when I says that he almost had the currant jelly round with him 'fore he was shot, he was so teethsome. What? Ye don't know what teethsome is? Waal, I'll tell ye. Toothsome is sweet—fine—good—bully to eat. Teethsome means the same, on'y as teeth is more'n mere tooth, so

PALMER NEWS.

The Coming Cattle Show.

The directors of the Agricultural Society met Tuesday afternoon to complete the arrangements for the annual fair in September, and although the details were not all perfected, the plans were pretty generally outlined. A new building is to be constructed for the poultry exhibit, which has come to be one of the largest of the fair, so as to give better facilities for the exhibition of the birds. It was voted to invite the merchants to make exhibits of their goods in the upper hall, where ample space will be given them, although application should be made early. A band will be secured for both afternoons, instead of one as heretofore. Among the new attractions will be a peg race, in which the contestants will be required to unharness their horse from the carriage, take the harness off and hang it on a peg, lead the horse around the carriage, harness again and drive once around the track. No snap harness will be allowed, and speed is not to govern, the prizes being given for the quickest time in unharnessing and harnessing again. Four prizes are offered. Four prizes are also offered for the most artistically decorated bicycles by the young ladies, to be shown on the second day. Considerable interest is already being manifested in the 3-minute race for Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville horses, and the directors voted that the horses to be eligible in this class must have been owned in the town six months before the day of the race. The same rule also applies to the 2.50 class for horses within the limits of the society. The directors have other attractions in view, but are not ready to announce them as yet.

A Brakeman Loses a Hand.

George Fisher, about 20 years old, a brakeman employed by the New London Northern road, fell under a locomotive Monday evening and received severe injuries, one hand having to be amputated. He attempted to board the switcher as it was backing toward him by jumping on the brake beam and catching a rod at the back of the tender, but missed his hold and went under the wheels. His left wrist was so badly crushed as to necessitate amputation of the lower third of the arm, the operation being performed by Dr. Holbrook. Besides this he received scalp wounds which required several stitches to close, and his shoulders, hips and legs were considerably bruised. He was taken to his home on Park street near the Boston and Albany freight house, where he is doing well and will probably recover.

H. P. Holden will start his pacer, "Roscoe," in the 2.30 class at Buffalo to-morrow.

Justice Newton of Monson presided over the district court the first part of the week.

The list of poll-tax payers was posted Wednesday in the different precincts of the town.

Carl Brusch has left the employ of O. C. Marcy, and is now engaged at the Nassowanno House.

C. T. Brainerd has put another ice wagon into service to accommodate his patrons, and now has two.

E. Brown is placing a new combination hot water and hot air heater in his house on West Main street.

A closed mail is now sent to Boston on the 6.49 p. m. express. Letters must be in the office by 6.35 in order to catch this mail.

Mrs. L. E. Carpenter will move her millinery and fancy goods business into one of the stores in Holden's new block September 1st.

F. D. Barton has been appointed one of the judges of the bicycle meet at Spencer the 11th, under the auspices of the Star club of that place.

Friends of Dr. W. H. Stowe will be glad to learn that he is getting better under the treatment he is undergoing at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The 30-pound striking hammer on the fire alarm bell has been replaced with a 40-pound one, which strikes a heavier blow and makes the alarm more distinct.

The premium list of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society has been issued this week, and copies may be had by applying to the secretary, O. P. Allen.

D. L. Bodfish of Bridgewater will occupy the store in the Cross block formerly occupied by S. H. Hellyar & Co. about September 1st with a stock of dry goods.

The Palmer Water Company has been burning large quantities of brush on its land above the carpet mill this week, preparing for the new reservoir which it is to construct.

The drinking fountain in the public library rooms, so generously provided by A. T. Wing, is in use. It is made of handsome Georgia marble, white, with a few spots of black in it.

Edith, twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J Dwyer, died Tuesday morning of cholera infantum, after an illness of about a week. The other twin has also been quite sick, but is now recovering.

Palmer has a man milliner. If you don't believe it just notice the head-gear of one of the hotel clerks next Sunday if the day is pleasant. He made it all himself, and it is quite a work of art.

The choir of the Congregational church is to have a vacation during the month of August. Next Sunday F. O. Munger will preside at the organ, and the singing will be by the congregation.

The locomotive which was in the wreck at Chester last year has been in the repair shop since, but is now out and made a trial trip over the road Wednesday, passing through Palmer. The number has been changed, and is now 286.

The water supply in the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company has just about held its own during the week. With careful usage there ought to be water enough for domestic purposes for some time, even should no rain fall.

The case of Patrick Hartnett of Warren for the larceny of a bicycle from a freight car on the Boston and Albany tracks was tried in the district court last Saturday, and Hartnett was bound over to the September term of the superior court in $500 bonds, which were furnished.

The New London Northern road is selling round-trip tickets to Northfield for half fare, $1.35, to accomodate those who wish to attend the Conference of Christian Workers. The tickets can be procured any time before the 14th, and will be good returning until the first of September.

The rain of last night, which commenced about midnight and continued gently a good share of the forenoon, is doing an immense amount of good. The earth is very dry, and absorbs the moisture as fast as it falls. A steady rainfall of about three or four days is badly needed.

Keefe Bros. of Stafford have the contract for supplying the poles for the new electric light line to Warren, and are furnishing them from the timber lot recently purchased on Baptist Hill. A horse attached to one of the loads succumbed to the heat near West Brimfield last Saturday, and died.

A Palmer man who is unaccustomed to extensive traveling went to Brooklyn a short time ago, and on his arrival back in Palmer happened to remember that he had a grip with him when he started for home, and after racking his brain for some time decided that he had left it in the waiting room of the grand central station at New York.

The first excursion of the season for Palmer people to Block Island was run over the New London Northern road Wednesday, 21 tickets being sold at Palmer. The excursion also took in the towns between Brattleboro and Palmer, and there were eight cars well filled. The train was somewhat late on the return trip, not leaving for Brattleboro till 9.40.

Four bicyclists from Bellows Falls, Vt., en route to Boston, passed through Palmer Monday afternoon. Their ride was under novel conditions, the stipulation being that nothing should be bought by any of the party during the journey. If they succeeded in their undertaking they were winners to the extent of $280. The run from Bellows Falls to Palmer was made in about seven hours.

There are five vacancies to be filled in the corps of teachers before the schools commence in the fall. H. M. Dean has resigned the principalship of the Thorndike grammar school to accept a position as sub-master of the high school at Webster; the principal of the Bondsville grammar school has also resigned, as have the teachers in the first primary and the fifth grades; the teacher in the sixth grade at Three Rivers has also resigned.

Bicycle papers, particularly those in the west, have had much to say of a 12-years-old trick bicycle rider of Chicago, who is claimed as the champion boy trick rider of the world. His greatest feat is claimed to be the riding of a half mile backward in 2.37. Palmer's boy rider, Master Allen Atkins, heard of this trick the other day and tried it, making the half mile in 2.31. He will try for a faster record at the tournament of the bicycle club on Labor Day.

At a local soda fountain where eggs are incorporated into the cooling drinks when desired, some were noticed the other day which bore in plain marks the inscription B. C. 28. It naturally seemed a little suspicious at first, until inquisitive persons were made acquainted with the fact that they came from the yards of a poultry breeder near by, the inscription indicating that they were Buff Cochin eggs, laid the 28th of the month.

There are some water takers who persist in using the water on their lawns in spite of the prohibition of such practice by the water company; and it is reported that some of them let the water run all night, turning it on after dark and shutting it off early in the morning. The question of a water supply is one which is of vital interest to every resident, and it seems hardly credible that there should be persons so blind to their own interests or so selfish as to adopt such methods when the possibility of a water famine is so apparent as at present.

The record of the board of health shows 21 deaths during the month of July, an unusual mortality. With the exception of two persons who met with accidents, only one occurred in this village, and that on the last day of the month. Of the twenty-one ten were under one year of age; between one and five years, three; 10 and 20, one; between 20 and 30, three; between 30 and 40, one; 50 and 60, one; 70 and 80, one; 80 and 90, one. The greatest cause was cholera infantum, this being responsible for seven deaths; tuberculosis, two; drowned, consumption, apoplexy, old age, meningtisi and cholera morbus, one each.

The Boston and Albany road will run one of its popular excursions to Boston and the shore resorts next Friday, and it will of course be well patronized. The round-trip fare will be only $1.45, and as only a limited number of tickets will be sold, those who wish to go will do well to procure them in advance. This excursion will accommodate the towns from Indian Orchard to Brookfield, inclusive, the special train leaving Indian Orchard at 6.45 a. m., North Wilbraham at 6.53, Palmer at 7.05, West Brimfield at 7.16, West Warren at 7.25, and Warren at 7.41. Returning the special train will leave Boston at 7.20 p. m. The price of the trip includes a boat sail down the harbor to Nantasket Beach, Downer Landing, Bass Point or Nahant, giving an excellent opportunity of spending a day at the seashore.

A paper has been in circulation during the week for the names of business men willing to join in the organization of a business and social club similar to those in Springfield, Monson, Amherst, Northampton and other places. It has been generally signed by the business men in this village, and also contains the names of some in the other villages of the town. The object of the club, as taken from the constitution, is "To aid in promoting and establishing new industries, maintain reading and assembly rooms, and promote social intercourse among its members." Another article says that "No intoxicating liquors shall be allowed in the rooms of the club. No betting, card playing or other games for stakes shall be allowed." The rooms are to be on the second floor of Holden's new block, and plans and specifications for them are being drawn. The apartments will include a parlor, reading room, assembly room, secretary's office, coat and toilet rooms, etc. The membership is limited to 100, and the annual dues are $12 a year.

Pelham, a nephew of Mr. Small's, who has recently returned from a three-years' cruise on the coast of Africa, and who leaves in a few weeks for a cruise of five years in the South Pacific, has been his guest for a few days.

A Few Words About Our Taxes.

Editor of the Journal:—It is reported from the assessors that our tax rate, including the fire district, is $19 on $1000. This is a higher tax than any city or town in western Mass. where business and progress predominate. If the business of the town or country was in a flourishing condition this rate might be tolerated for a season, but with mills running on half time and some closed most of the year, and wages cut down, this rate of taxation is uncalled for and is a great burden in hard times. Are there any new bridges built or any better roads for this great outlay? We do not hear of it. If the tax rate in the city of Springfield is over $12 or $13 the people are up in arms about it. In answer to this it is said our valuation is much lower than in the cities on account of state and county taxes. But it remains to be proved that much of the property in town would sell under the hammer for more than it is rated. In the town of Ware, of about the same population as Palmer, where they have the best pumping water works in this part of the state, their town tax is nearly one and a half dollars less, and their fire district nearly one dollar less than ours, and they have a heavy debt to carry. Do you expect any new business will be induced to locate in Palmer in view of such a load of taxes? Will not all such locate where taxes are one-third and more less? Gentlemen, the facts are that your star chamber committee fixes the amount of tax to be voted for under each head as high as they think the town will stand under, and at the annual meeting one man makes all the moves and the speaker does most of the seconding, and the different amounts are rushed through like water with little or no consideration for economy in appropriations, and if a voter gets a chance to say ah, yes or no it's worthy of record. Our tax collector is paid twice as much as was formerly paid, and it seems not to be in order for the collector to go after and dun up delinquent tax payers, but to send out statements, and if the tax is not paid the amounts go in to roll up the bill for abatements as not collectable, which is on the increase every year. We are also informed that we pay four and one-half per cent interest on our town debt, when other towns and cities borrow at three, and three and one-half. Is it not surprising that our tax rate is not over $20 under such management? TAXPAYER.

PALMER CENTER.

Miss Mary Mahoney is visiting in Springfield.

Miss Edith Lent is spending her vacation at home.

Mrs. Dickenson and grandchild of Boston are at Rufus Bacon's.

George Moore, Jr., and sister of Worcester have been spending the week at Samuel Brown's.

BONDSVILLE.

George W. Canterbury is on the sick list this week.

Lizzie Russell, who has been very sick, is slowly improving.

A young child of Edward Landers is very sick with brain fever.

The W. C. T. U. will meet next Thursday with Mrs. John Green.

Rev. J. F. Hale and family returned Tuesday from their vacation.

William Ferrill, an old resident of this place, died Tuesday night.

A large party of excursionists went from here to Nantasket Tuesday.

Miss Jennie Ryther has returned from her outing in Monson and Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Marston were made happy Tuesday by the advent of a baby boy.

Miss Lillian Crouch is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fuller, at Forest Lake.

Charles Collis had a night-blooming cereus open eight lovely blossoms one night last week.

E. E. Ryther and family spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fleming in Monson.

Miss Miller has returned from her outing in Dover and Old Orchard, much improved in health.

Mrs. Gaboury, who spent eight days with her son Louis, has returned to her home in Worcester.

Bert Sedgwick, who has been visiting his father, Butler Sedgwick, the past few weeks, returned to New Haven Monday.

Charles Collis spent Sunday with his wife and niece in Belchertown, where they are visiting Mrs. Collis's brother, Wilbur Mars.

Mrs. J. B. Paige and daughter, who have been visiting her mother, are spending a week in Boston. They will return this week and stay a week or two more before returning to their home in Amherst.

Thomas Russell reports a splendid time at the Douglas campmeeting, and thinks the city bids fair in time to equal bonnie Scotland in scenery, only there is no sweet blooming heather to be found on the hills.

A few of the lovers of music enjoyed a treat at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Getchell Tuesday evening, listening to Miss Wheelwright's singing. This is the third year she has favored them with her voice. Miss Wheelwright is one of Walter Damroch's soprano singers of Boston.

Timothy Shea, while chopping wood by the river last week, saw a large water snake on a log. The log was 12 feet long, and he said the snake was the full length of the log, the largest one he ever saw. It has been seen by other persons, and all say it is a large one. Shea went for it with his ax, but it jumped into the water before he could get to it.

Honor for a Bondsville Boy.

Herbert Merrill Sedgwick, of this place, a graduate of Yale, class of '93, and now taking a post graduate course at Yale, has been elected a fellow of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, an unusual honor for so young a man. During his college course Sedgwick has been engaged in newspaper work.

THREE RIVERS.

Mrs. J. W. Cheney is visiting relatives in Saco, Me.

John Wilson and son Alec spent this week at Block Island.

Miss Lizzie Robinson is spending a month's vacation in New Bedford.

Miss Southland of Springfield is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Barnes.

Miss Sarah J. Raney and James McAdam are to be married this evening.

Arthur Brown has moved his family into one of J. W. Cheney's new houses.

Miss Lena Lavene has returned after several weeks' stay in Providence.

Miss Lariviere of Indian Orchard spent this week with Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau.

Miss Rosa Blanchet intends to spend Sunday in Springfield with Mrs. Roberts.

George Randell of Worcester spent last Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. E. Tenney.

Mrs. C. Alden and sons, Ralph and Ray, spent a few days this week in Worcester.

Miss Ethel Hayes of Bondsville spent this week with Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hillman.

Mrs. Peck is spending a month's vacation in Montpelier and other places in Vermont.

John, the baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. S. Turkington, died of cholera infantum Monday.

William Bursaw of Southbridge spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank White.

Miss L. H. Buss and Clarence Percy of Hartford, Ct., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Percy.

Misses Maude and Eva Lucas are visiting their uncle and cousin, N. G. Healey and Mrs. G. E. Dalrymple.

Captain Richard Gobelle of Togas, Me., is xpected to-morrow to spend a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Paine.

Mr. Ferrier of Shutesbury is the guest of Miss Carrie Johnson, and her brother, of Lynn, is to be her guest next week.

Albert Barber, while at work in one of J. W. Cheney's tenements, had the misfortune to fall and receive serious injury last Monday.

Eugene Sikes, Jr., and Miss Dorothy Hunt 08 this place were married at Worcester yesterday, and intend to spend the honeymoon in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Heman Fish and daughter Lyla availed themselves of the opportunity which the excursion offered to spend a few days this week at Block Island.

Although not generally known, it is nevertheless a fact that Miss Maggy Abram and Thomas Cole intend to assume the responsibilities of matrimony early next week.

Miss Ethel Wheeler, who was spending a few week's vacation with Miss Nettie Tricket, was called away this week by the death of her grandfather at Harrisville.

Mrs. D. J. Senton treated her Sunday school class to a lawn party, which was held on Charles Ruggles' lawn yesterday afternoon. The little ones partook of palatable refreshments, and had a most enjoyable afternoon.

The clambake for which the members of the A. O. U. W. have been preparing during the past few weeks is sure to be a great success, if elaborate preparations may be considered a measure of the enjoyment which such an occasion affords.

A company of doctors who are representing and applying the Kick-a-poo remedy, are encamped on a lot belonging to Hartnett Brothers, intending to practice here several days. Large crowds attend the lectures every evening, and many persons are being treated, testing the famous remedy.

The Three Rivers band, which formerly practiced in the vestry of the French Catholic church, is to use the room over the Palmer Mill Company's office in future. It is said that a difference arose between Rev. Joseph Marchand and some of the members, which necessitated the change.

A man purporting to be an advertising agent canvassed the village Wednesday, and succeeded in obtaining subscriptions from a good many people in the place. Some, however, were wiser than to give money to persons engaged in that business, as it is now thought that the man was an impostor whose object was to procure funds at the expense of the public.

The lawn party which was held Tuesday evening by the members of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the U. E. church, on the lawns in front of S. B. Barnes' and F. W. Lavene's residences, was a great success, and the young people who were interested in the arrangements may well be proud of their efforts. The grounds were handsomely decorated with Chinese lanterns and flags, the refreshments comprised ice cream, cake, watermelon and bananas. The choir furnished some excellent music, and everything conspired to make the evening a most auspicious one for all present.

Two Narrow Escapes from Lightning.

During the thunder shower of last Sunday evening Mrs. J. K. Knox received a severe shock from the lightning, while sitting on a piazza in front of the house. Her arm and side were hurt so badly that it was difficult for her to move about the house for several days.

Mr. Roberts narrowly escaped serious injury, if not instant death, during the thunder shower last Sunday evening. He was sitting on the piazza at the Catholic parsonage, and had just arisen to go toward the barn when a lightning bolt struck on the path that he would have taken.

Drowned While Bathing.

Mike Burbula, a Polander, was drowned while bathing in the Swift river last Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock. It seems that a company of his countrymen were in bathing and he, not being a good swimmer, ventured too far into the river. The man was about 23 years old, and had an uncle, the only relative, in this place. Undertaker Belanger cared for the remains at his undertaking room, as none of the unfortunate man's neighbors wished to have the body in charge.

THORNDIKE.

Mary McFarlane is home from her visit in New Jersey.

D. F. Sullivan is spending a few days with friends in New York.

Mrs. Frank Phanniff and children are taking an outing in Dalton.

John Sullivan of Springfield spent part of the week with relatives here.

Master Daniel Keefe of Ware is visiting friends in town for a few days.

A few from this place went on the excursion to Block Island Wednesday.

Miss Etta Rancor of Hartford, Ct., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Bond.

Master Leon Page returned this week from Maine, where he has been on a visit.

Miss Minnie O'Connor of South Hadley is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Loftus.

Mrs. Michael Sullivan of this place is quite ill at her home on the Bondsville road.

Patrick Whalen of Boston is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Fay of Church street.

Several from this place attended the races at Ware on Friday and Saturday of last week.

Dennis Lynch of Holyoke spent part of the week in town on his way to Nantasket Beach.

Mrs. M. M. Thomas, after spending a few weeks at Old Orchard Beach, returned home Tuesday.

The brass band gave another open air concert last evening, which called out a large audience.

Miss Nellie Anderson of New Hampshire is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Blanchard.

L. R. Bixby and wife have gone to their cottage at the Willimantic camp grounds for two weeks.

Mrs. C. H. Hobbs was called to Boston Sunday evening by the sudden illness of her mother, Mrs. Norris.

H. E. W. Clark has made a great improvement in the sidewalk in front of his residence during the past week.

Miss Mary Labonte has purchased a new safety, and is the latest addition to the ranks of the bicyclists in town.

Edward O'Donnell and Patrick Mahoney of Holyoke are the guests of Denis Mahoney on the farm for a few days.

Miss Maggie Doyle and Miss Alice Murphy of Monson were the guests of Mrs. B. Sullivan of Pleasant street over Sunday.

Cornelius McAuliff is soon to leave town for Cleveland, Ohio, where he will be employed by Hull & Dutton as a clerk.

James Richards has men at work laying 1200 feet of pipe, which will convey water to his residence from a well on the hill.

T. J. Clifford will start to-morrow on a fishing trip with a company of friends from Boston, and will be gone several days.

Annie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Longtine of Pine avenue, who has been very ill, is better, and will probably soon recover.

Miss Mamie Leahey of Holyoke returned to her home Monday, after spending part of the week as the guest of Miss Nellie Coffey.

Mrs. Mary Dexter, daughter Mildred and son Howard, of Orange, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Clark for a few days.

Work has been resumed on the foundation of Lawton's new building, and some grading and filling has been done the first week.

Mrs. Broshnan, an old resident of this place, is quite ill at her home from the effects of a shock which she received on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cummings, formerly of this place, who moved to Worcester about a year ago, have returned to live in this village again.

The following letters remain unclaimed at the post office:—Soufrain Borurdeau, George Lapaline, M. Jay, S. Budling, Mrs. Mary Farrell.

Miss Mabel Masters and her brother of Springfield, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Richards, returned home last Saturday.

Miss Taylor of Granby, on her way home from Swampscott, where she has been visiting, spent a few days this week with Miss Lucy Talmage.

Mrs. Geo. A. Murdock, who has been spending a vacation of several weeks with her brother at Cleveland, Ohio, is expected home this week.

Miss Katie Clifford of Milbury, who has been the guest of her brother, T. J. Clifford of the Clinton House, for several weeks, returned to her home on Saturday.

John Healey, formerly of this place, now of Yonkers, N. Y., where he is a police officer, was in town during the week, the guest of his uncle, Cornelius Healey.

The ball game here to-morrow between the West Warrens and Thorndikes will no doubt draw a large crowd of out-of-town people, on account of the extra attraction, the foot race between Rich and King.

Mrs. A. P. Adams may well feel proud of the handsome night-blooming cereous which she had on exhibition last eveding, and which was admired by nearly half the people in the place. The odor from its two lily-like flowers filled the whole house with perfume.

John W. Molloy will leave next Monday for Newport, where he will remain for the rest of the month. During his absence his hairdressing business will be in charge of Mr. Downey of Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McKenzie and family returned to their home in Providence, R. I., Tuesday, after spending a vacation with his father, William McKenzie of Commercial street.

The majority of the village people turned out Tuesday afternoon about 2 o'clock to answer to an alarm of fire which was given by the ringing of the bell in the No. 1 mill. Fire was discovered in the shed adjoining Mayett's two-tenement house, but with prompt assistance it was extinguished without doing much damage.

A person came to town recently and claiming to be an expert at card playing wanted to find some good poker players. After a little time the stranger was accommodated, but at the close of the game found out that he didn't know as much about cards as he thought he did, having lost all his money, and even his watch and chain. The watch, a ladies gold one, was returned, but the money was retained by the winners. He left town a few hours afterwards with less money than he had when he came, and with less confidence in his abilities as a card sharp.

The Coming Foot Race.

Great interest is centered in the 100-yards race, which will take place to-morrow between John Roach of this place and Nally King of West Warren for a purse of $25. Roach's friends are confident he can win, and he is receiving some backing in King's own town. Should the race take place to-morrow a large attendance is assured, as both the contestants are sure of victory and have many friends to back them.

Lost a Finger.

Joseph Robillard, a carpenter employed by the Thorndike Co., and a member of the Columbian Band, met with a painful accident on Tuesday while at work on a circular saw, cutting the index finger of one hand so as to necessitate amputation at the first joint. His many friends are sorry to learn of his misfortune, but hope that the finger will soon heal and that he will be able to resume work again in a short while.

A Clever Trick.

Josie Cronin, well known in this place, was in town a few days ago and played a very clever little game, which by chance has just come to light. He approached one of his acquaintances and asked him to give him a specimen of his handwriting, which was done. Cronin then left and filled in the slip, which read as follows:—"Mr. ——, please give Josie Cronin ——. I will pay you to-morrow, as I have no money with me. Signed ——." The signature was so well known that the money was paid at once, and the game was not discovered until too late to recover the funds. He tried the same game on others here, though in a different manner, but was not successful.

Base Ball Notes.

The ball game on Wednesday afternoon between the Palmer high schools, '94, and a picked team from this place resulted in a victory for the High schools by a score of 20 to 18 in five innings.

The home team is playing in hard luck, having met another defeat at West Warren last Saturday by a score of 13 to 11. They will play their second game at home here to-morrow with the newly-organized Palmer team, and will endeavor to play ball to win.

The manager of the Thorndikes is very anxious to arrange a series of three games with the Bondsville team for the championship of the town, but says it is very difficult to get a game with them, and takes this method of extending them a challenge, which he hopes will not be ignored.

The game here on Saturday last between the Palmers and the second team was a good game from the beginning, and was witnessed by a large crowd. The game was won in the 10th inning by the visitors, the score being 11 to 10. Murdock played a perfect game at second, accepting six chances without an error; Sullivan covered first in good shape, and made some remarkable stops; Sugrue pitched good ball, but was given poor support in the field. For the Palmers, Murphy caught a fine game, Gaffney at third played well. Bodeau of the home team is also entitled to credit for his fine throwing to bases. The game was the best seen here this season.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—Hampden, ss. Probate Court.—To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Michael O'Grady, late of Monson, in said county, deceased. Greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court, for probate, by Timothy O'Grady, of Stafford, in the state of Connecticut, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, and that he may be exempt from giving a surety on his official bond as such executor.

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Palmer Journal, published at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least before said court, and by mailing postpaid or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in said estate, seven days, at least, before said court.

Witness, William S. Shurtleff, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twentieth day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.
3-176 SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, sitting in equity for the County of Hampden.

Petition of the Selectmen of the town of Palmer, in said County.

Your petitioners respectfully represent that they are of the opinion that it is necessary for the security and convenience of the public that an alteration should be made in the crossing at grade of the public way known as the Palmer and Belchertown road and the railroad of the New London Northern Railroad Company, in said town of Palmer, which crossing is between the Quaboag river, on the line of said railroad, and the village of Three Rivers, in the approaches thereto, and as the location and grade of said public way so that said public way may pass under said railroad at a point about 75 feet southeasterly of the present location of said crossing at grade.

Wherefore they pray that a commission may be appointed as provided in chapter 428 of the Acts of 1890, to decide if such alterations are necessary, to prescribe the manner and limits within which they shall be made, to determine which party shall do the work, or to apportion the work to be done between said town and said railroad company, and apportion between the commonwealth and said town their proportion of the cost of such alterations.

Dated July 14th, 1892.
W. H. BRAINERD, CHAS. E. GEITCHELL, JOHN F. TWISS, } Selectmen of Palmer.

The subscribers, having been duly appointed a commission, pursuant to the prayer of the foregoing petition, hereby give notice that a public hearing will be held before this Commission upon the subject matter of said petition at the District Court Room in Palmer, in said County of Hampden, on Thursday, the twenty-third day of August next, at eleven o'clock a. m., at which hearing all parties interested therein may be present and heard.

It is ordered that the petitioners give public notice of said hearing by serving a true copy of said petition, the foregoing notice and this order upon the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the New London Northern Railroad Company, at least thirty days before the date of said hearing and by publishing the same in the Palmer Journal, once a week, for three successive weeks, the last publication to be at least fourteen days before the date of said hearing, and posting the same in two public places in the town of Palmer, at least fourteen days before said hearing.

Dated this 14th day of July 94.
TIMOTHY M. BROWN, CHAS. E. HIBBARD, HENRY G. TAFT, } Commissioners.

A true copy of the petition and order of notice thereto annexed.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Cut Her Throat while Temporarily Insane.

Monson was startled out of its wonted quiet Tuesday morning by the shocking news that Mrs. Charles E. Stebbins of East State street had in a fit of temporary insanity attempted suicide by cutting her throat. For several months Mrs. Stebbins has been despondent, and unlike her former self in many ways, owing to poor health, and has from time to time been under the doctor's care. She slept none Monday night, and at 5.30 Tuesday morning, while Mr. Stebbins was at the barn, ran screaming down the street clad only in her night clothes. Neighbors followed and she was soon overtaken and carried home, completely exhausted. About two hours later Mr. Stebbins again went to the barn, and no sooner was out of the house than Mrs. Stebbins sprang from the bed, seized a razor, and running into the yard cut a gash about four inches long in her throat, just low enough to escape severing the jugular vein. Dr. N. W. Rand, who was immediately summoned, dressed the wound, and expressed the opinion that she would recover.

A First of August Wedding.

Miss Cora Louise Howard of this town and Bert Elmer Campbell of Brimfield were married at 1.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Wilcox on Cushman street, by Rev. Mr. Kyle, pastor of the Congregational church of Brimfield. The bride wore a very pretty dress of ashes of roses India twill, trimmed with silk of a darker shade and butter-colored lace, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. There were no guests. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are spending a few days at Ware. They will reside at Brimfield.

Miss Lizzie Curley returned Wednesday from a three-weeks' stay in Worcester.

A Woman Struck By Lightning.

Mrs. John Sullivan, living at the quarry, was struck by lightning Sunday evening and badly burned on the arm, body and thigh. The members of the family were sitting on the front piazza and Mrs. Sullivan went to the back part of the house to close a window, when the bolt came. Considerable damage was done to the house and furniture, the piano being splintered, a carpet partly torn from the floor, picture frames demolished, etc.

Mrs. Kingman is at Bridgeport, N. H.

Launcelot and Charles Howard are at Lee.

Miss Mabel Tucker is in Greenfield for two weeks.

William King spent Wednesday at Stafford.

Arthur D. Ellis has returned from Rangeley Lakes.

Almus Anderson is quite ill at his home at North Monson.

William Anderson is taking an outing at Point of Pines.

Nicholas Hughes is visiting his brother at Pawtucket, R. I.

E. L. Wales spent last Saturday at Franklin, his old home.

A meeting of the school committee was held Wednesday.

Miss Carrie L. Chapin has returned from her visit at Granville.

Elliott Brown, who has been quite ill, is able to be out of doors.

Mrs. Arthur D. Norcross returned Friday from a visit at Rochdale.

David B. Needham returned Monday from his vacation, spent at Lee.

The curbing around the soldiers' monument is sadly in need of cleaning.

Miss Annie Coleman and Miss Louie Brennan are at Block Island.

Miss May E. Davis of Ware is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank E. Morris.

Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, was in town this week.

Mrs. L. M. Tanner of Springfield spent Sunday with Mrs. A. H. Tanner.

Charles Webber has been spending several days at Brimfield and Wilbraham.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bilis have moved into Mrs. A. O. White's new house.

The Misses Rosenfield of New York city are guests of Mrs. George C. Flynt.

H. D. Moulton and F. L. Bliss have the contract for hauling the water pipe.

Mrs. Adolphus Homer of Wilbraham spent the past week with Miss Lilly Homer.

Mrs. Harlow Chapin has visited Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont at Westfield this week.

Landlord Foley of the Monson House is to cater on the Merchants' excursion train.

Rev. Harry Ward, a former resident, will preach in the Methodist church Sunday.

Francis Hughes has moved into the house recently vacated by Mrs. John Scannell.

James E. Gleason will have charge of the Silver Street meeting Sunday afternoon.

Miss Kate Duggan, who has been spending the week in Worcester, returned Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Blanchard, Miss Dora Holt and others spent Saturday at Crystal Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Fred Bradway left Thursday for Mrs. Bradway's former home in Maine.

The Monson Cycle Club will meet at Memorial Hall next Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

On Wednesday Mrs. Emily J. Green visited her birthplace at Stafford, going also to Somers.

News of the death, probably by sunstroke, of Timothy Keefe of Quincy was received Wednesday by relatives here. Mr. Keefe was formerly a resident of Monson, his wife being Kate, daughter of the late James Gallivan. Mrs. Keefe is left with several small children.

Charles Webber's bay colt, raised by Fred Cushman, is reported doing very good work now under the guidance of Mr. Baggs of Springfield, having already gone miles in 2.25 and quarters at the rate of 2.16. Mr. Baggs intends racing him at the Worcester and Brattleboro fairs this fall.

While M. F. Moore, accompanied by J. A. Southard of New London, were turning around in a carriage in front of Howe & Pease's store Wednesday evening the ground beneath them gave way and the carriage was upset. Owing to the kindness of several passersby the horse was soon under control, and only a good shaking up experienced.

There was no service at the Congregational church last Sunday morning. It was expected that Rev. Mr. Hawley of New Hartford, Ct., would preach, but he telegraphed late in the week that he could not be here, and the committee was not successful in finding any one to fill the place. A large number of the usual congregation accepted Mr. Marble's invitation to attend the Methodist church.

W. N. Flynt has secured another valuable curiosity for his museum at Flynt Park, a rare book from the library of the late Duke of Sunderland, better known as the Blenheim library. It is entitled "Lives of the Popes to Sixtus IV," and was printed in 1481, being in excellent condition. As the art of printing was discovered in 1450, this is one of the earliest publications, and very valuable. Solomon Squier has presented Mr. Flynt with a group of rare ducks to add to the animals and birds at the park. One is a Macedonian duck, of quite rare species. Mr. Squier has set a good example for other people to go and do likewise.

The laying of the concrete sidewalks by the town is completed, and there is now nearly a continuous walk from Mark Noble's property on High street to Reynolds's bridge on South Main street, the breaks being from Rufus P. The batteries: Fleming and Longtine for the visitors, Collins and Sullivan for the home team. The game was interesting throughout, and as the management has rented the grounds for the rest of the season more good games may be expected.

Barn, Stock and Hay Burned.

The fire department was called out at 9.30 Tuesday night by the burning of two large barns belonging to Thomas Haley, situated some two miles out of the village on the Brimfield road. The barns were completely destroyed, and three cows, one yoke of oxen, one horse and about one hundred and fifty tons of hay were burned. The fire was evidently of incendiary origin, as it was burning in two or three different parts of the barn when discovered. The loss is about $4000, insured for $2700. Suspicion rests on a Swede whom Mr. Haley had recently discharged.

Meekins, Packard & Co.

Big selling makes possible bigger buying. The former has been a prominent feature in the past season's furniture business; the latter marks the opening of the coming season. We are already receiving the new goods. The five car-loads now on our floors are merely a beginning.

We call particular attention to the Chamber Sets included in this shipment. From $13.90 to $25 we are showing the best styles and the finest work ever found on the market at these prices.

Antique Ash, Oak, White Maple and imitation Mahogany sets ornamented with neat carvings and polished brass drawer pulls, heavy bevelled mirrors of large size.

Our sets from $25 to $60 are works of art in themselves—solid oak, bird's eye maple and curly birch are woods with a popularity firmly established. When you see the styles of these sets you will wonder at the prices.

Fourth floor.

People are appreciating the new patterns in Carpets that we are already showing for the fall trade. They realize the wisdom of early selections in whatever line the purchase is to be. If new homes are about to be furnished, this is the time to buy. We will store the Carpets until wanted.

First floor.

The Refrigerator trade of the present season has proved most satisfactory, both to our patrons and to us. This comes from carrying the best made, the "Lapland."

Upwards of three hundred have been placed in city homes and neighboring towns, and our samples are now to be sodl at cost prices. Here is an opportunity worth improving.

First floor.

A Heywood Rocker for $1.75. This will arouse curiosity in the minds of many and indeed they'll be surprised to find such an extraordinary value at that price. Large roomy Reed Arm Rockers, the height of comfort, and all for $1.75.

One Way to fill a barrel with water, is to use a sieve. You can do it—but it takes time, patience and hard work.

So you can wash clothes with soap and a wash-board—but it isn't the best way. It's slow work, hard work, costly work. It wears out the things you're trying to get clean.

The best and easiest way is to use Pearline. That does the washing while you're doing something else—does it without any of the clumsy rubbing that takes so much time and makes so much wear and tear.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 320 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Right Arm Paralyzed!

Saved from St. Vitus Dance.

"Our daughter, Blanche, now fifteen years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. We feared St. Vitus dance, and tried the best physicians, with no benefit. She has taken three bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine and has gained 31 pounds. Her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid."

Keep Cool.

Oh, never mind how hot it is;
Keep cool.
Just wear a pleasant, smiling phiz;
Keep cool.
Don't fret, and fuss, and kick, and stew,
As if the joys of life were few,
This weather's good enough for you;
Keep cool.

It ought to be hot in July;
Keep cool.
Of course you know the reason why;
Keep cool.
The corn and things have got to grow,
Warm weather helps them on, you know;
The universe must have a show;
Keep cool.

Just take things easy for a while;
Keep cool.
Don't try to put on too much style;
Keep cool.
Wear outing shirts if you're a man,
If not, do just the best you can,
You'll find this is the wisest plan;
Keep cool.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

TRUE OF ALL OF US IN WINTER.

"You tell me Lazabones is slow
And shows a lack of vim?
I heard him say an hour ago
There were no flies on him.

"I quite believe him when he says
No flies on him are found,
But that is in the winter days
When snow is on the ground."

Mother—"Now, Johnnie, I don't want to ever catch you in that jam closet again." Johnnie, crying—"And I don't want you to, nuther."

A young woman at dinner asked Sir Arthur Sullivan whether Bach was composing anything at present. "No," he replied, "at present he is decomposing."

His Wife—"Did you gain much by working so late at your office last night, dearie?" He—"No—er—but I came within an ace of gaining a great deal."—Chicago Record.

She—"You are not so smart as you think you are." He—"Oh, come, now! I don't think I'm very smart." She—"And that proves just what I said."—Boston Transcript.

"Waiter," said the guest, "bring me some mushrooms." "Single or double price?" "What do you get with the double-price order?" "An Insurance policy, sir."—Washington Star.

Little Ethel—"I wish I had a new doll." Mamma—"Your old doll is as good as ever." Little Ethel—"Well, I am just as good as ever, too, but the angels gave you a new baby."—Good News.

Watts—"Just look at that fellow on the bicycle, will you? What in the world is the use of him humping over so?" Potts—"He must be trying to put his shoulder to the wheel."—Indianapolis Journal.

Mr. Blount—"My dear count, you remind me of a watermelon." Count—"In vat vay?" Mr. Blount—"Although you are very seedy, you are admitted into our best families without question."—Texas Siftings.

"You'll have to wear spectacles," said the doctor. "I'd pwefer a monocle," said Chappie. "But both of our eyes are affected," observed the doctor. "Then I shall wear two monocles," said Chappie.—Life.

Mrs. McGinnis—"Oi b'lave Oi saw six pair av shtockin's hangin' on Mrs. Murphy's line yisterday." Mrs. Reilley—"It must be crossoiyed yo're gittin', Mrs. McGinnis. She hain't got six pair in her whole repertwire."

"What are the chances to gain admission to the bar in your town?" asked the law student of a native. "Well, stranger, thar ain't no trouble durin' the week, but you've got to be mighty slick on Sunday."—Atlanta Consitution.

Bearded Lady—"The manager is in great trouble just now." Snake Charmer—"What is the matter?" Bearded Lady—"He has proposed to the two-headed girl. One of her accepted him and the other rejected him."—Truth.

The Wife (sobbing)—"You'r ecr-cruel to make fun of this hat. I had one like it before we were married, and you said it was l-lovely." The Husband—"In those days I didn't look at the hat, but what was under it."—Chicago Record.

A gentleman coming out of the house saw his son sitting on the pump with a slate and pencil in his hand. The father said:—"Why aren't you at school to-day?" "Why, pa," said the boy, "I'm sittin' here, 'cos the teacher told us to write a composition on 'The Pump.'"

The following was overheard between a Columbian student and his best girl: "Oh Will, what lovely flowers! They look as if they had just been gathered. Why, there is a little dew upon them." Will (slightly embarrassed)—"Not a cent, I assure you, not a cent."—Christian Register.

Deacon—"We must devise some means of paying these five hundred dollars of outstanding bills against the church; we are being pressed for the money." Vestryman (in surprise). "Why, what are they for?" Deacon—"For flowers, decorations, music and so forth, furnished for the entertainment last month, to celebrate the church being free from debt."—Puck.

"I am sensible of the honor you do me, Mr. Spoonamore, in the proposal of marriage you have just made," said the young woman, with a slight curl of the lip, "but circumstances over which I have no control will compel me to decline the honor." "What are those circumstances, Miss Marigold," fiercely demanded the young man. "Your circumstances, Mr. Spoonamore."—Tit-Bits.

PROVED HIS IDENTITY.—My friend, Michael——, made his appearance one day this week with a battered up face, a black eye and sundry other evidences of a hard and disastrous scrap. "What's the matter, Mike?" "Oh, nothing," he answered. 'I, went to a wedding last night, and I stumbled against a chap standing at the foot of the stairs. 'Beg pardon,' says I. 'Th' same to you,' says he. 'I've met you before,' says I. 'Most likely,' says he; 'I'm the best man. 'We'll see about that,' says I. But he was the best man, sure enough," concluded Mike, as he ruefully studied his scars in a hand lookingglass.

A WOMAN OF BALANCE.—Bank clerk—"This check, madame, isn't filled in." Madame—"Isn't what?" "It has your husband's name signed to it, but it does not state how much money you want." Madame—"Oh, is that all? Well, I'll take all there is."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

An Extraordinary Opportunity!

$4.80 Worth of Sheet Music,
Best Book on Hypnotism,
75 Complete Stories, neatly bound,
Our Monthly for one year,

All for 50 cents to every person answering this advertisement,

Transportation all prepaid,

And Also a Fine Watch Free, as a present, to the person sending each thirtieth answer received from day to day in reply to this advertisement.

IS THIS POSSIBLE? YES, IT IS TRUE!

We repeat: For 50 cents, received from you, we send you the $4.80 WORTH OF SHEET MUSIC, the best BOOK ON HYPNOTISM, also 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, and our household monthly for one year; and, besides that, we make a present to the sender of each thirtieth answer to this advertisement of a fine watch (ladies' or gents,' as desired) of excellent appearance and workmanship (regular price, $7,) absolutely free.

THE MUSIC is strictly first-class, new, COPYRIGHTED, regular 40-cent sheet music, printed in the finest manner on a superior quality of paper, with engraved title. (Publisher's price, 40 cents a sheet.) It does not consist of old or hackneyed pieces, but of perfectly new copyrighted pieces, which will be sent to our subscribers monthly, as published. As the newest pieces will be included, it is impossible to give the titles in advance, but it will comprise the latest and best vocal and instrumental pieces by the leading composers. When you see this music you will be filled with wonder at our being able to furnish it for less than several dollars. If you want to see it before accepting our offer, a sample sheet will be sent for 10 cents.

THE BOOK ON HYPNOTISM is a complete exposition of the wonderful and mysterious sciences of Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Clairvoyance and Mind Reading, and explains the secrets of these peculiar sciences so clearly and forcibly that those things which to most people have appeared strange, unreal, mysterious and supernatural, are made as plain as the light of day.

THE 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, are a collection of the most excellent and absorbing stories of love, heroism and exciting adventure.

Was so much good value ever offered anywhere for so small a sum? Here you have a supply of fresh and splendid music for a year, and an attractive supply of tip top reading for the same period, all for the small sum of 50 cents, and then you may be one of those who will receive the watches as well. This is an important thing for you to remember. We are anxious to double our subscription list within 60 days, and we have realized that a supreme effort is required, in view of the dullness of the times. If you do not already grasp the magnitude of our offer, please read it again and "take it in." Let us hear from you at once. If you can get up a club of thirty persons to join in answering this advertisement you thereby make sure of the watch, as one of the latter is presented to the sender of each thirtieth answer or subscription. The thirty subscriptions can all be sent in one letter to us. Each subscriber in such a club of course receives each and every one of the premiums mentioned above.

You need not cut out this advertisement. Simply state that you accept our offer and enclose 50 cents. Save this advertisement, as it is our contract with you, which we will carry out in every particular.

Reader, we ask you to favor us with your own immediate response. Your particular individual support is worth much to us. Address, HOMES AND HEARTHS PUBLISHING CO., No. 21 Park Row, New York. 2-17

A LOYAL HINDOO.

My servant Sajad was by no means an extraordinary fellow. I picked him up in Benares one scorching afternoon in midsummer. I was in want of a kitmutgar, and he seemed to have nothing to do. He could not speak one word of English, and to tell the truth, that was the first and only recommendation upon which I engaged him.

In religion he was a Mussulman, but he was far from being devout. However as I did not require anything remarkable, we got on well enough to the end, for he followed me, poor fellow, to his death.

Steal? Most decidedly. He would invariably steal anything belonging to me that attracted his fancy. If I discoverd it and went about it in the right way, I could usually get it back again.

Sajad never left me for an hour from the time he entered my service. He followed me all day and slept on a rug at my door or lay on the sand at my feet or just outside my tent at night as the case might be, and he received just as many lectures on veracity and made just as many promises as the time allowed, but I am sure he told me just as many lies the last week of his life as he did the first week he was with me. It is as much the nature of the oriental to lie and steal as it is of a dog to bark at a horse or of a cat to help herself to cream.

One who expects too much is apt to give credit for too little. That may be the reason the Hindoo has such a bad reputation in the minds of some who mean to be just, or even generous. Many a good turn Sajad did me right in the line of those two traits. It takes a rogue to catch a rogue, and I know that he saved me from being robbed by others many times over for all that he took himself, while he would detect a lie in what any one else told me as quickly as a negro boy in old Virgin' would spot a ripe watermelon.

We were marching through the Terai once with a small detachment. A soldier was leading my horse, while I walked upon one side of the path followed, at a little distance by Sajad, hunting for a bird I had shot and which had fallen in the tall grass. Suddenly there was a cry from those behind. I looked quickly over my shoulder. A hooded corbra, disturbed by the commotion I was making, had risen out of the grass behind me. His flat head and flaring hood were already thrown back for a final fling at me. His half open mouth was within three feet of my face when my eyes rested upon it. If I turned, I should only expose more of my face. If I lifted a hand, he would strike it quicker than lightening. There was no chance to get away, and I was utterly helpless.

Before I had time to think a second thought, however, Sajad made one leap from where he was standing, and before his feet had touched the ground he had brought his staff about with a sharp whir as it cut the air, too quick for even a snake to dodge, and the next instant the corbra's body was writhing in the grass, while his head, completely severed, fell at my feet.

Had Sajad waited an instant he would have been too late. No one else could have reached me, yet if he had missed his aim or the snake had dodged his own life would have paid the forfeit. No one knew it better than Sajad, but he took the chance and saved my life. He had in his girdle at the time a bright colored silk handkerchief which he had stolen from me, and only that morning had solemly declared that he knew nothing about it.

Up in the hills one afternoon I was lying on a low tent bed taking a nap, when Sajad saw a poisonous insect, a kind of scorpion, crawling over my pillow. He had nothing near to use as a weapon and no time to lose. He caught it in his naked hand and threw it out of the tent door. I awoke in time to see it flying through the air, and hurrying out killed it before it got away.

I called to Sajad to ask if he had escaped a sting, and receiving a cheerful reply in the affirmative thought no more about it till, chancing to enter the tent softly and unexpectedly, I found him sucking the back of his right hand for dear life. He stopped the instant he saw me and put his hand behind him.

The poison had already began to take effect. The hand and arm were swelling, and before long Sajad was lying on the floor writhing in agony. The only antidotes I had were ammonia and whisky. Sajad knew the contents of both bottles, for he had the care of all my traps. I did my best for him with the ammonia, but utterly in vain I pleaded, begged, commanded that he take the whisky. He would not take it.

Why? Only because he was a Mussulman. No matter how intense his agony or determined my command he put his well hand over his mouth and shook his head. He felt sure he was dying, and he beleived my assertion that the whisky might save him, but that made no difference. He came so near to death that he was past seeing anything and beyond hearing. He lay upon the ground, just breathing, panting, as though he was almost at the end. It seemed useless to try again, and yet, now that he was unconscious, I could at least make a last, desperate trial with the whisky. The moment that it touched his lips, he struggled away, clutched his lips with his hand and shook his head.

I believe the very fear that I should succeed in giving him the whisky kept him alive till the poison began to lose its power. At all events he did not die.

Sajad was as fond of hunting as I. Many a time we two slipped away from camp in the gray of early morning. Once, just before daylight, I was out with my shotgun in a thinly wooded jungle a mile from camp upon the shore of a small lake, waiting for birds.

It was just my luck. Because I came prepared for birds, there was not one in sight, but three beautiful antelope came down to drink within a few hundred feet of us. I looked at the shotgun in disgust. Then looked again at the antelope. It was exasperating. I was determined to have a shot, at any rate, and in the hope that I might stun one of them or at least bewilder him for an instant. I whispered to Sajad to be ready with his knife and make a dash the moment I fired.

Cautiously I raised my gun and was pressing the trigger, when Sajad touched me and whispered: "Wait, sahib! Look there!"

I looked and my shotgun fell. At a slight angle, but little more than half way between us and the antelope, there crouched a royal Bengal tiger. A single glance was sufficient. He was surely a man eater. Evidently he had been on the point of satisfying his hunger with an antelope when he caught sight of us. He was within an easy leap of the deer, but was deliberately turning away and facing us. The motion startled the deer, and they bounded off, but the tiger paid them no further attention. The huge creature opened his great jaws till his head seemed nothing but a red, yawning gullet bordered by long, ragged, glistening teeth, and with a savage snarl he began to approach us.

There was no need of looking about for a place of safety. The jungle was sparcely wooded at the best, and the largest tree we had passed in coming from camp would not have borne even Sajad's weight 10 feet from the ground. Sajad had only his hunting knife, I had nothing but my shotgun.

"One of us must go, sahib," Sajad muttered, without taking his eyes from the tiger. "If we run together, we shall both go. He will overtake us in a moment. Let Allah decide as it is written in our foreheads. Run that way for your life Sahib. I will run this way. Be quick, before he comes nearer!"

There was no time for thought. It seemed a fair proposition, and even as he spoke the Hindoo started at the top of his speed away. It was useless standing still or following him, and acting upon his suggestion I started in the opposite direction.

After running a rod or two I looked over my shoulder. The tiger had made a leap and was just landing, already crouched for another spring. He was following me!

I will not admit that I hoped he would follow Sajad, but I did hope that he would not choose me. It amounted to the same thing.

I started on for one more desperate struggle. I was doomed. I knew it perfectly well, yet while there is life there is hope, and as I ran I resolved to go as far as I could and then whirl about and give the tiger a charge of fine shot full in the face. It might put out his eyes. There was at least that possibility to hang a desperate hope upon, and throwing my gun to my shoulder I turned. The tiger wasn't there! Looking farther back, I saw his tawny hide in the underbrush. Instantly it rose. He was making a leap, but it was not towards me. One thrill of gratitude shot through my veins, when my heart stood still with horror. There was one sharp yelp as the huge form swept through the air, and crushing the leaves and branches as it fell landed upon the prostrate figure of Sajad, silently waiting for the blow.

I stood there petrified, the cold perspiration dripping from my forehead. There was not a sound from Sajad. There was only one fierce howl from the tiger; then all was still.

It was only an instant, but in that instant we two, my Hindoo servant and I, stood out in very bold relief. I had run for my life, knowing that the chances lay between us two and hoping at least that the tiger might not follow me. He had run, too, knowing that the chance lay between us, and because the tiger did not follow him he had come back again and tempted him—called him away from me and given his life for mine.

He was a poor benighted heathen and only an average sample of his kind. He could not help stealing pretty things. He could not stop telling lies. But surely he was a truer, braver, nobler man than I, and if the image of God can be found to-day in any of his creatures it would require no deep theologian to decide which of us two betrayed it least profaned.—Henry Willard French in Romance.

THE GREAT OBJECTOR.

Holman, the great objector, rode up in the House elevator, which is started and stopped by yanking a wire rope instead of by the modern lever. There was a big load on, and the elevator man, spying Holman, tugged at the rope with a well-assumed expenditure of strength before the elevator started.

"Dear me," said Holman, "it is too bad that you should have to work so when the man in the other elevator has such an easy time with his new fangled arrangement. Dear me, somebody must have been awful stingy."

"Yes, Judge, somebody was." the elevator man replied. "But, Judge, that somebody was you."

"No, sir," the Judge began. "I never——"

"Yes you did, Judge," the elevator man broke in. "There was a bill all ready to give me a new machine, and it would have passed but for your objection."

"Why, I don't remember anything about it," the Judge replied.

"That's just it, Judge," put in a newspaper man. "You are so in the habit of objecting you do it unconsciously. If you don't break yourself of the habit you are likely to regret it forever."

"What do you mean, sir?" the Judge responded. "I don't understand you."

"Why, it's just this way, Judge," the newspaper man replied. "You will become so confirmed that when Gabriel toots his horn you will hop out of your grave and cry: 'I object!' And as Gabriel is not a man to be trifled with he will be very apt to put you back and let you stay."

The Judge walked away with a thoughtful air and the elevator man is now looking for a new machine.—Chicago Post.

NOT THANKSGIVING TALK.—The office boy was a freckled faced, ill-fed looking little chap, but he was sharp. The day after Thanksgiving his employer was provoked at something and went for the boy ferociously.

"Say," said the boy, stopping him, "did you have turkey yistiday for dinner?"

The angry man was astonished into an answer.

"Yes," he replied. "What's that got to do with you?"

"Nothin'," and the boy looked hungry. "Did you have cramberry sauce, and oysters, and sweet potatoes, and things like that?"

"Yes."

"And mince pie?"

"Yes."

"Real old-fashioned, nice, thick ones? and the boy's mouth watered.

"Yes."

The boy's face hardened.

"Well, you don't talk like it to-day," he said, and there was something in the way he said it that brought an apology from his employer and enough money to give the boy a Thanksgiving dinner, none the less welcome for being a day late.—Detroit Free Press.

Why does the air of the pine woods have such a beneficial effect on consumptives? It is on account of its purity and of the antiseptic substances contained in the exhalations from the trees.

Guaiacol

represents these exhalations in a concentrated form. Although taken in through the stomach, in instead of being breathed in, as in the pine woods, it is taken up by the blood from the stomach and carried to the lungs, producing the most beneficial effects. Pleasant to take and a perfect remedy for consumption.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

HELP CAME AT LAST.

Even When a Learned Man Said Hope Was Gone.

"There is no hope for you."

These words are all short, you see. Each has but one syllable, yet they fall upon the human heart like sledge-hammer blows. "No hope!" If you ever heard the words addressed to yourself, you are likely to understand how Mrs. Emeline Morgan, of Weverton, N. Y., felt when her physician uttered them. In three years of sickness she had taken a great variety of medicines, that had one thing in common—an utter inability to cure. She was a prey to the worst form of dyspepsia, and would never be well, the doctor said.

A friend told her of Paskola, the famous artificially digested, flesh-forming food. Mrs. Morgan got two bottles. She writes under date of May 7, 1894: "My stomach will bear food now. When I commenced taking Paskola, I could eat only one tablespoonful of meal made in a gruel. Now I can eat almost anything I want, and I thank God I have found a cure at last."

So her condition was a long way from being hopeless.

This is the testimony of Charles E. Isaacs, of 413 Main street, Worcester, Mass.: "For the past twenty-six years I have been unable to use or partake of any meat or fish and scarcely any vegetables, being unable to retain the same. I have tried many doctors and countless patent medicines. All were of no avail till I took Paskola.

"I have used three large bottles and two half size, and it has worked wonders. I now eat anything that is put on the table. Heretofore it has been a torture.

"In four weeks I have gained five pounds. I feel like a new man. I am recommending to my friends, and still taking Paskola myself."

All reputable druggists sell Paskola. A pamphlet describing it will be sent free on application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

The Song of the Afternoon.

When the good day seems to stay in going
Each chink and cranny with light to fill,
We may sometimes hear sweet music flowing,
Rare as that made by a hidden rill;
Where some woman lone sits o'er her sewing,
Steeped in thought when the house is still.

Untaught as a bird upon Mount Tabor,
In the dreamy, drowsy afternoon,
When the men folk all have gone to labor,
And quiet comes as a blessed boon;
With only the purring puss for neighbor
The woman lifteth her voice in tune.

It may be a chanson learned in childhood,
A ballad she in her youth had sung
When the brown birds listened in the wildwood,
And the music stilled their clamorous young;
Or a cradle song any mother mild would Gladly learn from the tuneful tongue.

As o'er her toil she doth bow and bend her,
The great organ's pipes forget to roll;
Something the angelic choir must lend her,
Spirits of the blest must with her condole,
For the strain melodious, soft and tender,
Falls like dew on the thirsty soul.

Singing, may be, of a late-lost treasure,
From her throbbing bosom borne away;
Rising and falling the plaintive measure
Beareth her thoughts beyond to-day,
Or wingeth them back to the hours of leisure,
When she with her mates was wont to play.

You hear it not where the wild herd browses,
It is not known upon plain or hill,
Nor where rough man o'er the wine carouses,
As he with folly the night doth fill;
But in homes that are loved as sacred houses,
And only then when the place is still.

In such I have heard and hailed it often,
And hearing, I bless her—the lonely dove,
Whose dolorous note can soothe and soften
A heart that has looted been by love,
And hold my soul, like Mahomet's coffin,
Suspended 'tween earth and heaven above.

MOSES TEGGART.

THE LAST LESSON, BY A LITTLE ALSATIAN.

[Translated from the French of Alphonso Daudet for the PALMER JOURNAL.]

On this particular morning I was very late in going to school, and I was in great fear of a scolding, especially as M. Hamel had told us that he would question us on the participles, and I did not know the first word of my lesson. For a moment the idea seized me to play truant and take my way across the fields.

The day was so warm, so clear. I could hear the blackbirds whistle at the edge of the wood; and behind the sawmill in Rippert's meadow, the Prussians at drill. All this allured me more than the law of participles; but I had the grace to resist, and hurried away to school.

As I passed before the town clerk's office I saw the whole village train fixed before the little bulletin board. For ten years it had been here that all the bad news had come to us of lost battles, of new drafts; of orders from headquarters; and without stopping I asked myself "What is it they wish now?"

But as I ran across the square Wachter, the smith, who with his apprentice had come to read the notice, called out to me: "Don't hurry so much, little one, you'll always get to your school early enough."

I thought he was making game of me and burst into M. Hamel's yard quite out of breath.

Usually at the opening of school there was a great noise and bustle, which one could hear out on the street, of desks being opened and closed, and the lessons which the scholars were studying aloud, with their fingers in their ears, until the great ferrule of the master would tap upon the table: "Silence for a moment!"

In the midst of this confusion I hoped to reach my seat unobserved; but for just this day all was tranquil as a Sabbath morning. Through the open window I could see my companions already in their places, and M. Hamel, who walked back and forth with his terrible iron-tipped ferrule under his arm. I must open the door and enter in the midst of this great calm. You may imagine whether I was red and fearful. But no, M. Hamel regarded me without impatience, and said very gently: "Hurry to your place my little Franz; we were just going to begin without you."

I reached my seat and seated myself directly at my desk. Then for the first time, having recovered a little from my fright, I noticed that our master had on his best green frock coat, his carefully crimped shirt-frill and the embroidered cap of black silk which he only wore on examination days or when he distributed the prizes. Moreover, the whole school had something extraordinary and solemn about it. But what surprised me the more was to see, at the lower end of the room, on the benches which were usually left empty, the village folk sitting as silent as ourselves; the old Hauser with his cocked hat, the aged Mayor, the old postman, and other people besides. Everybody appeared; and Hauser had brought an old dog-eared primer which he held wide open on his knees with his great spectacles lying across the pages.

While I was wondering at all this M. Hamel had taken his seat, and then he addressed us in the same grave and gentle voice with which he had received me.

"My children, this is the last lesson I shall give you. Orders have come from Berlin that only German shall be taught in the schools of Alsace and Loraine. The new master will arrive to-morrow. To-day is your last lesson in French. I beg you to be very attentive."

The words filled me with dismay. Unhappy people, this was the notice at the market place.

This was my last lesson in French! And I scarcely knew how to write! Then I should never learn it! I must stop where I was! How I blamed myself for the lost time, the days I had played truant to hunt bird's nests or to go sliding on the Saar. My books, which up to this very hour I had found so very tiresome, so heavy to carry, my grammar, my Scripture history seemed to me now like old friends from which it would pain me much to part. So with M. Hamel. The idea that he was going away, that I should never see him again, made me forget the punishments, the blows of the ruler. Poor man, it was in honor of this last lesson that he had put on his fine Sunday clothes, and now I understood why these old people had come to sit at the lower end of the room. It seemed to say that they regretted not having come oftener to the school. It was also a way of thanking our master for his forty years of faithful service and of showing their respect for the country from which he came.

In the midst of my reflections I heard my name called. It was my turn to recite. What would I not have given to have been able to recite at length the famous rule of participles, loud and clear, without a single mistake; but I became confused at the first words and stood leaning against my desk to balance myself, my heart swelling, and not able to lift my head. I heard M. Hamel say to me:

"I will not reproach you, Franz; you must be punished enough. That's just the way it is! Everyday one says to himself: 'Bah! I have plenty of time. I will study to-morrow.' And then you see what happens. Ah! that is the great misfortune of our Alsace, always to put off its instruction to to-morrow. Now, these Germans have a right to say to us: 'What! you pretend to be Frenchmen, and know neither how to speak nor to write your language!' In all this, my poor Franz, it is not you who is most to blame. We have all much to reproach ourselves for. Your parents have not been anxious enough to have you instructed. They prefer rather to send you to work in the fields or the mills that they may gain a few sous more. I too, have somewhat to reproach myself for. For have I not often had you water my garden instead of studying? Have I not allowed you a holiday when I wished to go trout fishing?"

Then from one thing to another, M. Hamel came to our speaking the French language, saying that it was the most beautiful in the world, the clearest and the most substantial, that we ought to preserve it among us and never forget it, for that, when a people is conquered, so long as it clings to its mother tongue it holds as it were the key to its prison. Then he took a grammar and read us our lesson. I was astonished to see how I understood it. All that he said seemed simple, easy. I thought, indeed, that I had never heard so well and that he had never showed so much patience in his explanations.

One would have said that the poor man wished to tell us all he knew before he went, and we to take it all into our heads at a single stroke.

The lesson ended we turned to the writing. For this day M. Hamel had prepared entirely new copies, on which were written in bold round hand: France, Alsace, France, Alsace. They looked like little flags as they fluttered on the little rods above our desks. How intent everyone was and what silence. One could hear nothing except the scratching of the pens upon the paper. One moment some beetles flew in, but no one noticed them of all the little ones who were absorbed in tracing their strokes, with one heart, one conscience, as if that too was of France. On the roof of the school the pigeons were cooing low, and I said to myself as I listened:

"Shall we and you then have to sing in German?"

From time to time, when I raised my eyes from my book I saw M. Hamel motionless in his chair, looking fixedly before him as if he wished to carry away in his memory everything in his little school room. Think of it! For forty years he had been there in the same place, looking out upon the little yard with his class already before him. Only the benches and desks were polished and worn with use; the walnut trees in the yard had grown tall, and the hopvine he had himself planted shaded the windows up to the roof. What a heart-breaking thing must this be for the poor old man to leave all these things and to hear his sister in the chamber overhead, as she went back and forth packing up their luggage, for they must depart on the morrow, never to return.

Nevertheless he had the courage to hear our last lessons to the end. After the writing, we had the history lesson; then the littlest ones sang together their Ba, Be, Bi, Bo, Bu. Below at the foot of the room old Hauser had put on his spectacles, and holding his primer in both hands he named the letters with them. One could see that he applied himself as much as they; his voice trembled with emotion, and it was so comical to hear him that we all had a longing both to laugh and to cry. Ah! I shall treasure the memory of that last day of school.

All at once the clock in the church struck noon, and then the Angelus.

At the same time the bugles of the Prussians rang out under the windows as they returned from drill.

M. Hamel raised himself, all pale in his chair. Never had he seemed to me so large.

"My friends, my dear friends; I—I". But something stifled him. He could not complete his sentence.

Then he turned to the blackboard, seized a bit of crayon, and summoning all his strength he wrote in as large letters as he could:

"Vive la France!"

Then he rested there, leaning his hand against the wall, and without speaking, motioned to us with his hand.

"That is all—you may go."

THE FIRST STRIKE ON RECORD.

Livy, in his famous book, "The Annals," ix. 30, relates in the following suggestive words the story of a singular strike which occurred at Rome in the year 300 B. C., and was probably the first strike ever known:

That year occurred an event little worthy of being related, and which I would pass in silence had it not appeared as involving religion. The flute players, dissatisfied because the latest censors had forbidden them to take part in the banquet in Jupiter's temple, according to the ancient custom, withdrew, every one of them, to Tibur, so that nobody was left at home to play during the sacrifices. This incident shocked the religious sentiment of the Senate, and the senators sent messengers to invite the inhabitants of Tibur to make every effort in order that the players should be restored to the Romans. The Tiburtines, having promised not to neglect anything necessary for that purpose, caused the flute players to come where the Senate met and exhorted them to go back to Rome. Seeing that they could not prevail upon them to do so, they employed a stratagem in keeping with their character. On a day of festival, under the pretext that music would increase the joy of the feast, every citizen invited the flute players individually to his house, and wine, of which people of that profession are usually fond, was given to them in such quantities that they fell into a deep sleep. They were then thrown into wagons and transported to Rome. They only became aware of what had happened on the day after, when dawn surprised them laying on the carts, which had been left in the forum. A large crowd had assembled, and they were induced to promise that they would remain at Rome. The right of attending the banquets was restored to the flute players.—N. Y. Tribune.

TURNING THE TABLES.—A farmer from South Lewiston awoke the echoes of lower Park street this forenoon by driving like mad up the street toward the city building. They heard his wagon coming, and ran out from the police station to stop him. Up he came like a flash, and as the officers stepped into the street he braced his feet against the step and called "Whoah, Sophia." The mare stopped short. "What are you doing?" asked the officer. "Coming the patrol wagon joke," he answered. "They nearly ran over me yesterday. Fun, ain't it?" and before they realized what he was doing he had turned, and went thundering down the street again for home.—Lewiston Journal.

A native of Ireland, landing at Greenock, wanted to take the train to Glasgow. Never having been in a railway station before, he did not know how to get his ticket. Seeing a lady, however, going in, Pat thought he would follow her, and he would soon know how to get aboard. The lady, going to the ticket-box and putting down her money, said, "Maryhill, single." Her ticket was duly handed to her and she walked off. Pat, thinking it all right, planked down his money, and shouted, "Patrick Murphy, married."

Boys Wanted.

Boys of spirit, boys of will,
Boys of muscle, power and brain,
Fit to cope with anything,
These are wanted every hour.

Not the weak and whining drones,
Who all troubles magnify;
Not the watchword of I "can't,"
But the noble one "I'll try."

Do what'ere you have to do
With a true and earnest zeal;
Bend your sinews to the task,
"Put your shoulders to the wheel."

Though your duty may be hard,
Look not at it as an ill;
If it be an honest task,
Do it with an honest will.

In the work-shop, on the farm,
At the desk, where're you be,
From your future efforts, boys,
Comes a nation's destiny.

THE EDITOR'S VISITOR.

It was the noon hour, and the city editor of the Chronicle was very busy, making out an assignment list, when a queer old-fashioned figure of a man came into the room and stood waiting by the desk.

"Well!" said the city editor, looking up sharply, after an instant, "what do you want?"

"I wanted to know if you could make use of this," answered the new comer, timidly holding out a small bundle of manuscript.

"I'm sure we can't unless it's something a trifle less hoary with age than that you brought here the other day." The city editor, who was a comparatively young man, very alert, very quick in speech and all business, took the manuscript, unfolded it with a snap and ran his eye over the first few lines. Then he wheeled his chair around and said, straightening up and speaking testily:—

"Now, look here, John Harmon, once and for all, understand that it's no use bringing such stuff in here, and I won't be bothered with looking at it! Why, this is identically the same ancient history you tried to shove off on me the other day."

"But I polished it up!" suggested the old man.

"Polished up your grandfather!" exclaimed the other. "Why you couldn't polish that matter so it would be readable if you worked forever. It's hard luck; but the plain truth is there are too many young men hustling for live news to allow of such back-number trash as that being good for anything but to stop a hole. I havn't got any more time to talk! If you get any news, bring it in and I will look at it! Otherwise stay away, please!"

The city editor faced his desk again, picked up his pen and fell to work, not looking at the other. The older man for an instant stood motionless, then he picked up the manuscript, put it in his pocket, and, turning away walked slowly out of the room without a word.

The wind was biting hard outside and he drew his coat collar about his ears as he walked despondently down a side street. He had not far to go, for presently he went up the front steps of a small house and opened the door. The room into which he came was bare and miserable looking, and everywhere showed the lack of a woman's hand to straighten the few bits of furniture, which only served by their mean repair to add to the forlorn appearance of the apartment. The old man stood quite still, one hand on the door-jam, staring ahead of him as if he saw beyond the opposite wall. As he stood there, there came a glad child's cry from the other end of the room:—

"Oh, gran'pop, I'm glad you come! It's awfully lonely!"

The old man's face brightened. He reached down and, as the little girl came running to him, caught her up, and laboringly lifted her to his breast. Then he kissed her and put her down. She did not see the tears on his cheeks as he talked to her of the fun they would have that evening "after work was done." After work was done was the season when these two had grand romps together. Work, as little Polly well knew, meant writing, writing until she would crawl upon the old man's knee and beg him to come and play, and he would drop the pen from his cramped fingers and let her kiss from his eyes the mist which would gather there, when he kept his mind long fixed on the pages before him.

John Harmon was nearly eighty, "a broken down newspaper man" he was called, and his only inheritance from past days was a knowledge of newspaper writing and a little granddaughter, whose mother and father had died in a fever epidemic a few years before.

The old man threw the rejected manuscript on a chair, then set about getting something to eat for himself and the child, the little one all the while chattering to him of what they would do in the evening. When they had finished he pulled on his coat once more, kissed the child and went out again. A publishing house had promised to look over some manuscript he had left a week or so before. He was going there to get their answer. He comprehended dully that this answer might mean something to eat, but more likely hunger keener than ever.

When the child was left to herself she sat down and fell to looking over some illustrated papers which were her invariable source of amusement. By and by, becoming tired, she wandered over to the table. The rejected manuscript on the chair caught her eye. Gran'pop's papers were forbidden articles to her, but when she saw this package and slowly spelled out the writing on its cover, "the Chronicle," there came to her mind that Gran'pop had told her when writing this address the night before and was too busy to play with her, that the manuscript had to be sent in to-morrow. This was to-morrow, she reasoned, and the manuscript had not gone. Gran'pop must have forgotten it! He would be sorry, she knew.

Presently there came to her a bright idea and she stood very still for a moment, thinking hard. Why could not she take the manuscript to the Chronicle? She knew where the office was; she had been there with gran'pop. It would be such a surprise to him to find it already gone when he came home. She decided to do it. She took the bundle from the chair and pulled on her jacket and tied her hat fast. She was used to dressing herself, and soon was on the steps, the manuscript clutched firmly in her hand. Then she started off for the Chronicle office, proud of her self-appointed mission.

The elevator boy was much surprised and not a little amused when she asked for the editor. He tried to chaff her on the way up, but she refused to take any notice of his remarks, if she understood them. All her thoughts were on the top story and the editor. Despite his fun making, the elevator boy was a trifle impressed, and thinking she might be one of the "old man's" relations, when he arrived at the upper floor he showed her to the door of the sanctum and told her to knock. Then he left her and went back to his post.

The editor was greatly surprised when a timid knock sounded on his door and in answer to his "come in" he saw over his gold-bowed spectacles the diminutive maiden who entered. He looked at her hard, but she did not appear discomforted. She came toward him without hesitation, and stood with one little hand on the edge of the desk, the other extending the folded manuscript.

"Gran'pop forgot to bring it down, so I fetched it!" she explained, her blue eyes looking up into his puzzled gray ones.

Now the editor was not a man easily confused, but this was a novel experience even for him. In all his life he never remembered having received in his office so small and at the same time so confident a visitor as this. He looked at her sharply, almost sternly, suspecting he was the victim of some joke; but her gaze never flinched, and the baby eyes were not frightened. He took the manuscript from her grasp and opened it. There was no solution of the mystery to be obtained here, however. The story was some local history of early days. There was no name, or mark of any kind to tell who wrote it or where it came from. Nonplussed, he turned his eyes upon the little figure beside him. Somehow, in spite of the old-fashioned and much worn clothes, it suggested to him that of a little one who once called him father, and a kindly smile lit up his face.

"I don't know anything about the papers," he said. "Who did it come from?"

"From Gran'pop," she answered, as if that conveyed full information.

"Yes, but who's Gran'pop? I don't remember him."

"Why, don't you remember him? He's been here often, and I came with him once or twice; that's how I knew where it was."

The editor raked his brain in vain to think who Gran'pop could be.

"Well," he said at last, "you sit down in that big chair over there and I'll look over this paper and tell you what to say to him." Then he wheeled his chair about and began reading.

It did not take long, however, for him to decide what to do. He struck a hand-bell on the desk and a boy came into the room. "Send Mr. Campbell to me!" the editor said.

A moment later the city editor of the Chronicle entered.

"Campbell," said the editor, "do you know whose writing that is?" and he handed him the manuscript.

"Yes," answered the other; "it's old John Harmon's. He brought it in here this morning, and I told him we couldn't use it. It's all ancient history."

"Well," said the editor, shortly, "it's the kind of ancient history that the Chronicle wants. Can't you see that that's local matter that a good many would rather read than news? Give it a good place on the fourth page of to-morrow's issue, and I'll try to see that we have a column of just such stuff twice a week. That's all!"

The city editor did not see the little figure in the big chair, and a bit disconcerted at being turned down so sharply, he took up the manuscript again and left the room, wondering what was the matter with the "old man," and how the historical stuff got into his hands.

When he was gone, the editor drew a sheet of paper toward him. Looking at the little figure in the chair, he said: "I will write a letter for you to take with you and give to Gran'pop."

She nodded her head wisely, and he wrote a few lines. Then he folded the sheet, put it into an envelope, and rose.

The little girl slipped out of the chair and came across to him. "Goodby!" he said, laying his hand upon her head, "and come and see me again!" Then he opened the door and saw her ring the bell and disappear in the elevator.

The elevator boy was quite deferential to her going down; but she paid no more attention to him than before. When she slipped out of the building she hurried up the street, the letter in her hand. As she turned the corner near home she saw "Gran'pop" just entering the door and ran hard to catch him; but he had gone in before she came up, so she knocked on the door. The same instant it was pulled open hurriedly, and the old man, white and trembling, stood in the frame.

"Thank God!" he breathed, drawing her up in his arms and burying his face in her curls. I thought you were lost."

"No, I only been to th' office!" exclaimed Polly, clinging to his neck.

"To the office! Where do you mean?"

"Th' Chronicle office. I took th' writing down there you left on th' chair and th' editor gave me a letter for you; he was awful nice."

The old man took the envelope she held toward him and dropped into a chair. With the child drawn close against him he broke the paper with trembling fingers and read:

THE DAILY CHRONICLE.
No. 429——Street.

JOHN HARMON, Esq.:—

DEAR SIR—We will use your paper on local history in to-morrow's issue. We will be pleased to have you contribute a column of like matter as often as you can give it to us, for which we will pay you at our regular space rates. Yours truly,

C. N. HARGOOD, Managing Editor.

There was a mist before the old man's eyes as he read the last words.

"Was he cross, Gran'pop?" queried Polly, seeing the tears.

"No Polly," said the old man, straining her to him; "he has given us lots to do, but it shall not interfere with our play time, little one."—Francis Churchill Williams, in Kate Field's Washington.

THIS BIRD CAN FLY LONGEST.

J. Lancaster an American naturalist, who has spent five years on the west coast of Florida, studying the birds there, has come to the conclusion that of all the feathered tenants of the air the "frigate bird" can fly the longest without resting. He has seen one flying for a whole week night and day without repose. The frigate bird can feed, collect materials for its nest and even sleep on the wing. Apparently its wings can be controled automatically or by reflex action, without the power of its will, and it probably adapts itself to take advantage of the upward or bearing force of the wind, which Prof. Langley has shown to support kites and birds in soaring, and proposes to employ in his flying machine. The spread of the frigate bird's wing is great, and it can fly at a speed of 96 miles an hour, without seeming to flap its wings much. In fact, Prof. Langley and others interested in flying machines might study the movements of the bird with profit by means of Marcy's instantaneous photographs. The albatross, "that king of the high seas," as Mr. Lancaster calls it, is larger than the frigate bird, but if it follows a vessel for four or five days it has to rest on a rock or on the ship itself.—Cassell's Magazine.

DEBS and the rest of the A. R. U. gang officially announced last Sunday at Chicago that the strike was "off." So glad to know it! Now if someone will only announce officially that Debs is "off" where he never'll be heard of again, a large vote of thanks will be tendered him by the entire country. But he's going to lecture. Wonder if he'll tell what he don't know about running a strike.

RETURNS from the Alabama election show that the Democratic candidate for governor gets about 15,000 majority, and that the Legislature is safely Democratic. This must set well on the stomachs of those Republican town committee members in this state who hustled for contributions to aid the candidacy of Kolb, the Republican candidate, in response to a request sent out by the Home Market Club.

MANY of the militiamen at Chicago have been discharged, so it is said, by their employers because of their absence from work on account of enforced duty during the strike, when they were engaged in protecting property, that of their employers included. Such employers are a disgrace to American citizenship. The state of Illinois will do well to provide for the imposition of severe penalties in future cases of the kind.

THE Republican state convention will be held October 6th, which will give time for only a short campaign before election. No one will object. The general opinion seems to be that the campaign will about run itself this fall. Of course the present governor and lieutenant-governor will be renominated, while the Democrats will undoubtedly ask John E. Russell to fill the gap again. The Republican caucuses must be held September 18th and 19th.

CONGRESS was a year old Monday, having been convened on August 7, 1893, to consider the financial question, and compared with the average healthy infant of twelve months has accomplished mighty little for the energy and lung power developed. Only two other Congresses have been in session longer than the present one, which has sat 330 days. The 1st Congress was in session 431 days, and the 27th Congress, on account of the death of President Harrison, 375 days.

SANTO, the assassin of President Carnot of the French republic, has been condemned to death and will be executed in about a week. Under the new law there can be no dramatic exhibition at the execution, nor can he be given ovations by his friends, such as were given Ravachol after sentence. By the removal of these opportunities the French government has no doubt done much to lessen such crimes as Santo's. He and his ilk are anxious to pose as heroes and martyrs, and death to them is nothing compared with the loss of the opportunity to parade their so-called martyrdom.

THE Central Labor Union of Springfield refused to furnish a credential to a regularly chosen delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor this week because he belonged to a military organization. Which only goes to show that the leaders of the labor organizations have no use for the guardians of the law so long as they interfere with their plans. Fear of the consequences from the troops is the only thing which prevents even worse scenes than those enacted at Chicago. On the whole, guess we'll keep up the military organization a while longer, even if the labor leaders do object.

THIS is the picnic season, and there are many delightful places on hill or in valley at which to spend an afternoon or a day, and people in this vicinity are not slow to improve their opportunities. Many parties are made up every week, but care should be taken against allowing children to go unattended, or parties of ladies being without an escort capable of protecting them from annoyance or insult. Happily such cases as that reported from Three Rivers this week, where a little girl of 12 was assaulted by a traveling doctor only a few rods from dwelling houses, do not occur often, but the opportunity should not be allowed by parents.

IT pays to be on the side of law and order. Not only for individuals, but for towns, counties and states. During the recent strike the people at Brazil, Ind., sympathized largely with the strikers; the sheriff appeared wearing the white ribbon of the strikers and swore in strikers as deputies, who put oil cans filled with emery on the locomotives and committed other such mischief, all of which was winked at by the citizens. Now the railroad is removing its large shops, which are responsible for a large share of the welfare of Brazil, to other places despite the protests of the citizens, and give these facts as the reasons. No one can blame the railroad managers.

PALMER NEWS.

How Lizzie Jameson Gained and Lost Her Wealth.

The whirr-r-r of a sewing machine sounded all day last Sunday in the room occupied by Lizzie Jameson in the house of William Merriam on Pleasant street, and Lizzie bent wearily over the machine and watched the needle punch innumerable holes in the cloth and fill them up with thread. For Lizzie was a dressmaker, and obliged to work for a living. True, she had a husband, but that was another story. She had married him a number of years ago when she was 16 and knew more than she does now. Her parents didn't like him, but Lizzie did. After a couple of years she accepted her parents' view of the case and since then some one else has darned his stockings, if they have been darned at all. This was some four years ago. And the sewing machine kept on sewing. Lizzie was only a tenant, but the rest of the household had gone to Forest Lake for a drive, and the sound of the sewing machine was so different from that of the wind among the trees and the dash of the surf on the wave-beaten shore of the Forest Lake Co's. grounds. If she could only go for a drive into the country. But money was a scarce article with Lizzie. Ha! A thought strikes her! Her host has a guest, a female like herself; but she does not work, and so must have money. If only a little of it were Lizzie's! The guest's trunk is in the next room and there is no one in the house. Yes, she was right. There is money there. Two five dollar bills and a silver quarter. That will make life easier. And the sewing machine kept on sewing. But, Lizzie, you didn't strap up the trunk again; that is why they suspected you, and why the officer called on you with the search warrant and found the money in your possession. Of course the judge knew you told the truth when you said it was the first time, but that wasn't his fault, and it was really too bad that your Worcester friends couldn't raise the $500 required to keep you from the York street hotel in Springfield until next Wednesday.

State Primary School Barn Burned.

The large new barn at the state primary school, which was erected about two years ago at a cost of about $12,500 to replace one destroyed by fire, was burned to the ground last Saturday morning, with the adjoining sheds, though none of the other buildings near by were destroyed. The structure was used wholly for cattle and hay, and over half of this season's crop, or some 70 tons, were lost. None of the animals were lost. The steamer from the Palmer department was sent to the scene and did good work in protecting the other buildings from the intense heat. The fire was started by a boy who is somewhat lacking in intelligence. It was his duty to assist in turning the cows out of the barn, and as he went to his work a little late he found a piece of a match just before entering the barn and scratched it to see if it was good, keeping on into the barn. The match was good, and when the blaze got too warm for his fingers the boy tossed the match aside and went about his work. It fell into the haymow and started the blaze. The fire was discovered by another boy who was sent to head off some of the cows which were not going in the direction desired. He shouted an alarm and H. E. Davis and George Woods, who were at work in the barn, attempted to extinguish the blaze with water from the pipes, but it had gained too great headway. The trustees have given permission to rebuild on the same site, and the work will be done under the supervision of the superintendent and farmer at the school, instead of by contract, as before.

A Brakeman Badly Hurt.

N. L. Cleveland, a brakeman employed on the New London Northern road, was badly hurt yesterday afternoon at South Coventry. No one knows exactly how the accident occurred, but he was between the cars to remove a coupling pin, and either slipped and fell or was caught and rolled between the car and platform. He received severe flesh wounds on his head and legs, which were dressed at Willimantic, after which he was brought to his home at Palmer.

An attempt is being made to have the Wilbraham and Bondsville teams play a game on the driving park grounds a week from tomorrow. Each team has won a game, and the contests have been close and exciting.

H. N. Sager & Co. of Boston and Ayer have leased the large store in the Nassowanno House block recently vacated by E. A. Buck & Co., and will open September 5th with a line of dry goods under the name of the Boston Store.

Few people have any idea of the amount of mail handled in the local post office daily. A count was recently made of the number of mails sent out, and it was found to be 48; 66 are received daily, and 116 are transferred from one train to another at the station.

Allen Atkins, Palmer's boy trick rider, is to have a Keating wheel made specially for him, and will then be able to do much better work even than at present. He was at the factory Monday and was measured for the machine, which is expected in a few days.

What is to prevent Palmer from having a section of state highway constructed within its borders? If this could be done possibly it might arouse the voters to a realizing sense of the fact that a better policy than the present might be adopted in regard to our roads.

The steamer was taken out for practice Monday night, being coupled with the hydrant at the corner of Central and Park streets. The water ran decidedly muddy for some time after the hydrant was opened, and residents in that vicinity complained of the odor emanating therefrom.

The tax collector has received the book from the assessors and is collecting the taxes. The amount on the book is $50,280.39. A discount of 6 per cent will be allowed on all town taxes paid before or on the first day of September, and interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum will be charged on all not paid until after that date.

E. Goodes has leased the entire ground floor of the building on the corner of Main and Thorndike streets, a part of which he has occupied for years with his shoe business, and will make extensive alterations at once. Several partitions in the inside will be torn down, giving a larger salesroom, and the entire front will be removed and large, handsome show windows substituted for the small ones now there.

It may be announced that a well-loaded car of special machinery for manufacturing a special high grade wire from imported stock has been shipped from Worcester to be put in the mill formerly occupied by the Wright Wire Cloth Co. Only a few skilled workmen will be employed at the start, but it is hoped that when general business revives this industry will be somewhat increased.

The New London Northern road announces another excursion to the seashore for the 18th, when the Christian Endeavor societies from Brattleboro to New London inclusive will picnic at Watch Hill. The fare for the trip will be $1.25 from all stations, and if a trip to Block Island is desired instead of a stop at Watch Hill, it can be had for 25 cents additional. The regular train will bring the excursionists from Brattleboro and intermediate points, but a special train will be run from Palmer to New London, leaving Palmer at 7 a. m. and Monson at 7.10. Members of Endeavor societies are requested to wear badges.

The plans for the Odd Fellows' new block on the corner of Central and Pleasant streets were presented to the lodge Wednesday evening, and were accepted. The building committee advertises in another column for bids for the construction of the building, which is to be of brick, finished in Southern pine. Bids may be made on the foundation, brickwork and woodwork separately, or for the building complete, and will be received up to noon of Wednesday, September 5th. Plans and specifications may be seen at Holden & Fuller's woolen mill. The building committee is C. E. Fuller, G. H. Bray, J. C. Green, H. T. Bishop and W. F. Fillmore.

The annual reunion of the 37th Massachusetts Regiment will be held in Springfield, at Grand Army hall, September 19, the business meeting opening at 11 o'clock. The usual reductions in railroad fare will be secured, and the dinner will be served by the local Woman's Relief Corps, as at former gatherings. The secretary of the association, James L. Bowen of Springfield, is anxious to obtain the address of every living member who was at any time identified with the regiment, and will welcome any information, either from members or their friends, regarding those deceased, removed, or who have never attended the reunions.

The last opportunity of the season for the people of this place to visit the seashore over the Boston and Albany road at reduced rates will occur next Friday, when another of the popular cheap excursions will be run. The train will leave Indian Orchard at 6.43 a. m., North Wilbraham at 6.53, Palmer at 7.05, West Brimfield at 7.16, West Warren at 7.25 and Warren at 7.31. Returning the special train will leave Boston at 7.20 p. m. The usual opportunity is given for a sail down the harbor to Nantasket Beach, Downer Landing, or Bass Point, Nahant. The number of tickets is limited to 1000, and those who wish to go will do well to secure transportation before the morning of the excursion.

There are many ways by which the smoker who doesn't always "have the price" can manage to secure material for the indulgence of his habit, or get a few extra pipes for the same money, and the latest scheme is the emptying of the cigar clippers in the stores and hotels by a man who appears as soon as the places of business are opened in the morning. If he would openly make his wants known there would be no objections, but the way in which he hangs around until he can get a chance at the clipper when no one is looking makes the proprietors and clerks feel anything but kindly toward him. He has been watched carefully for at one place which he has visited regularly lately, but has been caught in the act only once.

H. P. Holden's pacer, "Roscoe," did good work in the 2.30 class at Buffalo Monday, and got a record of $2.12\frac{3}{4}$, though he only secured second money in the race. Six heats were trotted Monday and the deciding heat the next day, "Roscoe" making the best fight of any of the eight horses, finishing in one of the three first places in every heat, while the winner of the race was last in the second heat, fourth in the fourth and seventh in the fifth. The score and the time will indicate the work done by the Palmer horse:

Ella Eddy, b m,	1	8	2	4	7	1	1

Time, $2.16\frac{1}{2}$, $2.16\frac{1}{4}$, $2.12\frac{1}{4}$, $2.16\frac{1}{4}$, 2.12, $2.16\frac{3}{4}$, $2.18\frac{1}{2}$.

A peculiarity of the race is that while the winner is hereafter eligible in the 2.17 classes, "Roscoe," who won second money, must travel with the 2.13 or faster horses, while the horse winning third money cannot compete with anything slower than 2.12.

BOSTON, July 25th, 1894.

TOWN OF PALMER,
To COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, Dr.
For support of following named persons at State Almshouse.

Charles D. Colgrove,	Sep. 19, Sep. 26, '93, 1w,	$2.00
	Transportation,	2.44
	Oct. 17, Nov. 7, '93, 3w,	6.00
	Apr. 28, May 5, '94, 1w,	2.00
	Transportation,	2.44
		$14.88

The above is a copy of a bill in the possession of the overseers of the poor, and illustrates how the town is sometimes compelled to pay for the support of its residents while the town officials may not see them for years. Colgrove has a residence in this town, and when he gets hard up in the winter will apply to the overseers where he hangs out for aid. They help him and notify the overseers of the poor in this town. They immediately notify the Boston overseers to get Colgrove a ticket and send him to Palmer, but not to supply him with money. A ticket is furnished him, but that is as good as money, and he sells it, keeping away from Palmer. For some reason he fights shy of this place, and will not come here if he can help it.

John Murphy of Warren was before the district court last Saturday for being drunk, and paid a fine of $10. Henry West of Providence was the victim Wednesday, and went to the house of correction for two months. Yesterday John Brown, whose birthplace was Boston, but who had no place in particular to call home, on his way from Denver to the Hub, was charged with drunkenness. While his soul was not marching on his tongue was running on in protestations that he was not drunk. He had met an old miner friend Wednesday and admitted having had two glasses of beer, but he was not drunk. He pleaded hard for liberty, and promised to keep moving toward the bean city if allowed his freedom; his health was good and he was once a fast walker. He admitted that his condition when taken in was such that the peace of the community had been enhanced by his confinement over night, but solemnly promised to harbor no ill-will toward the court or the officer. He was allowed to depart, and the last seen of him his soles were marching on toward the east, the rapidity with which one was being picked up and set down in front of the other assuring, if continued, an arrival at tidewater long before this time.

Rev. C. J. Tuthill, wife and child, of Saylesville, R. I., and Prof. J. S. Stevenson of St. Louis, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tuthill.

Arthur Duplisses, messenger boy at the Western Union telegraph office, is taking a vacation, and the messages are being delivered by John Leonard.

More About the Taxes.

Death and taxes are certainties. As people generally are convinced that it is a waste of energy to question the former, their undivided attention is concentrated upon periodical discussions of the latter, and it is a fact that most people are perfectly willing the "other fellow" should settle, so long as they are let off easy. The great difference in values in settling with the fire insurance companies and in giving in the same property to the assessors is simply stupendous, and must cause Satan himself to grow fat when he contemplates the honorable (?) course of some of our business men. Comparisons may be odious, but it is a fact that a $10 tax in Palmer is lower than a $13 tax in Springfield. The law says taxes shall be assessed upon the "cash value" of the property; it might as well have said "fix the assessment by stretching a rubber band." The policy of Palmer has been to keep a low valuation, primarily to "beat" the state and county out of their proper proportion. We are peculiarly situated, there manufacturing villages, and one "metropolis." As the policy of the corporations has been to a great extent to furnish their employes with tenements at less than actual cost to themselves, thereby discouraging any so disposed from building homes of their own, the result is that in certain of the villages real estate as an investment is way below par, and stagnation the result. Cotton manufacturers of late years are doing their utmost to see who can produce the most yards at least cost, and in their greed and efforts to keep up their ten per cent public dividend will employ anything in the shape of humanity, no matter whether they herd 20 in a room or not. This policy is not conducive to an increase in values for the town, but is a very good policy to pursue if an increase in the appropriation for the support of the poor is desired. The town valuation needs a thorough overhauling. The board of assessors as at present arranged is not fit to do the work in a fair and thorough manner. A Palmer assessor knows little more about values in Three Rivers or Thorndike than he does of those in New York city; neither does a Thorndike or Bondsville assessor know much more about Palmer values. Practically we are four separate towns. It needs weeks of careful, conscientious work by men disposed to be reasonable and just. To the board of assessors add two assistant assessors from each village, and let such a board revise the valuation list and it should be nearer to what is right and just. Follow the law as near as possible; if a places sells for $5000 that is its cash value; what sense or honesty is there in having it taxed for less than $2500? We have too many such cases on our books. In the first place, the town should and probably is ashamed of the quarters provided its servants in which to do their work. The present town house is a disgrace to any civilized community, and if corporatons should compel their agents and employes to put up with such surroundings they ought and would expect to fail up. Palmer village, while striving to be the "Metropolis" of this section, is only a "little one horse village." To be sure we have a grand union railroad station, but nine-tenths of the business at the station is through, or transfer business, and so soon as the trains take their departure we put on the "every day'll be Sunday" appearance again. We have three hotels, which is two too many, when the profit and loss account is considered. We have other modern conveniences, and we are paying for them—and growling. There is no question but what we will have to have more valuation or a lessened expense account in order to get a lower tax rate, and how will we do it? We spend some $50 a mile on our roads; the amount is so small that it is hardly worth considering unless we should abolish the whole appropriation and trust to a higher power to look after the highways. The poor we always have with us, and if our corporations continue their grinding policy, which we will admit they are almost compelled to follow, and business gets no better, candidates for the poor farm will be no less in number. The schools take the largest sum, and it is only a question of time when the taxpayer will be asked to pay scholars a specified sum per hour for attending the modern schools. A prominent instructor once employed by this town was loud in his advocacy of paying pensions to retiring teachers, and of course if we are to pay the instructors when through with their labors, the scholars should be paid while laboring. With free text books, free rides, higher and higher grading, it is only a question of time when little towns like our own will furnish a full college course free gratis. No one objects to paying taxes for educating the masses up to a certain limit; when that limit has been passed and all the luxuries of education are provided then forbearance ceases to be a virtue. The kitchen and the shop would be quite as useful for many scholars who now-a-days are given all the fancy frills and taken so far out of their proper sphere that poor bread from many a kitchen makes dyspeptics for "botch doctors" and poor lawyers to fight over. Theorists will tell us what great good higher education does, and no doubt in certain instances that is so. If the taxpayer can afford all the luxuries, well and good; pay up like a man and don't growl. If he can't afford the bills we are paying, go to the next town meeting and make them lower. As a rule the business men of Palmer pay no more attention to their own town meeting than if it was held in Africa. Growl and act in March, don't wait until August and then condemn the assessors and collector. CITIZEN.

PALMER CENTER.

Mr. Thornhill is giving his house a coat of paint, greatly improving its looks.

Mrs. Kinney returned to Springfield Friday, after being the guest of Mrs. Lamb for a week.

While Henry Stimson was practicing pole vaulting the other day the pole broke, letting him fall. He struck on his head, and was rendered unconscious for some time, but was not seriously injured.

While Fred Snow was riding his horse from water Sunday morning the animal suddenly bucked, throwing Fred over his head and under his feet. The horse then jumped over him, but in doing so hit Fred's head with one foot and stepped another on his leg. Fred pluckily got up and rode him home, but he was very lame and sore next day. It was a narrow escape.

BONDSVILLE.

Fleury McCarty has moved his family to Springfield.

George W. Canterbury, who has been quite sick, is slowly improving.

John Murphy and wife of Woonsocket, R. I., are visiting friends here.

Miss Marsh of Springfield visited her aunt, Mrs. David Lamb, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Holden returned Friday from their outing in Saco, Maine.

Fred Moore, wife and child spent Sunday with his father and mother in Brimfield.

Ed. Landers's little child, who has been very sick with brain fever, is getting better.

Will Taylor and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blaisdell of Chicopee.

Rev. Mr. Squires of Amherst spent Sunday as the guest of E. E. Ryther and family.

Miss Lillian Crouch was the guest of Miss Belle Walker of Ludlow a few days this week.

Miss Lottie Penury of Chicopee is the guest of her cousin, Miss Grace Taylor, this week.

Mrs. George Moores and two children are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, in West Farnham, Canada.

Mrs. Mary Dexter, son and daughter of Orange were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Shaw a few days last week.

Miss Wheelwright, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Getchell the last two weeks, returned to her home Saturday.

Mrs. Charles Collis and Miss Annie Morse are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Collis at Packardville this week. Mr. Collis will spend Sunday with them.

Rev. and Mrs. Virgin and daughter are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell on their way to Shelburne Falls. Mr. Virgin was formerly a pastor of the M. E. church.

The North Wilbrahams beat the Bondsvilles in an exciting game here Saturday, which was won in the ninth inning. The score was 11 to 10. The game was marked by heavy hitting on both sides.

Henry Hobson has finished a model of the Alabama and Kearsarge in action, and intends to carry it to Pittsburg in the naval procession Sept. 10th. The boats are 26 inches long and revolve by clock work on a circle 36 inches in diameter. They are surrounded by canvas painted in imitation of water.

Luther Collis had a narrow escape from being either killed or severely injured one day last week. He was driving to Enfield to see his brother when the horse became frightened, threw Mr. Collis from the team and dragged him quite a distance. Fortunately the harness broke, freeing the horse from the carriage, and Mr. Collis escaped with only a few scratches. He is 84 years old, and it is almost a miracle that he escaped with such slight injuries.

Two Fingers Lost.

Arthur Glaster, an employe of the Bondsville Dye Works, met with a severe accident Monday morning while starting some machinery. His hands were caught between two heavy rolls, and before the machine could be stopped two fingers were gone from his left hand and the fingers of his right hand were badly mangled. He was attended by Dr. H. A. Smith.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Clara Green is spending her vacation at Block Island.

Wilfrey Forte of Boston is the guest of his brother, P. A. Forte.

Mrs. John Wilson and family spent this week at Block Island.

Miss Ethel Ely of Palmer was the guest of Miss Eva Forte yesterday.

Charles Ruggles has taken a contract to dig a well for Porter Jenks.

F. O. Shaw of Springfield is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ruggles.

Cyrus Brown is spending this week at Concord, N. H., with his family.

Charlie White is spending a week's vacation in Worcester, visiting relatives.

Mrs. J. W. Hayden and family of Springfield are the guests of Mrs. A. W. Green.

J. K. Knox has been seriously ill during the week, but is now able to go out doors again.

Mrs. J. B. Burlingame is in West Springfield for a few days, with her sister, Mrs. Almon White.

Mrs. Germain of Worcester and Mrs. Vaughan of Boston spent this week with Mrs. F. White.

W. Bengle has recently purchased a horse which he thinks can show his heels to any steed in this village.

Misses Ada M. and Mary L. Atchinson of Ludlow have been visiting their aunt, Miss Mary C. Atchinson, this week.

Mrs. Packard of Brimfield and Miss Meda Hunt of Worcester were the guests of Mrs. C. Alden during this week.

About half a dozen persons from East Main street enjoyed a carriage drive to Flynt's Park at Monson, yesterday.

Miss Fanny Barnes and Miss Etta Ruggles intend to enter Northfield Seminary at the commencement of the term this fall.

Miss Amy Graves has accepted a position as teacher in Amesbury, N. H., and will commence her duties at the opening of the fall term.

Mrs. F. R. Burlingame, with her two sons, Lawrence and Philip, are spending the month of August at the old homestead on Baptist Hill.

F. A. Ruggles is having a new windmill erected, in order to increase his water system, which is now supplying a number of tenements on East Main street.

A large number from here attended the Northfield meetings this week, and several young men intend to spend Sunday at the campmeetings in Springfield, making the journey on their bicycles.

A gentleman who is visiting in this place desired to secure the services of a barber yesterday, and endeavored at four different times during the day to do so, but was unable to discover any of the numerous tonsorial artists who are doing business here.

Yesterday afternoon, while Eluora Petite and Dan Dunn were racing canoes on the Quaboag river, the sport almost resulted seriously for the former, as his craft tipped over and landed him into about eight feet of water. The antics of the boy as he strove to recover his barge afforded an amusing spectacle for the people who were on the bridge watching the performance.

The clam bake which was held in Aldrichs' grove last Saturday by the A. O. U. W. was a great success. All the arrangements were carried out satisfactorily, and Mr. Holt is receiving much commendation on the perfect way in which he baked the mollusks. The delightful day, the sumptuousness and delicacy of the tables, and the general good feeling conspired to make the occasion one of the most enjoyable of the season.

A 12-Years-Old Girl Assaulted.

Grace Cushing, a girl about 12 years old, was criminally assaulted Wednesday afternoon by "Dr." Harry C. Casey, one of the Kick-a-poo medicine company which has been giving exhibitions and selling medicine here for the past two weeks. A party of girls had gone to the grounds near the old cemetery, opposite the French Catholic church, for a picnic, and about three in the afternoon Casey came along and after some conversation asked what time it was. No one knew, and he sent one of the party to find out. As soon as she was gone he seized the Cushing girl by the arm and dragged her to the bushes adjoining the picnic ground, where he assaulted her and then started through the woods toward Thorndike. The little girl who had been sent to find the time gave the alarm, and parties started for the scene, but the fellow had disappeared and has not yet been apprehended.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Lena Page is visiting friends in Dana.

Mrs. Samuel Stearns is on a vacation in Chelsea, Vt.

Miss Lottie Lafar is visiting friends in West Gardner.

Samuel White of Ludlow is the guest of Freeman Smith.

Much sickness prevails in town at present among the children in the form of cholera infantum and whooping cough.

The Sunday school of the Congregational church held a picnic at Forest Lake Wednesday, and enjoyed a pleasant time.

Jeremiah Broshman of Greenville, N. H., formerly of this place, was called home this week by the illness of his mother.

Miss Nellie Riley, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Worcester for several days, returned home on Friday evening.

The funeral of the infant son of Jeremiah Sullivan of High street, who died this week of cholera infantum, was held on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George James of Jamaica Plains are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Richard, and will remain during the month.

Mrs. George Place and son George of Southbridge returned home Wednesday, after spending two weeks as the guest of Mrs. James Osborne.

H. M. Dean, who taught the grammar school in this place for some time, will not return this term, having accepted a higher position in the schools at Webster.

Malcolmb McKenzie, leader of the band, and E. B. Williams went to Boston on Friday to select the uniforms for the band, which they expect to have for Labor Day.

The Columbian Band has been engaged to furnish music for the cattle show and fair at Palmer on the 17th and 18th of September, and the boys are in hopes to appear in their new uniforms by that time.

A party of young men from this place will leave here about the 15th for Maine, where they will spend several weeks on a fishing trip. They will be accompanied by Capt. Jack Higgin, an old sea captain.

The people of this village are wondering if they will be given an opportunity to visit the Hub this season by the B. & A. railroad at reduced rates. It is now two years since an excursion left this place for Boston.

Quite a number from this place have been attending the entertainments given at Three Rivers this week by the Kick-a-poo Medicine Co. Mr. Markham and wife, who are with the company, have been seen here on the stage several times, and are well known in town.

A pleasant surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson on Tuesday evening, when they were pres

Barn and Contents Burned.

Wilson M. Tucker's large stock barn and adjoining sheds were burned to the ground last Saturday morning. The fire, which started in the bottom of the hay mow, was discovered about half past ten and an alarm was soon given. The main part of the building had fallen in when Chief Engineer Needham and his men arrived, but good work was done by the department in saving the house and other buildings. The cause of the fire is unknown, but was probably spontaneous combustion. There was a large quantity of hay in the barn, and the loss on this is about $1000. The loss on the barn is $500. No claim was made to the insurance companies for loss on vehicles, etc., and the entire loss has been adjusted for $1500.

Miss Augusta Colton is in Boston.

Mrs. Griggs is at Indian Orchard for a few days.

Mrs. Charles E. Stebbins is rapidly recovering.

About 800 people availed themselves of a most excellent opportunity to get a whiff of the sea breezes Tuesday, when the stores closed and business was suspended generally for the merchants' excursion. Not all, however, went to Watch Hill; quite a number went on to Block Island, others spent the day with friends in the vicinity of New London, and a party of ten took a launch and visited Eastern Point, Bushy Point and White Beach. The weather was perfect, the management of the excursion all that could be desired, and all who went report a very pleasant time.

A regular meeting of the Springfield District Grange will be held on Flynt's Park Wednesday, August 22. The morning session, for patrons only, will begin at 11 o'clock. Beside the regular business the Grange will be asked to decide whether or not it will organize into a Pomona Grange. Brother E. D. Howe, Master of Mass. State Grange, and others, will speak on the merits of the Pomona Grange. Afternoon session at 2 o'clock. All are invited. Topic: "Relation of Beauty to Successful Farming and a Pleasant Home," in charge of Hampden Grange.

The Demorest silver medal contest takes place next Tuesday evening at the Methodist church, the exercises beginning at 8 o'clock with the following programme:—

Prayer
Music
Reading ..... Prof. F. C. Croy.
Music
"Patriotic Prohibition" ..... Mr. Willard Converse Nelson.
"An Evil Beast" ..... Miss Alice May King.
"A Voice from the Poorhouse" ..... Miss Rebecca Kennedy.
"The Bible and the Liquor Traffic" ..... Robert E. Shaw
Music.

"Prohibition the Hope of Our Country" ..... Annie Louise Rathburn.
"How to Curtail the Liquor Traffic" ..... William Chester Moulton.
Music
Reading ..... Prof. F. C. Croy.

The entertainment, which is under the management of Prof. Croy, a graduate of the Boston School of Oratory, will be of unusual interest for several reasons. It is the first of the kind to be held in town; it promotes the cause of temperance; and last, but not least, the contestants are among our best known and most popular young people.

BRIMFIELD.

The Fourth Triennial Reunion of the Hitchcock Free High School Alumni Association will be held in the First Congregational church on Thursday, the 23d, at 1:30 p. m. After the exercises a business meeting will be held, followed by supper in the church vestry at 5:30 for members with husbands and wives. In the evening there will be a concert by the orchestra in the town hall, followed by a social interview. Dancing will be indulged in from 10 to 12.

Mrs. Clara Rhodes of Palmer spent the day Wednesday with Mrs. John Shaw.

J. F. Davis is enjoying a two-weeks' vacation from the Warren Cotton Mills office.

Mrs. Fred Sharp of Ware is in charge of Mrs. Kennedy's store during her trip to Paris.

There will be no preaching in the M. E. church next Sunday; service in the evening at six.

The mills have each a base ball nine, and they are practicing for a match game some day in the near future.

Albert Converse, while trimming a branch from his apple tree with a sharp pocket knife, cut his thumb nearly off.

Alfred Herichon, a barber, was fined $10 for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk on West Main street last Sunday.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Bicycle Road Race.

There were eight starters in the twelve-mile bicycle race last Friday night, the course being down the Boston road to Dimmick's corner, then on the Sixteen Acres road to the Wilbraham road, then into Wilbraham and back to North Wilbraham. A. N. Fisher received the first prize of a gold ring from a four minutes' handicap in 38 minutes and 55 seconds. Ernest Tufts, scratch, took the time prize, a $20 suit, and the fourth prize, a sweater, in 37 minutes and 40 seconds. C. Weaver, seven minutes, received the second prize, a bicycle pump, and Linden Bell, the third prize, a cyclometer. The other starters were H. A. King, scratch, Charles Fletcher 3½ minutes, Herbert Calkins, seven minutes, and Frank McGuann, six minutes. Calkins fell off his wheel on the course and Bell rode over his neck. He escaped fortunately without being hurt, but his wheel was considerably damaged.

Quite a delegation of fishermen went to Holland Tuesday to catch black bass, but returned with fisherman's luck.

Mrs. J. C. Burley spent Sunday with friends in Boston. Mrs. Grace Arnold presided at the organ in her absence.

The water at the town fountain has stopped, much to the discomfiture of the thirsty steeds that pass by with unslacked thirst.

Mrs. Estella Boyden of Worcester, with her sons and daughter, have arrived to spend a few weeks with Mrs. B's. parents, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Rogers.

The people rejoice to see a shingle out at Needham's block with Dr. Kinsman's name on it. The people have long felt the need of having a doctor located here, as it is quite an expense to send to Brimfield or Monson. Dr. Kinsman comes with good recommendations, and it is hoped he may be successful.

At a town meeting held Monday $1000 was appropriated to repair the Center school house. Only a few voters attended the meeting. Many who would be most interested in raising money did not know of the meeting. It is an unusual thing to call a meeting to raise so much money at any other time than the regular annual meeting, and the many sober-minded voters believe it was an extravagant move, not to be afforded under the present condition of business. An attempt will be made to rescind the vote.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Lizzie King is spending a few days in Worcester.

Mrs. Henry Blake and children of Springfield are the guests of Mrs. Duncan.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hubbard visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Bruce.

Mrs. Anna King Collins and child are spending the month of August with Mrs. George Shumway.

Rev. H. G. Gale and wife have returned from their vacation, and he will occupy the pulpit next Sabbath.

Mrs. Eugene Root is making a two weeks' visit with her mother, Mrs. Williams, at Shelburne Falls, Vt.

Dr. Cutter called on friends in town this week after an absence of several months in California and the West.

Mr. and Mrs. Chadsey and daughter left Thursday for Narragansett Pier. Miss Chadsey will be absent several weeks.

Mrs. T. Hamel, Miss Annie Holman and Miss Florence Holman are ill with typhoid fever, Mrs. Hamel's case being quite serious.

The band concert Wednesday evening was not as largely attended as heretofore, probably on account of the shower early in the evening.

Miss Lizzie Tagan has started for San Jose, Cal., to join her sister, Mrs. James Hannon, who left Warren last spring for her health.

A traveling company of female ball players who style themselves as the New York Stars will play the local nine on the Knowles grounds Monday afternoon.

Catcher J. Sullivan of the local nine had his little finger broken by a ball while practicing Tuesday evening. This will seriously cripple the team for some time.

V. Herichon, a West Warren barber, was before Justice Tyler Monday morning and fined $10 for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk on West Main street Sunday afternoon.

The Knowles nine was defeated at Ware last Saturday after an exciting contest of eleven innings. They will play the Gilbertville's on the home grounds to-morrow afternoon.

Some of the people are anxiously waiting for the electric lights while others expect to remain in darkness, as it is not considered expedient to put in a large number of lights at present.

Seymour J. Dufresne, boss carpenter at the cotton mills, had two of the bones in his foot broken by the fall of a heavy timber while superintending the measuring of some lumber in the mill yard Tuesday.

The annual inspection of the Warren fire department will be held at West Warren this year. The companies met Wednesday evening and made some of the arrangements. The date will be fixed by the engineers.

Officer Dawson captured a runaway team Monday night about 12.45. He had quite a chase before he was able to stop the horse, which was on the dead run. No trace of owner or driver has as yet been discovered.

The West Warren Cornet Band will give an open air concert from the band stand to-morrow evening at 7.30, with the following programme:

Grand March ..... Waldemar
Quickstep ..... Cleveland Grays
Waltz ..... Lanetti
Polka ..... Plaisez D'Amour
Quadrille ..... Pride of the Village
March ..... World's Fair
Waltz ..... Sylphion
Galop ..... Gold Band

Nathaniel Reed, a retired farmer residing in West Warren, was run into and assaulted Sunday afternoon near the Cherry Brook bridge by two bicyclists. One of the riders, Frank Bodell, was arrested later and brought before Justice Tyler Monday morning and fined $10. Not being able to pay he was sent to Worcester jail for thirty days. The other rider, Frank Ember, has cleared out.

The school committee has engaged two assistants for the high school. Miss Harriet S. Hayword of Bridgeport, a graduate of the Bridgeport Normal School, will have charge of the sciences, and Miss Carrie M. Allen of Spencer, a graduate of Smith College, will have charge of the classics. The No. 4 district school will be taught by Miss Mamie Dugan.

The annual picnic of the West Brookfield Farmers' Club was held on the farm of C. W. Shepard Wednesday. There were about 300 present. Dinner was served on the basket plan, after which addresses were given by Dr. J. C. Cutter and Edward Allen of Worcester, Fred White, Deacon White of West Brookfield, John W. Lawrence of West Brimfield and Charles R. Ladd of Springfield.

WARE.

Patrick Mulvany, 72, died Wednesday evening at his home on West Main street after a long illness from rheumatism and a paralytic shock sustained two years ago. Last week Wednesday he was taken with gastric fever and Sunday morning, while very feeble, and during the temporary absence of an attendant, he fell from the bed while attempting to arise and fractured his left thigh. Mr. Mulvaney was born in County Antrim, Ire., and came to Ware in 1857, entering the employ of the Otis Company and taking part in the building of the new mill. He had the respect and good will of all who knew him. He leaves two sons and three daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Eddy have returned from a four-weeks' trip to Nova Scotia.

Peculiar Action of the Assessors.

What is the use of employing a town counsel when the board of assessors vote in direct opposition to what he says is legal and right? There is much indignation expressed by many of the Ware people in regard to the exemption from taxation of the residence of Rev. John T. Sheehan. The property is worth $12,000 or more, and has in previous years been assessed for $8000 or $10,000. Taxes have always been paid on it, and the town attorney, George D. Storrs, declared the property taxable. Henry Bassett, an ex-assessor, says that it is mere robbery, and the poor people of the town have to pay higher taxes to make up for such actions. If it is right, there is a great amount of other property which should also be exempt. The board of assessors are M. W. Buckley, Chas. E. Blood and Harry M. Platt, and it is understood that Mr. Blood was opposed to the action, but could not change the vote.

Death of Virgil Guild.

Virgil Guild, one of Ware's old residents and business men, died Tuesday morning at the residence of his son, Dr. E. H. Guild, on Pleasant street. Mr. Guild was born at Dedham in 1824, and went to Ware with his father at an early age and formed a partnership with the late George H. Lyon in the manufacture of boots and shoes in 1856 and 1857 in the place now known as Dr. Yale's drug store. Later on Mr. Guild started in the clothing business in the store now occupied by E. D. Howard, the jeweler. Mr. Guild retired from business many years ago and bought real estate, and at his death owned one of the most valuable blocks on Main street and a house on Pleasant street. Mr. Guild was estimated to be worth $50,000 at his death. He was an old member of the East Congregational church. Dr. E. H. Guild is the only one left of the family, as Mrs. Guild died not long ago. The funeral was held from the residence on Thursday at 2 p. m., Rev. A. B. Bassett of the East Congregational church officiating.

A Long Face

—very good cause for it. She does her washing and cleaning without Pearline; and her work is like her face—just twice as long as it ought to be. That's not the worst of it, her work isn't as well done.

Tires her out, and hurts whatever she washes with the rub, rub, rub that wears and tears. Pretty hard, isn't it? Millions of women think so. They prefer to save time, labor, clothes, and money by washing with Pearline.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as," or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 321 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Palpitation of the Heart

Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Legs and Feet.

"For about four years I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and swelling of the legs and feet. At times I would faint. I was treated by the best physicians in Savannah, Ga., with no relief. I then tried various Springs without benefit. Finally, I tried also his Nerve and Liver Pills. After beginning to take them I felt better! I continued taking them and I am now in better health than for many years. Since my recovery I have gained fifty pounds in weight. I hope this statement may be of value to some poor sufferer."

E. B. SUTTON, Ways Station, Ga.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Sold by LEGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

If I Could Keep Her So.

Just a little baby, lying in my arms—
Would that I could keep you with your baby charms;
Helpless, clinging fingers; downy golden hair;
Where the sunshine lingers, caught from otherwhere;
Blue eyes asking questions, lips that cannot speak,
Roly-poly shoulders, dimple in your cheek;
Dainty little blossom in a world of woe,
Thus I fain would keep you, for I love you so.

Roguish little damsel, scarcely six years old,
Feet that never weary, hair of deeper gold;
Restless, busy fingers, all the time at play,
Tongue that never ceases talking all the day;
Blue eyes learning wonders of the world about,
Here you come to tell them—what an eager shout!
Winsome little damsel; all the neighbors know
Thus I long to keep you, for I love you so.

Sober little school girl, with your strap of books,
And such grave importance in your puzzled looks,
Solving weary problems, poring over sums,
Yet with tooth for sponge cake and for sugar plums;
Reading books of romance in your bed at night,
Waking up to study in the morning light;
Anxious as to ribbons, deft to tie a bow,
Full of contradictions—I would keep you so.

Sweet and thoughtful maiden, sitting by my side,
All the world against you, and the world is wide;
Hearts there are for winning, hearts there are to break,
Has your own, shy maiden, just begun to wake?
Is that rose of dawning glowing on your cheek,
Telling us in blushes what you will not speak?
Shy and tender maiden, I would fain forego
All the golden future just to keep you so.

Ah! the listening angels saw that she was fair,
Ripe for rare unfolding in the upper air;
Now the rose of dawning turns to lily white,
And the close-shut eyelids veil the eyes from sight;
All the past I summon as I kiss her brow—
Babe, and child and maiden—all are with me now.
Though my heart is breaking, yet God's love I know—
Safe among the angels—I would keep her so.

WE WISH HE HAD.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

Judge—"Prisoner, why did you throw a plate at you wife's head?" Accused. "Nothing else handy, sir."—Truth.

"Has that horse a pedigree?" asked the tourist. "Nope," replied the honest farmer; "nothin' but the heaves."—Washington Star.

Wife (at breakfast)—"Henry, will you ask a blessing?" Henry (examining hash)—"We have blessed everything here before, dear."—Life.

In the mind of the street car conductor there is always plenty of room at the front end of his car. "Move forward, please."—Boston Transcript.

He (threateningly)—"I'll get ahead of you yet." She—"Well, you need one badly enough. I don't care where you get it."—Detroit Free Press.

Grandpa's Birthday. "Many happy returns of the day, grandpa; and mamma says if you give us each fifty cents, we mustn't lose it."—Brooklyn Life.

Father (visiting at college)—"My son, these are better cigars than I can afford." Son—"That's all right, father; take all you want; this is on me."—Yale Record.

Furious Old Gentleman (to new Scotch footman)—"Do you take me for a fool, sir?" Footman—"Weel, sir, I'm no lang here, and I dinna ken yet."—Dundee Journal.

Chollie—"Chappie, deah boy, you are pawsitively and gwossly intoxicated—you actually have a jag on!" Chappie—"Haw! Is it on stwaight?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Doctor—"Did you use the powders as I directed, every hour?" Mrs. Giddy—,'Yes; but I put on a little paint with them, and it was a great improvement."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Bacon—"What's that thread tied about your little finger for?" Egbert—"Oh that's just to remind my wife to ask me if I forgot something she told me to remember."—Yonkers Statesman.

Sweet Girl—"Do you enjoy taking me to church?" Lover—"Not so much as riding with you on a street car." "Goodness! why?" "The sexton never yells, 'Sit closer, please.'" New York Weekly.

"Happiness, my child, always comes from within," but just then a robust bee came from the petals of the rose the professor was smelling, and caused him to change his mind.—Yonkers Statesman.

First Boy—"You're afraid to fight, that's what." Second boy—"No, I ain't; but if I fight you, my mother'll lick me." "How will she find it out, eh?" "She'll see the doctor going to your house."—Good News.

"Sometimes you appear really manly, and sometimes you are absolutely effeminate. How do you account for it?" "I suppose it is hereditary. Half of my ancestors were males, and the other half females."—Tit-bits.

The dude was making the girl dead tired by his long and vapid talk on the advancement of women. "Don't you ever wish you were a man?" he asked as a kind of clincher. "No," she responded in the sweetest womanly way. "Do you?"—Washington Star.

Slimloe—"Uncle Eben, what's your honest opinion of old Uncle Silas now? Do you really think he is a man of veracity?" Uncle Eben—"Oh, yes, sah; Uncle Silas he's a man ob veracity, shuah enough, sah; but" (reflectively) "he's an awful liar, dough."

Mrs. Bingo—"You must take that parrot away. Why when the minister was here, he swore like a pirate!" Bingo—"Ha! Ha! What did the minister say?" Mrs. Bingo—"Oh, he didn't know it was the parrot. He said: "I hear Mr. Bingo; why doesn't he come in and see me?"—Puck.

"My friend," said the missionary, "if you will never swear again, I will give you this shirt." The savage scrutinized the proffered garment. "Only one collar button with it?" he asked. "Only one." The son of the forest sighed. "I think—" half in soliloquy he spoke—"it would be easier for me to be good without it."—Detroit Tribune.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as proprietary products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

WORKING GIRLS INJURED BY UNINTENTIONAL BUT UTTERLY UNJUST SUSPICIONS.

Those benevolent-minded people who go about the earth sowing dragon's teeth under the impression that they are scattering seeds of kindness have a perennial "concern," as our Quaker neighbors say, as to the working girl's character. Two ideas, if presented to them, would make them open their amiable and invariably inexperienced eyes in wildest unbelief—one, that the girl who works for her living is not necessarily a suspect; the other, that she is uncommonly like other girls, and that it is as tiresome, is as bad taste and as entirely unnecessary to drag her morals into every discussion wherein she figures as to do so with boarding-school graduates or any other distinctive class of young women. They work such harm as only the well-meaning are capable of, and incidentally they make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of all to whom the working girl is a fact and not a fad.

"Why, these girls must be looked after, you know!" is the vague explanation usually given when you visit any of the so-called "homes" for working girls in this city—or, so far as I know, in any other—and find the hapless residents surrounded by restrictions which call forth such comments as that of one young inmate, who sarcastically explained:

"Oh, working girls are so much worse than other girls, you know; or else, like Tilda Squeers when she wasn't engaged, "they're 'going to be.'"

There is the restriction of the real home, and that of the ordinary boarding house, to which every reasonable woman expects to submit; there is also that of the reform school, to which that of these "homes" is most closely allied. The inmates must be indoors at 10 o'clock, unless by special permission, and if delinquent on this score are frequently called before "the ladies" to explain; their visitors are regarded with unwholesome distrust, their actions supervised, and in countless little undefined ways they are made to feel their morals to be in perfect perpetually unstable equilibrium.

This notion is everywhere. Not long ago a prominent clergyman, in soliciting associates for a working girls' society from among the ladies of his congregation, found it necessary to add the reassuring intelligence, "Respectable girls, all of them." I don't suppose it occurred to him that he was insulting every working woman within or without hearing distance, any more than to stipulate that the ladies who should offer themselves as associates should be respectable also. Yet, why not? For the benefit of such people, well-intentioned or otherwise, as affect to believe the working girls' morals more brittle than those of other women, the census of Carroll D. Wright, labor commissioner for the United States, has shown that the majority of women who have made the fatal downward step come, not from the laboring classes, but from the much-vaunted "safe environment of the home." So much for that fallacy.

"Now, tell me; don't you think a pretty girl going into business is apt to be insulted?" a bright-faced young stenographer was asked. Her reply was curt and contemptuous. "Yes—by such questions as that." After which she turned to me and wearily inquired: "If you wrote steadily on that subject for ten years do you suppose you could convince people that business men occasionally do something besides flirt with their female employes?"

That the people who hold this mischievous notion are chiefly simple-minded, home-keeping women, knowing nothing of how the other half lives—rather fond of imagining it lives wickedly—makes the injury no less. Like all ill weeds the tradition once started grows apace, a sweeping condemnation, based on isolated cases, and places a sinister mark against whole classes of perfectly legitimate occupations. "Oh, I couldn't have my daughter a shop girl; they are so fast, you know," I was once calmly informed by a comfortable matron.

I did not know, nor do I know any one else who knows. Working girls may be no better than other girls, but they are assuredly no worse, and when so large a bill of accusation is made out against them the accuser usually argues from some such limited scope of observation as did the man who, when asked, "Why are you so sure Indians always walk in single file?" replied, "Well, I never saw but one, and he did."—Philadelphia Press.

INGENIOUS ADVERTISING DEVICES.

When the New York business man feels trade slackening he goes out and gets it. There are various ways of doing this. The florist who has employed 20 pretty girls to spread his flowers over the city hasn't hit on a bad thing, judging from indications. He is but carrying out the church fair idea, taking advantage of susceptible young men and old men on the return trip to the childish period, and it goes. These girls wear nice blue uniforms and saucy yachting caps, and very soon develop a seductive tongue.

But there are other ways of pushing things, and the Sixth-avenue merchants are inclined to take lessons from Baxter street. The window sampler is getting to be an old story. The sidewalk puller-in is yet a little too realistic for the semi-fashionable quarter. However, there is a near approach to it in the outside operator in front of some ladies' furnishing stores in Sixth avenue. This is in the guise of a pretty model who tries on hats for the benefit of the passing feminine crowd.

She stands a little to one side of the entrance to the establishment and tries on one hat after another. Each hat is labelled in front with a sign big enough to be read at a distance. The model is, of course, a very comely young lady. She simply puts on a hat as it is handed out to her, turns her head this way and that for a moment, takes it off, passes it in, puts on another and so on, repeating the operation all day.

On each hat is a label containing the price. It is, "This is for $1.59," or "This for $1.29," or "This for 15 cents," and the people have no option but to look and haven't the trouble of going into the store. It is pretty hard to get away from a New York business man when he's got anything to sell.

A MAN'S HAT.

Of a famous royal woor it was once related that his bride being brought from her home over-seas to his palace, having been wedded by proxy, as the old custom was, he met her on her landing with gifts galore, chief and foremost among which were three beautiful bonnets.

The lady had been pleasantly impressed by what she had heard, but what she now saw accomplished her conquest, and from that day on she was devoted to her lord. The bonnets were irresistible. A becoming bonnet is the capsheaf of beauty. The French woman understands this, and with deft touches she pulls out her bows and smooths her ribbons and keeps her bonnet always in the freshest and daintiest order.

But a man's hat! Once it was a chapeau, plumed and laced, with gold cords and silk tassels. In the portraits of Vandyck and Franz Hals the sweeping broad-brimmed hats make a fine show.

The nineteenth-century man of business is not hatted for display, but for action. The hat is a useful part of his costume, and, so that it be brushed and in shape, the main interest it has for its wearer is satisfied. For society it has another interest, and this is in the man's manner of handling his hat on occasions of ceremony or in ordinary intercourse with others. No man who has the least claim to be a gentleman keeps his hat on his head in the company of women. Even if the women are people with whom he meets in business relations, and in those only, he defers to the sex by removing his hat in the office and in the counting-room as he would in the drawing-room. A man takes off his hat in the elevator which carries him when it also carries ladies. He does not do so in the public conveyance which all share in common, because in a street car or boat he is, in a way, out-of-doors, and requires a covering for his head.

A gentleman lifts his hat when recognizing a friend, or when passing ladies who are along with his friend, though he does not possess their acquaintance. A boy should be trained to take off his hat to his mother, his sister, or to the little girls he knows. To lift the hat with the grace of good breeding is a much-to-be-desired accomplishment.

Southern men remove the hat with fine gallantry and stand bareheaded when talking with ladies on the public promenade. The action is so dignified and so charming that one sometimes wishes it were generally imitated by men of equal politeness in other portions of our country.—Harper's Bazar.

"CLEVELAND BADGES."

I heard a story the other day which is too good to keep, for it illustrates so fully the feeling that prevails, even among the faithful, that I repeat it as it came to me: A lady, wife of a mechanic who voted for Cleveland and reform, was down town the other day doing some trading at one of the grocery stores. She was well acquainted with the proprietor, and, after giving her order, she fell into a chat with that gentleman. After a few moments' conversation, she suddenly exclaimed, "Well, this won't do! I must hurry home and finish my husband's Cleveland badge." The grocer is a Republican and he fired up in a minute, saying, "I should expect you to be thinking of anything, madame, but making Cleveland badges these hard times, and I cannot imagine what sort of a badge you would make."

"I'll tell you what it is, sir," retorted the little woman with spirit; "it's a patch about the size of a palmleaf fan on the seat of his trousers; it's the prevailing fad in our neighborhood. Since the present administration came in why even the Republicans are putting them on, and there never was a more appropriate badge in the world," and with a smile the lady passed out, while the grocer stroked his chin thoughtfully and exclaimed: "Bless me! These 'badges' are the kind that will make thousands of Republican voters at our next presidential election. There's no better eyeopeners."—The Saunterer, in Los Angeles Times.

UNCONVINCED.

A patient in an insane asylum imagined himself dead. Nothing could drive this delusion out of the man's brain. One day his doctor had a happy thought and said to him: "Did you ever see a dead man bleed?"

"No," he replied.

"Did you ever hear of a dead man bleeding?"

"No."

"Do you believe that a dead man can bleed?"

"No."

"Well, if you will permit me, I will try an experiment with you and see if you bleed or not." The patient gave his consent, the doctor whipped out his scalpel and drew a little blood. "There," he said, "you see that you bleed; that proves that you are not dead."

"Not at all," the patient instantly replied; "that only proves that dead men can bleed."—Yankee Blade.

An exchange tells a story connected with a strike on the North British Railway, during which much difficulty was experienced in finding engineers to keep the necessary trains running. One of the substitutes, a young fellow, ran some distance past a station and then, putting back, ran as much the other way. He was preparing to make another attempt when the station agent shouted, to the great amusement of the passengers:—"Never mind, Tammas; stay where you are! We'll shift the station."

Professor Dusenberry of Columbia College is so completely absorbed in his profession that he is becoming more and more absent-minded every day. He remarked to one of the students: "Something very stupid happened to me the other morning. I believe I am becoming a little absentminded." "What is it?" "You see I wanted to take my wife out in a buggy and give her some fresh air, and when I came to think over it I remembered that I never had a wife."—Texas Siftings.

CARES AND CLOTHES.

Sometimes put off together—Sometimes not.

Old Sir Robert Walpole used to say that he put off his cares when he put off his clothes. That was easy for a tough, rugged old fox hunter, even when he had the weight of a government on his shoulders. Sir Robert had a good digestion, and that counts for more in wooing sleep than a clear conscience.

Mrs. M. V. Cole of 227 Bloomfield Street, Hoboken, N. J., had a bad digestion after recovering from the grip. She was thin, nervous and debilitated. She had no appetite, and felt dreadful pains after eating. She could not sleep. Her husband had heard that Paskola would make thin, dyspeptic people fat and well. Mrs. Cole tried it. April 18, 1894, she writes:

"After taking the second bottle I was as well as ever and had gained wonderfully in every way. I wish everyone could know of and use Paskola. It certainly can be conscientiously recommended to the weak, sick and suffering everywhere."

C. A. Baker, of Newark, N. J., writes:

PRE-DIGESTED FOOD CO.,
30 Reade St., New York:

Gentlemen—I wish to say Paskola has done me more good than any other remedy I have tried. In fact, none helped me but Paskola, and I have used everything I could think of, having been in the drug trade for years until I had to give it up and try outside work.

"That did not accomplish my recovery from indigestion and constipation, but Paskola gave me a better appetite and color almost at once, and I shall never be without it if I can get it."

Such letters as this are coming in every day. All reputable druggists sell Paskola. The reason for its success are explained in a descriptive pamphlet which will be sent free to any address on application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

The Greatest Sufferers in the World.

are women; their delicate organizations being particularly susceptible to derangement and disease. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., purifies the blood and cures all the sicknesses peculiar to the sex; it fortifies the system against the diseases incident to old age. It is the best medicine in the world.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

Not What It Used To Be.

When I go home in summer time,
Down to the slow ol' town,
Where father, mother, Nell, an' John
Still kinder hang eroun',
I ask 'em how they're gittin' 'long,
How farmin' is, an' he,
Father, he shakes his head, an' says:
"'Tain't what it yuster be."

An' arter rovin' roun' the place,
With John down through the lots,
An' out eroun' the cider mill,
An' all them "dear" ol' spots,
I ask him how the fishin' is,
Down in the pon', and he,
He says: "Although it's purty good,
'Tain't what it yuster be."

On Sunday we go off to church,
To hear the Scripter read;
An' there I meet the vi'lage boys,
Erlong with Deacon Stead;
"Seems good," says I, "to come to church,
An' hear salvation's free";
He looks the young folks o'er, an' sighs:
"'Tain't what it yuster be."

They ask how long I'm goin' to stay,
An' what my jedgment is
Erbout their coming inter town
To run a bizzerniz;
An' then I tell 'em word for word
Just what wuz tol' to me;
"Thet tho' it's better'n 'tis to hum,
'Tain't what it yuster be."

An' so it is in ev'ry place,
I hear the same ol' plea;
Thet nuthin' now is quite so good
Ez what it yuster be.
An' out uv all these diffrunt things
This thought comes hum to me:
"Be we the same, who make each change,
Ez what we yuster be?"

JOE'S WIFE.

Dr. Ford was driving home in the twilight, after working hard all day, tired and anxious as to the result of an important operation performed that morning. The mud spattered up from the streets as he rolled along, and the chilling November drizzle gave to the trees a forlorn, almost ghastly aspect. His heart warmed as he pictured to himself a wife watching for him with a welcome smile from their cosy parlor, dinner ready, and a long, restful evening before them.

But, as he drew near home, no light streamed from door or window. All seemed as dark and deserted as the dripping street. He threw the reins to the boy whose duty it was to hold the horse on his professional rounds, and flung open the door with an irritated, injured feeling.

No tender smile; no sympathetic voice; no firelight; no dinner apparently.

"Elinor!" he called.

No answer.

"Elinor!"

This time a voice spoke out of the darkness—a tired voice:—

"Do be more quiet, John; the baby is just going to sleep."

"Confound it! Why isn't there a light here? And why isn't the baby asleep before this time of night?"

"He has been fretful all day with his teeth, and I have not had a chance to change my dress."

A wailing cry from the nursery sent the voice hurrying thither, and the doctor, with some inaudible words, proceeded to light the gas and take off the wet overcoat. The house was cold; the parlor had been arranged by Hibernian hands; an odor of something burning stole in from the kitchen. A pleasant reception for a man after a long day's work!

He ran up stairs with no gentle footstep. His wife sat by the nursery fire; her face wore a weary expression, and she had on the same blue gown that she had donned for breakfast. The baby at length slept in her arms. She held up a warning finger as her husband came blundering in, but baby's light slumber had been disturbed, and the process of soothing and singing had to be repeated for the fifteenth time.

It seemed to the young mother as if her patience could hold out no longer. It was provoking to have the little one startled from his uneasy dreams again. She knew Bridget would spoil the dinner. She had been trying all day to get down stairs to make the house pleasant with a magic touch here and there. She longed to get into a fresh gown, and brush her hair, but there had been no time for her to do one of these things. Nurse was away with a sick sister, and babies always demand more from their mothers than from anyone else. They are tyrannical, and know and seize every opportunity to prove their power over the anxious, half ignorant young mothers who are happy, after all, to be their slaves.

When at last the dinner bell rang, Mrs. Ford laid the baby in his crib, sound asleep this time, warm and lovely in his utter repose. She gave a hurried dab at her wavy hair, caught up a fresh handkerchief and ran down to join her husband, who sat at the table with a decidedly cross look on his face. He barely tasted the soup, then pushed it away in disgust.

"Burned?" asked his wife.

"Of course. Can't you smell it all over the house? Why don't you look after Bridget a little?"

"Why, John, I have hardly been down stairs to-day."

"Where's Hannah?"

"She went to her sister's last night?"

"Oh, yes; I forgot. What's this? Cold corned beef? Really, Elinor, have you nothing else to offer?"

"Would you like an omelet?"

"No."

"What then?"

"A beefsteak, if you have one."

Mrs. Ford rose and went to the kitchen. The girl, of course, had just filled up the range with fresh coal, so there was nothing to be done but make the best of the cold meat, potatoes, and macaroni, followed by a dessert of apple pudding and cheese.

Dr. Ford found fault with the potatoes, and said he was tired of macaroni; the bread was dry, and the butter not perfect. As to the pudding: "My mother always had mince pies at this season,' said he.

This was the last straw, and his wife, unusually sensitive to straws to-night, could bear no more.

"It is a pity you ever left your mother."

"I think so too," he responded, pushing his chair back.

His wife hesitated a moment whether to run around the table and burst into tears upon her husband's shoulder, or to rush up stairs and have a good cry by baby's side. She decided upon the latter course, and with quivering lip left the room and shut herself up in the nursery, where the fire was dying on the hearth and the baby breathing softly, in strange contrast to her overwrought condition.

"Well, it is provoking. Women always must cry and fly into a passion about trifles."

But her husband, even as he thought these words, began to feel repentant. He remembered the teething baby and the long day at home alone. In another moment he would have followed his wife up stairs and apologized for the pain he had given her. But the doorbell rang, and a summons to visit a sick man at a distance sent him at once into the wet night. And all domestic grievances were forgotten before he had driven two hundred yards.

The patient lived in a squalid part of the town by the river. The darkness seemed deeper in the neighborhood, the rain more soaking and the wind keener. The river swept sullenly by, a black, swollen tide, reflecting the flaring lights on the bridge. But the doctor minded this discomfort very little. He was in love with his profession, ardent and young. Besides, the despised dinner had given him new courage to fight pain and death.

He entered the one room of the low house to which he had been directed, with face quite free of impatience. A woman opened the door for him—a lean, miserable creature, with pale eyes void of expression. Her thin hair hung over her neck, her calico dress fell limply from her sharp shoulders. She stared at the doctor as he entered, and he could see there were tears in her childlike eyes.

"Joe's sick," she said slowly, gazing into his face.

"What's the matter?"

"He—he's going to die, maybe," she faltered piteously.

"No, I hope not."

"Joe's sick," she repeated in a whisper, shaking her head.

"Who's come?" asked a voice from the bed in the corner of the room. "Nellie, girl, who are you talking with?"

"It is Dr. Ford, whom you sent for," said the physician, approaching the bed.

One candle lighted dimly the untidy, comfortless place, showing a stove, and a man with tumbled hair and a rough beard lying among the pillows of his bed.

"Oh, the doctor," said he, with feverish eyes staring from under shaggy brows.

"How long have you been ill?" asked Dr. Ford, sitting down on a rickety chair.

"It's a week since I gave up, but I've been feeling bad for a long time."

The doctor placed his little thermometer under the patient's tongue, and waited silently.

"Joe's sick," moaned the girl peering out of the shadows.

The sufferer seemed irritated by the repetition of these words, and made an impatient gesture; but, as he did so, glanced pitifully at the slouching figure.

"What you need most is good nursing," said the doctor, after examining the patient.

The man's face darkened. The woman hovered aimlessly over the stove.

"She's my wife," said the sick man, hoarsely. "I know she ain't quite like other folks. But she's peaceful and good; not bold and noisy like other women. I pitied her first off; then I got kind o' fond of her. And she"—

The girl had crept to the bedside, and stood there with her vacant, troubled face, fumbling with the pillows.

"Joe," she said, much as a mother might speak her baby's name.

"She can't do nothin' more for me nor for herself," whispered the man, as he clasped one of the fluttering hands in his.

"Poor thing!" murmured the doctor.

"I can earn good wages when I am well," went on the invalid, "and I did the cooking and kept the house tidy then. Now everything goes wrong. She spoils all the food; but she don't mean to."

At this moment, something on the stove boiled over with a loud hiss, and filled the room with the odor of scorching milk. The girl started, then moved toward the ruined mess.

"Oh, dear me!" said the sick man under his breath. "Don't burn yourself, Nellie," he called as if to a child.

"It's scorched, Joe," she said, the tears overflowing at last.

"Never mind, my girl, throw it away. We can get plenty more. You see, doctor," he said in his hoarse voice, "I can't speak rough to her. She's my wife."

The doctor sat with bent head, speechless.

"I'll send you a nurse, my man," he said after a pause. "What you need is good care. I will come again to-morrow." And, with a low bow to man and wife, now clinging together hand in hand, the doctor said good-night, and went on his way.

"Thank you, sir," called the sick man, much moved.

The girl started, and wiped the last tear from her lashes.

Two hours later, a capable, kind-hearted woman was installed as nurse in the little home by the river. She brought with her food in abundance, and comforts of all kinds.

Dr. Ford drove slowly homeward. Though it was late, a bright light shone from the parlor window as he stopped. The glow of a wood fire illuminated the room as he entered. But no one came to meet him. His wife sat in her rocker, fast asleep. The lamp threw a radiance over her bronze-brown hair and one delicate cheek, as she slept with her head against the crimson back of the chair. Her face wore a sweet, childlike expression, with a touch of pathos about the lips, and her hands lay closely clasped in the lap of her gown of soft dove color.

Near the fire stood a white draped table, holding a tempting little repast, carefully arranged. From a slender glass in the midst hung one red rose. The doctor knew she had cut it from her favorite plant. On a pretty table reposed the flakiest and most delectable of mince pies.

Dr. Ford stooped and kissed his wife's fair cheek reverently. She stirred, then opened her large eyes slowly.

"Oh, you have come! I am sorry I was not awake to meet you. But here's a mince pie. I sent over to your mother for one."

"Hang the pie!" cried Dr. Ford. "Elinor, I am a brute!"

"Oh, no, dear—only a man, instead of an archangel, as I once believed you to be. But never mind. How do you like my dress?"

"It is divine, and you are an angel, Elinor. But, dearest, come and sit by me. I have been to see a gentleman, and I want to tell you all about it."—Buffalo News.

AN EFFECTIVE SPEECH.—At a meeting of the Temperance Union, held in a small Pennsylvania city some time since, the attendance consisted wholly of white people, with one exception—the pastor of the African M. E. church. He was a full-blooded negro, as black as the absence of light. The colored brother was asked to address the meeting; and rising in his place, he gazed around upon his exclusively white audience solemnly. Then he said, "Brethren and sisters, I feel exactly like a huckleberry in a bowl of milk." It was the most effective speech of the season.—From the "Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine for June.

Customer—"Seven dollars for this pair of shoes? Great Scott! The sign in your window says: 'Selling Off Regardless of Cost.'"

Merchant—"That's right."

Customer—"Regardless of cost! See here! I used to be in the shoe business myself, and I know this pair of shoes never cost more than $3 at wholesale."

Merchant—"That's all right, my friend. I'm selling them for $7 regardless of the fact that they cost $3. See?"—Chicago Tribune.

NO PROSPECT OF A TIE-UP.—"Young man," said the stern father, appearing suddenly at the door of the parlor and holding it open, "Walk out!" "Yes sir," responded the young man, rising to go, "You're the boss. You've got the right. But I want you to understand," he added, fiercely, "that I do not walk out on account of any grievance I've got against Miss Laura!"—Chicago Tribune.

Worth The While.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows by like a song,
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
And the smile that is worth the praises of earth
Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray,
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.
But it is only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the h nor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who hath no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered to-day:
They make up the items of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile,
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

DRINKS FOR GARDEN PARTIES.

This is an admirable receipt for the required tankard which holds the standard claret cup: One gallon of claret, the juice of twelve oranges, the juice of twelve lemons, one bottle of Angostura bitters, one pound of loaf-sugar, of which half has been rubbed on the lemon peel until yellow. Pour over a block of ice, and add Apollinaris water to taste. It is better to make claret cup the day before it is used. If uncertain as to the amount required, a syrup can be made of the oranges, lemons, and sugar, and when cooked bottle, and mix ingredients in same proportion at the last moment. One and a half gallons of wine is a moderate allowance for one hundred guests.

Cider cup, as concocted by English college dons, is a pleasing beverage to "sip in idle dalliance." One quart of champagne cider, one liquor-glass of cognac, one glass of sherry, and a half-glass of maraschino; one dessert-spoonful of crushed rock-candy; peel of half a lemon, and the other half cut in slices; one sprig of borage. Mix well, and place it in salt and ice for two hours.

Hatfield is also an English mixture, made with a bottle of iced ginger beer and a liquor glass of good gin.

Tea punch holds its sway with an unerring supremacy, and a good way to make it is with a quart of rum, one and a half pounds of sugar, six lemons, one cup of strong green tea. Peel the lemons, and pour the tea boiling hot upon the peel; mix all together, pour in the rum last. When ready to serve have a silver pitcher filled with crushed ice, and pour in the punch; the melting ice will make it a pleasant strength.

A good glass of lemonade is as rare as "a beaker full of the warm South." It should not be the thin fluid which is its common presentment, but should "have a body," which can be got by reducing the sugar to a syrup before adding the lemons. Take half a pound of loaf sugar, and reduce it with one pint of water; add the rind of five lemons, and let it stand an hour; remove the rinds, and add the strained juice of the lemons; add one bottle of Apollinaris water, and a block of ice in the center of the bowl, and before serving add one table-spoonful of brandy to the above proportions. Peel one lemon, and cut it up into thin slices; divide each slice in two, and place the pieces in the lemonade.

An exellent champagne cup is made thus: Peel the rind of a lemon as thin as paper, and throw it into a loving-cup with two lumps of sugar and about a half a teacupful of boiling water; cover over so that the lemon peel may steep, and in about ten minutes add a glass of sherry and a large lump of ice. Pour on this a bottle of claret, and another of champagne, and take out the lemon peel, adding in its stead a good spray of borage, a sprig of mint, and a shaving of cucumber rind. Stir well, and when thoroughly cold it is ready to drink.

KEEP YOUNG BY KEEPING BRIGHT.

Judicious mental work may help to lift one out of the ruts of premature old age. Read and think what you read, is Kate Field's advice for youthfulness. Don't use your mind as if it were a sieve and you were trying to see how much you could pour through it. There is a belief extant that knowledge, if gained at all, must be acquired in youth. Fallacious theory! Behold Galileo at three score and ten pursuing his studies with unflagging zeal; Cato beginning Greek when advanced in years; Ogilby commenced classical studies when past fifty. Gladstone is as much the student to-day as when the bloom of youth mantled his cheek. Be kind to the feelings and fancies of youth. If they prove perennial, so much the better. Don't forbid yourself glad, recreative thoughts and action. Don't be ashamed to make yourself as pretty as you can. A sensible woman may feel a thrill of pleasure innocent as a maiden's when receiving a glance of respectful admiration from a manly form. Smile without affectation, be pleasant without being silly—in short, be young as long as you can.

Sailors, like horsemen, have a tendency to become bow-legged. An old admiral, whose long sea service had given his legs a decided outward curvature, had a singular adventure with a bull dog that was a pet aboard ship. One of his most frequent exploits was to jump through the aperture made by a man holding one of his feet against the other knee. One day the admiral came on board the ship on a visit of inspection, and while standing on deck conversing with some of the officers was spied by the dog. The admiral's bowlegs seemed to strike the dog as affording a chance for a running leap. Suddenly he made a rush and leaped through the tempting gap. In astonishment at what had passed, the admiral turned quickly around to see what was the cause. The dog took this action as a signal for an "encore" and jumped back again, barking furiously all the time. The bewildered face of the admiral was too much for the gravity of the spectators, and, forgetting the respect due to rank, they broke into a hearty roar, in which, after he understood the situation, they were joined by the admiral himself.

Of Remembrance.

I do remember every note
And each sweet letter that she wrote
From where, afar the palm-blest isles
Are lovelier for her splendid smiles!
I do remember even the flower
She sent me in a lonely hour!

And sometimes, when my lonely soul
Heareth in dark God's thunder roll,
I wonder—her sweet worshiper—
If God's dark storms break over her,
And if they do, I know my breast
Would bear them all to give her rest!

But no! the fragrant orange blooms
Waft throughout her life their sweet perfumes;
And the tall ships with wind-blown sails
Bring to her songs of nightingales.
Yet, do they still, where're they be,
Sing to her one last song of me?

PACKING A HANDBAG.

There are fortunate beings who believe that they possess all necessary comforts for a day's trip when they are provided with a comb, toothbrush, and a nightgown. But these persons are few and far between, and most women find that even for an over-night visit they want the entire contents of their toilet tables and a large part of their wardrobes.

A bag should hold a nightgown, of course. If the traveller is to spend a night on the train, the nightdress should be, instead of the usual cambric affair, a dark silk negligé, which would be presentable in case of the always-to-be-considered accident. The bag should also contain a pair of bed-room slippers.

In the linen case the comb and brush, tooth and nail brushes, and nail file and polisher should be packed. These cases are made so that they fold into a remarkably small compass. As a usual thing the dainty woman will carry a sponge and her own small cake of soap. This prevents dependence upon the uncertain soaps of railway trains and even of one's friends.

Besides these, the handbag should contain a supply of handkerchiefs large enough to last until trunks are again available. A clean collar and a pair of cuffs are a necessity for the woman who wears collars and cuffs, while a clean skirt waist can be rolled into a small bundle and will be found a convenience. These, with a tightly-stoppered bottle of ammonia and of her favorite toilet water, will complete the list of necessities which should be packed in a handbag.—Philadelphia Times.

STOPPED SMOKING TO SAVE.

Xerxes Jones determined to quit smoking, not, you know, that it had any baneful influence upon his health, but solely for the reason that he didn't feel justified in spending 25 cents a day for the weedy luxury. Jones had a good disposition and began his new scheme on Sunday. "Seeing I've quit smoking, I'll put an extra quarter in the collection box to-day," he mused, and in the money went.

On Monday, just to please his little wife, good Jones bought a 40 cent box of mixtures and handed it over with the remark: "No, my dear, it's no extravagance. Just about what I saved on cigars to-day, and we both can enjoy this after tea." Tuesday Jones bought a 50 cent toy for his little boy out of the cash saved by abstinence from tobacco. Wednesday he changed his dining place down town from a 25 cent to a 50 cent table d'hote, feeling justified in spending the extra quarter saved on cigars.

Apparently forgetting this on Thursday, the reformed remarked to himself: "There's that new umbrella my wife's been taking about. I'll buy that and charge it up to two weeks' savings on 'smoke.'" On Friday a new dinner set was purchased to please the wife of his heart and set over against 20 weeks' savings from tobacco, and on Saturday Xerxes Jones spent 25 cents for cigars, having lost six days of his luxury, and figured up that he had "saved" on the wrong side of his books just about $38.90.—Philadelphia Call.

COULDN'T TELL HIS OWN WIFE.

Many people have had embarrasing experiences in the way of addressing strangers whom they have mistaken for friends, but a man living in the suburbs of Lewiston, Me., appears to have the lead in that respect. He drove down to the city the other evening after his wife, and not finding her started home again. After leaving the city he saw a woman walking along the street ahead whom he took for his better-half. Riding up to her, he said: "Get in," when she turned a strange face up to him and answered: "Thank you, sir; you look all right, but I don't know you." He apologized and drove on, when he saw another woman walking on ahead. "This surely is she," he thought, and approaching her in the dark he said: "I've been looking for you. Will you ride home with me?" "I guess that you have made a mistake," she said as she looked up. Again he apologized and drove on. It does not sound like fact, but he did see another woman walking home along the clay road, whom he approached, saying rather tartly, "Come, wife, get in here. I've been making a fool of myself all the way up." She likewise proved a stranger. When the man saw a fourth woman walking in the twilight he set his teeth and whipping his horse into a run went by her like the wind. That woman was his wife.—Lewiston Journal.

A PLOWSHARE FOR A BELL.—In West Jacksonville is a small colored church. The church is an old edifice, and its congregation has grown steadily until only one-half of it can be accommodated at one time. The church has no bell to call the pious people to worship, but it has something that answers the same purpose.

About the time for the brothers and sisters to assemble, a small boy, probably 10 years old, steps outside the door with a big plowshare dangling by a string. In the other hand is a railroad spike. Every ten seconds or so he strikes the plowshare with the spike, and keeps it up for about ten minutes, when he gives a variation in a series of sharp raps to imitate the tolling of a bell.

The imitation is first rate, and the sound is not at all unmusical, and calls the people to the church just as effectually as if the best bell in the world hung in the steeple.—Florida Times-Union.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 17, 1894.

THE president has gone to Gray Gables for relief from an attack of malaria.

VIRGINIA has become tired of the Coxeyites remaining on her soil, and has driven them off. Coxey has declared that he can do nothing more for them, and they are again wanderers on the face of the earth, if indeed they were ever aught else. Coxey is to run for Congress.

THE tariff question is settled at last, for a time at least, the House on Monday having agreed to accept the Senate bill. It does not exactly suit President Cleveland, and there is some doubt about his affixing his signature. In case he does not the bill will become a law and go into effect at midnight on the 27th.

There must be money somewhere when people can go to the seashore for a vacation and still have enough left to denote $40,000 for foreign missions, as was done at Old Orchard, Me., last Sunday. One pledge was for $10,000, one for $5000, two for $1000 each, several for $500 and $250 each, and so on down. In addition there were donations of real estate and jewelry.

THE engineers and conductors on the Southern Pacific road threaten to strike unless they are paid their regular wages for the time lost during the recent strike. There would be about as much sense in paying them for the work they did not do at any time when they wanted a day or a month off. On that basis why not have the road furnish the men with their uniforms and they just draw their salaries for wearing them?

THE crusade against disorderly houses in New York is being taken up by a woman who finds it impossible to get reputable people to stay in her houses, which are on a street the police have been protecting. She could get no satisfaction from the officers, who told her that she would have to look higher in the department for help, and went about the matter herself, being backed by other property owners. She has some pretty strong evidence against the police department, and proposes to push the matter.

AND now Madeline Pollard, she of the Congressman Breckenridge breach of promise case and pestilential scandal, is to go on the stage. Of course that little episode and the notoriety it gave her cuts no figure in the move; it is because she "has unusual talent," "has always had an ambition to become an actress, and now believes that this is the only profession left open to her." The profession must feel flattered. Some are already in revolt. It would be interesting to know what percentage of the box office receipts is the result o fher talent alone.

IT may be true that lynchings are going out of style in North Carolina, but they have a new method which accomplishes the same end while having the delicious virtue of keeping within the law. A negro at Graham the other day was about to be dealt with in the usual way when the governor interposed and ordered a special court to be convened for the trial of the criminal. It took the "court" only a few minutes to begin and end the farce, and in two hours from the gathering of the mob which took the fellow the court had been convened, the prisoner arraigned and had a fair trial before a jury of his peers, convicted, sentenced and hung, and the crowd of thousands, which had assembled at the beginning and remained until after the execution, had gone home. North Carolina 's a good state to keep out of.

NEW BEDFORD manufacturers have decided that they must reduce wages, and the spinners have decided to strike next Monday if the proposition is carried into effect. The strike will affect 10,000 operatives and cut off a pay roll of $76,000 a week, but the strike is expected to be long and bitter, as the spinners' union numbers about 300 members and has $50,000 in the treasury. It's a mighty poor time to strike. Something of the probable result may be surmised from the outcome of the majority of similar affairs during the past year. It seems strange that wisdom in such matters is seldom acquired except by personal experience. In this connection it is noted that the 13,000 miners in the Clearfield region who struck April 20th have gone back to work at the same pay they were receiving when they quit, having lost $1,288,500 in wages and gained nothing. These are times when it behooves a man who has a job to hold it down hard.

IT will take a long time for those in moderate circumstances to recover from the effects of the hard times of the past year. A citizen not a thousand miles from Palmer was being shown by a clothier what was called an extra good bargain on a suit of clothes, but remarked that he couldn't afford to buy it. He was considered a well-to-do man, and was laughed at as talking for effect, whereupon he stated that he had a snug sum laid away in the bank when the mills shut down last year, but that every cent of it had been used for the necessaries of life before work was plenty again, and that a new suit of clothes could not be afforded. There are many who could tell a similar story, and the amount withdrawn from the savings banks in like instances during the past year can be indicated only by a long row of figures. In many cases the sum laid by represented years of saving and self-denial, and which it cannot be hoped to duplicate, the former possessor having advanced too far along life's path to admit of the undertaking.

A peculiar case will come before the next term of the supreme court at Springfield. About 1876 Eugene Suhrer of Westfield married at New York a Mrs. Sonn, whose husband was in England and of whose death she had no tidings. Mrs. Sonn had three children, two sons and a daughter. The daughter in time grew up to be a beautiful girl and Shurer decided he would rather have the daughter for a wife than the mother, so they accordingly eloped to Westfield, where they lived for some years as man and wife, finally getting married. Mrs. Suhrer No. 2 left her husband last January and went to live with her mother at Springfield, and now Suhrer has begun a suit against his mother-in-law and former wife for alienating his present wife's affection. The question arises, is Suhrer his own son-in-law or his own father-in-law, or neither. Suhrer claims that Mrs. Sonn's husband was alive when he married her.

PALMER NEWS.

New Teachers for Palmer Schools.

The school committee held a meeting Monday afternoon and filled the vaacncies in the corps of teachers occasioned by the resignation of five since the schools closed in June. They are: Principal of the Bondsville grammar school, Miss Dora P. Cleveland of Skowhegan, Me., fourth and fifth grade, Miss Emma F. Barney of South Hadley Falls, first primary, Miss Harriet B. Thayer of Hingham; principal of Thorndike grammar, Miss Carrie A. Parker of Uxbridge; room four at Three Rivers, Miss Helen L. Sweet of Bardwell's Ferry. These are all normal or training school graduates, and have had from two to twelve years experience as teachers.

At the next meeting of the committee the pupil teachers will be appointed. There is to be one for each grammar school building selected by rank from the young lady graduates of the Palmer schools, who will receive $3 per week. This gives an opportunity for those of ability who cannot afford a normal or training school course to get practical instruction in the work. These will be appointed to future vacancies in the corps of teachers if competent.

The committee voted in June to introduce music into the schools, but at the last meeting voted to wait awhile longer before taking this step. Drawing was considered, but both were dropped.

The fall examination for admission to the high school will be held in the grammar school building in the Depot village on the 28th.

New desks are to be placed in the first primary and third and fourth grade rooms in this village. They will be of the latest pattern, each desk and seat adjustable to the requirements of the pupil occupying it.

The contract for transporting the pupils from the Forest Lake district has been awarded to George D. Whiting. The others remain as heretofore.

The Palmers defeated the West Warrens 25 to 17 at West Warren last Saturday.

Daniel Mulvihill will open a tailor shop about September 1st in Eager's block.

E. H. Truesdell is building a barn in the rear of his residence on West Main street.

The staging has been removed from about Holden's block, and it presents an attractive appearance.

Master George Ellis gave a picnic party to a number of young friends at the Point of Rocks this afternoon from 3 to 6.

The young people's society of St. Paul's Universalist church will hold a service at 7 o'clock Sunday evening in the church.

M. D. Sullivan, proprietor of the Nassowanno House, has secured as manager Melvin E. Haradon, the former successful proprietor of the hotel.

D. L. Bodfish of Bridgewater, who is to open a dry goods store in the Cross block, is moving his family into Mrs. Henry Atkins's house on Park street.

The case of Lizzie Jameson, for stealing money from a trunk in the house of William Merriam, was settled in court last Saturday by the payment of a fine.

F. F. Fillmore has disposed of the Weeks House to D. M. Fuller of Springfield, who has taken possession, and takes in exchange a grocery store in Springfield.

An excursion will be run over the New London Northern road to Saratoga by way of the Hoosic Tunnel the 30th. Tickets for the round trip $2, good to return the next day.

There was a lively fire on the east side of Dewey Hill Tuesday afternoon, occasioned by A. J. Northrop burning over a piece of land to get rid of the brush. The high wind made a hot blaze for a time.

The annual hunt of the Arcanum council will be held on the 18th of September. The captains will be Fred Adams and Silas Keith, and all who will participate in the sport are requested to leave their names with these two.

The New London Northern road ran a special excursion to Lake Pleasant yesterday to accommodate those who cared to hear Robert G. Ingersoll lecture on "Liberty for Man, Woman and Child." There were four tickets sold at this station.

H. P. Holden's pacer "Roscoe" won first money in the 2.23 pacing race at Albany yesterday. The races were attended by a number of Palmer horsemen. Thomas Blanchard's "Tillie B." also won first money in the 2.37 class at Northampton.

Ailen Atkins has received his new Keating wheel and is hard at work practicing new tricks for the Labor Day tournament. The Keating company gave the boy the wheel, making it to measure for him, after seeing him perform his tricks on an old wheel at the factory.

W. H. Higgins had his bicycle somewhat smashed last Saturday night and narrowly escaped injury himself by colliding with a horse and wagon on Main street in the dark. The wheel went under the wagon, but Mr. Higgins managed to roll out one side in time to escape the feet of the horse.

Exceptions have been filed in the case of John Hopkins, late of Palmer, who was killed in the Worcester yard in 1892 by striking a switch as he alighted from a freight train. Edward Goodes is the administrator of the estate. The case has been tried once, and a verdict of $1400 rendered.

Although not occasioned by a monkey and parrot, it was a monkey and parrot time, just the same, at the union passenger station yesterday forenoon when the three dogs belonging to as many different owners undertook to settle their differences then and there, and the parrot belonging to a belated traveler chimed in on the chorus. It was fun, fur and feathers, fast and furious, for a time.

A Polander appeared at the residence of Deputy Sheriff Studley Tuesday afternoon anxious to find that officer. He had a sad tale of woe and broken English, to the effect that a woman in Thorndike had stolen $92 from him. He claimed to be from Connecticut and compelled to return at once, and as the officer was not at home he failed to get the facts in the case. No one else seems to have any knowledge of the matter.

The first real ball game of the season will take place on the driving park grounds tomorrow afternoon, when the North Wilbrahams and Bondsvilles will play. Each nine has won a game, and the one to-morrow is for the championship and a purse of $100. Fitzpatrick will umpire, and it is needless to say the game will be for blood. Black and Shugrue will be the battery for the North Wilbrahams, and Sedgwick and Sullivan for the Bondsvilles.

The last opportunity of the season to visit Newport at excursion rates will occur next Wednesday, when an excursion to this charming seashore resort will be run over the New London Northern road, the fare for the round trip being put at the low rate of $1.50. The train will leave Palmer at 7.35 a. m., connecting at New London with the magnificent twin-screw steamer "City of Lowell" at 9.55, Newport being reached at 1 p. m. The boat will not leave Newport until 3.30, giving two hours and a half in which to see the sights of the place. A special train will convey the excursionists from New London on their homeward journey.

The dangerous grade crossing of the New London road and the highway to Three Rivers is in a fair way to receive attention at last. The matter was brought to the attention of the railway people some time ago, and they agreed that the grades should be separated, fixed on a plan, and promised to attend to the matter. But two years slipped by and no move was made. The town is now pushing the case, and the justices of the superior court have appointed Timothy M. Brown, Charles E. Hibbard and Henry G. Taft a commission to view the premises and decide in the matter. A hearing will be held in the district court room next Thursday at 11 a. m.

The Christian Endeavor excursion to Watch Hill to-morrow over the New London Northern road is sure to attract many from this locality with its low rate of fare, only $1.25 for the round trip. All towns between Brattleboro and New London will be accommodated, and members of the Endeavor societies are requested to wear badges. At Watch Hill there will be plenty of opportunity for bathing, etc., and those who enjoy a genuine shore dinner will be accommodated. The trip by boat is not a long one, so there need be no fear of seasickness, and the stay at Watch Hill will give one ample time to get the benefit of the salt air. A special train will run from Palmer, leaving at 7.

F. M. Dodge of Pittsfield, the horse trainer, a former resident of Palmer, captured the honors of the day at the circuit races at Rochester last Monday. Besides winning second money in the 2.15 race with "J. H. Rockwell," he took three straight heats with "Carldon" in the 2.23 trot, the stallion trotting each heat faster than the preceding, doing the last in 2.10¼. For competitors he had "Alar" and "Rex Americus," the former having swept her class clear along the circuit from Detroit to Buffalo and taking a race record of 2.13¾. This is her first defeat this year. The race was supposed to be between "Alar" and "Rex Americus," but "Carldon" upset all calculations and astonished every one by his great trotting. It is estimated Messrs. Dodge and Quinby, owners of "Carldon," realized about $4000 out of the race, including the $2500 that was theirs from a division of the purse.

The present season at Forest Lake Garden has not been as prosperous as some in the past, though it has been better than the proprietors hoped for. The past week has been a lively one however, several parties being in camp there. Misses Anna and Effie Shaw, Harold and Albert Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Chandler have been at one of the cottages; another has been occupied by Miss Addie Rogers and Miss Lizzie Wassum of Palmer, Mrs. W. F. Harden and daughter Lucy of Hingham, Miss Alice Peabody of Washington, D. C., Miss Jean Richmond of Indian Orchard and Miss Florence Harvey of Winsted, Ct.; W. E. and J. E. Breckenridge and F. D. Edgell are occupying a third, while Calvin Hastings and Arthur Holbrook of Palmer, with Granger Clark of Thorndike, are camping on an island in the lake. Tuesday the Monson Grange picnicked at the lake, and Wednesday a large party of Palmer people visited the campers there.

The New York Stars, an aggregation of "young lady" base ball players, who were advertised as "young, handsome and ladylike," played what was called a game of ball on the driving park grounds Tuesday afternoon with a nine made up of players from the several villages of the town. The Stars comprised all ages, from the girl of 18 who ought to have been sent home to her mother, to the one of Amazonian predilection who was on the shady side of 30 and had been "out" more than one season. As a constellation the Stars did not shine with any degree of brilliancy, though there were three or four who really knew how to play ball. Of course the game was a farce; slow balls were tossed to such of the combination as knew how to bat and came to the plate, and no great effort was made at accuracy of decisions by the umpire. The crowd took the farce good-naturedly, and was a decidedly quiet one considering the occasion. The attendance was not large, and the majority of those present came from out of town, Palmer people evidently not taking kindly to that sort of thing.

In the district court last Saturday Patrick Crimmins of Palmer paid a fine of $5 for drunkenness. Michael Sweeney was assessed $10 and John Bradley $5, both of whom paid. On Monday the case of George W. Lee, for the same offense, was continued until the last day of the month. John Barry of Hartford, an itinerant umbrella mender, was the victim Tuesday. John bought his tanglefoot in the nutmeg state and assumed his "jag" there, then coming to Massachusetts soil to sober off. Somehow the Connecticut booze and the Massachusetts air had an exhilarating effect on the knight of the road, and he was gathered in. A contribution of $5 to help pay the expenses incurred in such cases procured his release, and he shook the dust of Palmer off his feet. Charles D. Colburn of Palmer also chipped in a $5 note because of too intimate acquaintance with snake-bite medicine. Yesterday morning E. B. Hamblett paid $5 for drunkenness. Michael O'Grady was held for the September term of the superior court in $1000 bonds for assault. To be sure it was his wife he pounded, and he only gave her a black eye, a cut on the face and a few other bruises, but the court concluded that he had committed the offense once too often to allow it to pass without a reminder that such things are not allowed. He failed to secure sureties.

Found Dead in Bed.

Michael Mullen, about 30, was found dead in his bed at the Riverside Hotel Sunday morning about 7 o'clock. Mullen had been at work for George Mooers of Thorndike haying, but was discharged Saturday afternoon because too drunk to be of any use, and was seen about the streets until about 9.30 in the evening. Mullen roomed with his brother Felix, the adjoining room being occupied by John Burns, and when Mullen retired he tumbled in with Burns, not stopping to remove his clothes. Felix Mullen arose about 5 o'clock Sunday morning, and at that time both his brother and Burns were sound asleep. Patrick Mullen was seen on the street at 6 but at 7, when Burns awoke, he lay on the bed dead. Medical Examiner Holbrook was called and made an examination, deciding that death was the result of alcoholism. Mullen was a hard drinker; he was afflicted with asthma, and his brother says drank whisky to relieve it. The brother is the only relative.

The third game of the series between the Bondsvilles and Thorndikes took place here this afternoon on the church grounds. The fourth game will take place at Bondsville on the 25th, and the last here September 1st.

A base ball club has been organized, to be known as the Stars. They defeated a Bondsville club on Wednesday by a score of 17 to 12, and would like to hear from clubs in the surrounding villages, under 15 years of age. Thomas Kennedy is captain.

Boy Ran Over.

Joseph Lafarar was struck by a team while playing with a companion Thursday afternoon and thrown under the horse's feet, receiving a bad cut over the eye and also sustaining other bruises. When the occupants of the carriage saw what had happened they drove away in great haste in the direction of Palmer. They could speak no English, being new arrivals from Poland.

A Born Drummer.

This village has a wonder in Georgie Young, a little lad scarcely 9 years of age, who can execute rolls, etc., upon a drum in a way that causes experts to open their eyes in astonishment. He has always, since he was old enough to walk, showed a great desire to drum, and would play upon tin cans for lack of an instrument. The little fellow has to have assistance in holding the drum, but his time is excellent, and the manner in which he handles the sticks is really wonderful.

Base Ball.

BONDSVILLES 7—THORNDIKES 4.

The first game of the series between the Bondsville and Thorndike clubs was played here on Friday, and was close and interesting. The features were Longtine's running catch and the throwing to bases of D. Donovan. The Thorndikes showed poor judgment in running bases, five men being caught napping. The attendance was the largest of the season. Riley of Chicopee Falls was in the box for Bondsville, and was hit quite freely. Fleming pitched a winning game for Thorndike, holding the visitors down to two hits in six innings, but secured poor support in the field. Longtine and Slate caught well. The following is the score in full:

Time of game, 1 hour and 20 minutes. Umpires, Donovan, Murphy.

THORNDIKES 8—BONDSVILLES 6.

The Thorndikes turned the tables on the Bondsvilles at Bondsville on Saturday in a neat-played contest. Carey pitched a magnificent game and was given good support. Shea was put in the box for Bondsville, but was batted out in one inning and Riley was substituted, pitching a fine game. McAuliff saved the game for Thorndike by making a splendid line catch with two men on bases, which if dropped the score would have been tied. The Thorndikes out-batted and outplayed the home team at every point. The following is the score.

Double plays, McAuliff unassisted, Fleming to Kelliher. Passed balls, Longtine. Wild pitch, Riley. Time of game, 2 hours and 30 minutes. Umpires, Donovan, Murphy.

NOTES.

Poor base running lost the game here on Friday; five men were caught napping.

Fleming pitched elegant ball, but was given poor support.

Longtine's running fly catch was the feature of the game.

Donovan's throwing to bases for the visitors was excellent.

Longtine of Thorndike and Slate of the Bondsvilles dividend honors equally; both caught a great game.

Riley pitched good ball for the Bondsvilles but showed that he was out of practice.

Carey pitched a fine game at Bondsville, and was at his best in the latter part of the game, striking out the last two men with two men on bases.

The game was the best seen in Bondsville for years, so it is said.

McAuliff played a little off in Fridays game, but made up for it on Saturday by making alph

ALMOST A CENTENARIAN.

Sketch of the Life of Mrs. Fanny Bradford.

On next Monday Mrs. Fanny Bradford will be 100 years old. For some years her birthday has been observed by her friends, and many flowers, as well as more lasting gifts, have been showered upon her. A large reception had been planned for this year, which would include friends and relatives, at home and elsewhere, but four weeks ago it was apparent that the intense heat was wearing upon her to such an extent that such plans must be dropped, much to the disappointment of a large circle of acquaintances by whom she is loved and venerated. Till within these few weeks her health has been good, and she has retained eyesight and hearing to a remarkable degree. She relates many interesting stories of her younger days, among them of a freshet which bore away the bridge near the present Cushman mill. She was but a little child at that time, and was on her way home from school, her father carrying her across the bridge just before the planks were torn off. Another is of one of the severest snow storms which she remembers, when it snowed continuously for three nights and two days. She also remembers the raising of the old Academy. She was fishing that day in Chicopee brook, and from her station could watch the proceedings. She tells of hearing her father, who was a Revolutionary soldier, recount the execution of Major Andre, at which he was present; also of her "boys" as she calls the many students of Monson Academy who have been under her care from time to time, and who in turn call her "Mother," and "Grandma," among them the Japanese, who by the way were some of the first sent to this country by their government to be educated, (1867).

Mrs. Bradford is the only daughter of the late Asa and Fanny Gates, and was born August 26th, 1794, in the house which for a long time has been the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin S. Pease. The first school she attended was located near the spot where the beautiful soldiers' monument now stands. Later she went to the Academy under the principalship of Simeon Colton. In 1813 she became a Christian and joined the Congregational church, of which Dr. Ely was then pastor. A peculiar circumstance is the fact that Dr. Ely received her into the church, officiated at her marriage, and baptized all her children. In 1823 she married Otis Bradford, and to them four daughters were born, Mary Ann, who died in childhood, Jenny, who married and died in 1857, Anna, who died in 1881, and Sarah, with whom she now lives. With the exception of nine years spent in Leverett and three in Amherst, her home has been in Monson. Mr. Bradford died in 1873 at the age of 78 years. For some years Mr. and Mrs. Bradford kept the Academy boarding house, which stood on the present site of S. F. Cushman's residence, and after moving from there had many student boarders. Mrs. Bradford was very kind to the students who were under her care, and hers was a well-ordered Christian family, the teachers of the Academy finding it an excellent place to send students. During the administration of Rev. James Tufts and Rev. Dr. Charles H. Hammond, many young men and women boarded there with great advantage to themselves.

OLD AGE, ITS DESIRABLENESS, AND HOW TO ATTAIN IT.

Grow old along with me;
The best is yet to be.
The last of life, for which the first was made:
Our times are in His hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned;
Youth shows but half; trust God; see all nor be afraid."

—Robert Browning.

Next Monday Mrs. Fanny Bradford, one of the best known and most highly respected of our citizens, will be a hundred years old, and her life has been so exemplary that we do well to pause and think of her with pride, and tenderness, and veneration, as she now completes the wonderful cycle. To look into the very eyes and clasp the selfsame hands that have seen and felt the struggles and the changes of a hundred years, thrills one with a reverence akin to awe. Childhood is beautiful; manhood and womanhood grand; but old age is simply sublime! "The hoary head is a crown of glory," and it is honored the world over in proportion to the civilization of the people. None but barbarians and savages, in this or any land, neglect their aged.

Whatever we may say, away down in the depths of our hearts we are all hoping for long life, though none may wish to be old. And this is right. It is a true instinct of nature and leads to self preservation and happiness. A hundred years is a long way ahead,—but only a span behind! Compared with the ages gone and the ages going, it is but a point of time, and yet we are told that only about one person in a million ever attains it. Statistics show that 80 per cent of the human family die before they are 50, and only 6 per cent ever reach the age of 60.

Of late an organization called "The Ralston Club," whose declared object is to promote the longevity of the race, has been established. It is cosmopolitan in character and its membership is rapidly increasing. These people claim, and very speciously too, that even a delicate person should live to be a hundred years old, while the really robust and sturdy should survive a quarter of a millennium. The claims upon which they base their arguments rest upon well known hygienic laws. Pure air, soft water, fresh unadulterated food, sufficient exercise and sleep, regularity of habits, cheerfulness,—these suggest the whole. They have coined a new word—"glame"—to express the vital food principal as it exists in plants and animals. Theoretically their position is all right, and we can but hope that their dreams may be realized; but while they are developing theories in the abstract, let us turn to this one beautiful concrete instance and see what may be learned therefrom.

Notice first that Mrs. Bradford has been a worker, and an intelligent one. Not a driver to do a month's work in a week, nor yet a drone to leave her work undone. She never tired herself out resting at fashionable resorts! In fact she has seldom taken a vacation. And right here I wish I could preach a whole sermon upon the advantages of judicious exercise. "The battle is not to the strong alone." Our Samsons and Sullivans are short-lived. He wins who knows how to use his strength without abusing it, who husbands his vital forces for future need.

Again, Mrs. Bradford has been self-forgetful. She was wife and mother, and that explains it all. 'It is more blessed to give than to receive." No person ever attained great age by living solely for self. Constant self-watchfulness, like the attrition of an unfed mill, wears the vital machinery out. To live long one must live well.

Mrs. Bradford has always been temperate. I do not refer to alcoholics, though even now she can hardly be persuaded to take Paul's much-abused prescription for Timothy. She has been temperate and moderate as well. A few years ago some one asked her how she had managed to live so long. Her reply was, "I don't know, unless it is because I always ate slowly." This is a good point for us all. We eat fast and die soon, or if dyspepsia fails to kill us, it is no fault of ours. The celebrated Dr. Rush considered intemperance in eating one of the greatest hindrances to longevity. He had known of only one intemperate eater who lived to be 84. And Dr. Holcombe of New York declares, "I believe gluttony kills more people than drink." Mrs. Bradford has always eaten simple foods and in small quantities.

Another thing, she has been cheerful. Worry kills ten times as many as work. It is hard enough to endure the troubles that really come; but the way we live through, or die in, the countless perils we imagine is truly appaling! If you would live long, before all else, imitate Mrs. Bradford in this. Take life hopefully; don't worry.

But because you should not worry do not suppose that it is harmful to think. Mental exercise is as necessary as physical. You cannot preserve the body without the mind, and you cannot preserve the mind without using it. The greatest thinkers, like the grand old man of England, are long-lived.

Again, if we would live long we must acquire regular habits. The body is a delicate, complicated piece of mechanism. When every part is in perfect condition and nicely adjusted to every other, when the supplies of nutrition and rest exactly balance the demands of waste and wear, when there is no undue excitant without or within to cause disorder,—then we have health. And just as a watch will keep better time and wear longer if carefully handled and regularly wound, so the body lasts longer and keeps in better condition when careful and regular habits of living are maintained. If only we could correct our own mistakes, and those of our ancestors, the dreams of the Ralston club might indeed be realized!

But even then there would be a limit. Though we guard our bodies never so well, still, soon or late, the end must come. And for those who dread to hear the foot-fall of advancing years, and shrink intuitively from the limitations of age, I know of no sentiment at once so beautiful, so reasonable, and so just, as that of our own great poet-philosopher—Emerson. I would commend it to all:—

As the bird trims her to the gale,
I trim myself to the storm of time,
I man the rudder, reef the sail,
Obey the voice at eve obeyed at prime:
"Lowly, faithful, banish fear,
Right onward drive unharmed;
The port well worth the cruise is near,
And every wave is charmed."

Carew—Bliss.

A pleasant wedding took place Wednesday afternoon at 2 30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Carew, when their daughter, Minnie Florence, was united in marriage to Frank Oliver Bliss by Rev. Mr. Solent of Stafford in the presence of only the relatives of the contracting parties. The rooms were decorated with flowers and the couple, attended by Alice Bliss and Merrill Carew, stood under an arch of evergreens. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of slate colored serge, with trimmings of silk, and carried a bouquet of pinks. The bridesmaid wore a dress of the same color, though of a considerably lighter shade. After congratulations and refreshments Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were driven to Palmer, where they took the train for Hartford. They will also visit Waterbury before their return, when they will reside in Monson. The presents were many and useful. Among them were noticed a chamber set from Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Bliss; set of silver knives and forks and cake basket, T. J. Carew; silver knives and forks, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Carew; cooler, J. G. Carew; lemonade set, Merrill Carew; bread and milk set, Miss Grace Bliss; pair of vases, Alice Bowden, Stafford; silver spoons, F. W. Chaffee; pickle fork, W. H. Naughton; sugar spoon, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Naughton; silver pepper and salt shakes, Miss Alice Bliss.

Mrs. Edward P. Newton and grandson spent a part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Newton at Greenwich.

Miss Helen B. Tucker has been secured as librarian and assistant teacher in the Academy for the coming year.

Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Ellis returned Saturday evening from a ten days' visit at Portsmouth, N. H., and Portland, Maine.

Mrs. W. H. Gifford and daughter have returned from the eastern part of the state, where they have been spending several weeks.

W. K. Stebbins of Worcester, with his friend, Mr. Carr of Covington, Georgia, spent Thursday of last week at his old home in Monson.

Mrs. Arthur D. Norcross and daughter June, and Miss Addie Peck have visited Mrs. Edward D. Cushman at Belchertown this week.

Among those who have recently had concrete walks put in are Erskine Lull, Mrs. Jennie Bradway, Joseph M. Fagan and Rogers & Co.

Six hundred persons, fifty-four teams and one hundred bicycles passed a certain point on Main street between 7 and 8 o'clock one evening recently.

Postmaster G. W. Farrington and wife are at Block Island for a few days. Arthur T. Robinson is assisting in the office during Mr. Farrington's absence.

Mrs. Charles O. Chapin and nephew, Harry Winter Bugbee, are expected home to-night from Northfield, where they have been spending a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. James Harrison and daughter, and Miss Anna Berdow of Taftville, Ct., have visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Buffington this week.

Joseph M. Fagan, employed by Frank E. Howe, is taking his vacation. Mr. Wright, recently employed in Nicholson's market, is taking Mr. Fagan's place.

Quite a number are attending the camp meeting at Willimantic, among them Miss May Fuller, the Misses Eaton, Misses Ross and Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Ferry.

Rev. Charles Woodworth, Jr., son of Dr. Charles Woodworth of the A. M. A., and nephew of Mrs. E. J. Green, will preach in the Congregational church Sunday.

The Y. P. S. C. E. topic for next Sunday evening is: "How to Bring Others to Christ." Miss Ethel Newton will have charge of the meeting at the Congregational church.

Horace Moulton had quite an experience Tuesday with one of his oxen in Conant's pond. It got into the quick sand, and it took the gang of men all the forenoon to get it out.

The Flynts have secured a large contract for their Dummerstown quarry, the furnishing of the granite for a new library building at Montpelier, Vt. The price for the stone alone is about $20,000.

The Demorest Silver Medal contest took place at the Methodist church Tuesday evening, and was a very pleasant entertainment. The medal was awarded to Willard Converse Nelson, class of '95, Monson Academy.

Several feet of bank wall in the rear of Mrs. Harriet Fenton's and Dr. George E. Fuller's property on Main street gave way Wednesday night, letting a mass of stones and sand down into the yards of both houses

The Anderson-Ferrell Camping Co. at Crystal Lake is composed of G. L. Keeney, Mrs. Inez Ferrell, Arthur D. King, Alice E. Darling, Alice King, Idella Anderson. D. Needham goes Saturday, and others are to follow Monday.

The peculiar kind of a caterpillar which recently made its appearance on the property of Edward F. Morris and Frank Johnson does not prove to be the gypsy moth, as was feared. A representative of the gypsy moth commission was in town yesterday and investigated.

Orvin Wilson, formerly of Monson, has recently died at the age of 87 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Parker, in Hartford, Ct. Although Mr. Wilson moved from Monson about 30 years ago, he has visited friends here a number of times, and will be remembered by the older residents.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Carew gave a pleasant whist party at their home on King avenue Wednesday evening. The guests included Edward J. VanSickle of New York, William F. Carew, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Owen E. Ballou, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Buffington, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Leonard and Mr. and Mrs. John Cross.

Work on the water works system is not moving very rapidly. The Italians have been arriving since a week ago to-day, and are at work. Quite a flow of water has already been developed in the collecting well, which has been dug to the depth of about six feet. Excavating the ledge at Conant's dam does not prove to be as difficult a job as was expected, as the rock is soft. The pipe laying, which was to have begun this week, has been delayed for some reason. The gates and hydrants have arrived from the Ludlow Valve Co. of Troy, N. Y.

HAMPDEN.

Little Grace Kibbe accidently drank fly poison the other day. She was taken to Dr. Hurd's office in Somers, arriving there in convulsions. Not till after repeated emetics and continued treatment was she pronounced out of danger and well enough to be taken home a little before midnight.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

O. F. Benedict went to-day to the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston, to have an operation performed.

The ball game last Saturday between the home team and the Thompsonville Young Men's Christian Association resulted in a victory for the North Wilbrahams, by a score of 13 to 12. The features of the game were the playing of Rafferty at third base, two brilliant catches by Powers, and battery work by Shean and Carson.

WALES.

E Shaw and wife are away on their summer vacation.

A warrant is posted for a town meeting next Monday evening at 6 o'clock, to see if the town will rescind the vote taken at the last meeting, when $1000 was voted to repair the Center school house.

Mrs. Phebe J. Hiscock and two daughters, Gracie and Mary, from Brooklyn, N. Y., are spending a few days with Isaiah Hiscock. They are well known as revival preachers and singers in the Advent denomination, and it is hoped they may take part in the meetings here Sunday.

The tax collector has the bills, and tax payers are rejoiced to find taxes much lower than last year. A correspondent says that "if people want low taxes they must see to it at the annual meetings, when appropriations are made. Some people are very liberal then, but squeal when the collector comes around. Poll tax payers are always ready to vote other people's money away to gratify their own wishes."

WILBRAHAM.

The public schools will begin the 27th.

F. Sargent of Dorchester is visiting Mrs. F. M. Austin.

Mrs. William Lyman has gone to Denver, Col., to visit her daughter, Mrs. William Clark.

Prof. Benjamin Gill of State College, Pa., who is visiting in town, will preach in the Methodist church Sunday.

A. R. Wright and family held a reunion and picnic at Lane's grove Tuesday. Among those present were Miss Emily Wright of Wilbraham, Mrs. Kellogg of New York with her husband, Dr. Kellogg, F. H. Wright of East Orange, N. Y., and Robert Wrig'it of Denver, Col.

Death of an Old Resident.

Samuel Fisk Merrick, one of the oldest inhabitants of this town, died at his home Tuesday morning. Mr. Merrick was born here Sept. 27th, 1819. In 1849 he went with his brother, James Merrick, to California by the overland route, where he was quite successful. His health had been poor ever since the war, his death being due to a complication of diseases. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, Rev. Benjamin Gill of State College officiating.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Nora Cronin is visiting friends in Haverhill.

J. Sullivan broke one of his fingers while playing ball last Saturday

A. C. Brooks of Boston is spending a few days with friends in town.

The posts have been set for the telephone service from the main line to the Belcher House.

Rev. C. H. Smith of Hartford will conduct the services at the Congregational church Sunday.

Miss Maud Carter of Winsted, Ct., is expected this week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott.

The people of the Methodist church held a lawn party Wednesday afternoon and evening at the home of Herman Lane.

Mrs. E. Holland, son and daughter of Chicago, and Mrs. William Holland and daughter of Brooklyn, N. Y., are spending their vacation at the old homestead on Federal street.

The village people are beginning to fear an ice famine. C. R. Dunbar, the local dealer, says that his stock is nearly exhausted, and he fears that by the first of September it will be entirely gone.

The question of the annual fair is the one which is now occupying the minds of the people, who are very unwilling to give it up. An effort will be made to form a joint stock company to provide suitable grounds for the fairs, so that after this fall there will be no need of using the park for that purpose.

BRIMFIELD.

M. Shanly, a farmer living on Tower Hill, met with a painful accident while on his way home from Palmer Monday afternoon. Workmen were employed putting up poles for the electric light company, on which to string their wires for lighting the town of Warren, and had one of the largest ones laid across the road near the residence of John Ferrill as Mr. Shanly drove up. As he had to wait for the removal of the pole before he could go, he volunteered his assistance, for it was a heavy one, and it was with some difficult that the workmen were trying to remove it. While thus engaged one end of the pole slued around, and before he could get out of the way his leg was caught between a large rock and the pole, cracking the bone about half way between the knee and the ankle. Mr. Shanly will probably be confined to the house for a few weeks, which will be particularly hard on him, as he has always been a very active man, scarcely ever knowing a sick day.

Miss Lula Cutler returned Wednesday from a month's visit at Hampden Center, Me.

Mrs. Hammel died Wednesday n ightfrom a severe attack of typhoid fever. She leaves a husband and a large family of children.

The funeral of Emory Shumway was held at his home on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Harris Hale officiated and the burial was at Greenwich Thursday in the family lot. Mr. Shumway has been twice married and leaves a wife and son, George Shumway, and one grandson, Alfred Shumway.

Death of an Aged Resident.

Emory Shumway, an old resident of this place, died at his home on West Main street Monday afternoon. He was 80 years old, and was for years a boot manufacturer, his shop being on the site of Brigham Hall. Some time ago he retired from active business. His late home, the Truesdell house, is one of the handsomest houses in Warren. A wife and one son survive him. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2.30.

Mysterious Disappearance.

The people of this place are very much concerned over the disappearance of John A. Upham, a mechanic at the Knowles steam pump works. He left his home on the morning of July 30th, and has not been seen since. His family, which consists of a wife and son, supposed when he left home that he had gone to work, as he had on his working clothes. Mr. Upham is a well known citizen, and has many friends who will be glad to have his disappearance satisfactorily explained.

WARE.

Miss Cora Davis has been appointed to teach the school in district No. 6.

J. C. Byrnes has returned from Nova Scotia, where he went for a vacation.

D. A. Jennison has gone to Lake Sunapee, N. H., to spend his summer vacation.

The female ball players were defeated last Saturday on the pumping station grounds.

"China Maid" of Ware took second place at Northampton Wednesday in the 2.45 class.

Mrs. Harty has rented the McMahon store, and is to open a restaurant there in a short time.

The schools of the town will not commence the fall term until nearly a week later than usual.

Two cows were killed Saturday and one Monday by freight trains on the Central road near Ware.

The water was shut off a few hours Sunday forenoon to repair a water pipe that had burst on West Main street.

Charles A. Lovett, drug clerk at Smith's pharmacy, is at Chelsea and the beaches in that vicinity, spending his vacation.

Benjamin Brown has not severed his connection with the Stevens company, as has been reported, but is taking a vacation.

Levi W. Robinson of Worcester, brother of H. O. Robinson, is to have charge of the Hampshire House during the absence of the proprietor.

H. A. Jordan, formerly a Ware boy, is the chairman of the advertising committee for the Springfield Bicycle Club's diamond tournament, September 12 and 13.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold the next regular meeting at the East Congregational chapel next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Gormley's meat market has been removed from Water street to the Music Hall block on Bank street, in the store formerly occupied by Osgood & Preston.

Brush fires near the farms of Wilbur Robbins and J. B. Lawton on the Palmer road called out the fire department on Sunday. Considerable land was burned over.

The Lyon photograph rooms in Trench's block are again open, under the management of F. M. Brittingham of Springfield, who expects to make it headquarters for finishing work done in the portable house he has about the country.

Henry M. Clark has leased the vacant store in the Hampshire House block, where he will offer his damaged stock of clothing from the Hudson fire at prices so that none need go unclothed if they have but a very small amount of money.

E. E. Orrell, P. W. Reilley and Andrew J. Davis have been added to the Republican town committee to make the number required by law. These, with F. M. Sibley and Henry K. Hyde will constitute the committee until the end of the year.

The entries for the September meeting of the Ware Driving Park Association are coming in quite fast, and there is sure to be a large number of fast horses on the track. The running race will attract much attention, and no doubt be exciting. The purses in all amount to $800.

The infant child of Augustus Jarvis died Saturday and the body was laid out on a table near the window in the front room, with lighted candles around it. The mother retired to a room upstairs, when the wind blew the window curtains toward the lighted candles and set fire to the room. The body of the child was badly cremated.

There is considerable talk over the action of the town in voting to employ home talent to put in the new sewers. It is all very well to employ our own townspeople, but when it will cost the town nearly double on account of apparatus to buy, and a large amount more for lack of experience of any one here to manage such a job, it is well to take a second thought before attempting it.

The members of the Rod and Gun Club report one of the enjoyable occasions of the season at the annual clambake at the club house at Beaver Lake Wednesday evening. There were about 100 present, members of the club and invited friends. There were several out-of-town guests, among t'em Mayor Kimball, Sheriff Clark, and Editor Stone, of Northampton. Rohan Brothers of Ware were the caterers.

Everybody and their country cousins will be in Ware next week Saturday to witness the great Forepaugh street parade and circus. The collection of animals is, without exception, the best ever in Ware, and is sure to attract a great many people who do not ordinarily attend the small circuses that have been here before. The show goes from here to Webster, where they will exhibit on Monday.

Thomas King, the man taken to the Worcester hospital from Leicester in an unconscious condition, proves to have lived in Ware, working for Dan Crowley through the summer of 1890, on the Miner and Yale farm. Two bank books have been found sewed up in his vest, one on the Ware savings bank with a credit of $115, and one on the Worcester county insititution for savings with a credit of $1500. The Ware deposit was made in 1890.

Philip Feehan, who has the contract to rebuild the old abutments for the new bridge across the Ware river about two miles above the village; has commenced the work this week. It has been decided by the selectmen to buy the iron bridge of the R. F. Hawkins Company of Springfield for $650. This bridge was built for Haydenville by the Groton Bridge Company in 1879, and cost $2000. It will be an improvement on the old red wooden structure.

About eight o'clock last evening box 27 called the fire department to a fire in the house of Patrick Keegan on South street. The fire was discovered by some of the firemen, who were walking past. The family were in another part of the house and knew nothing of it. The fire was in a bed lounge, which was destroyed. If the fire had not been seen when it was it would have been a bad case with large loss. The property was insured. The cause of fire is unknown.

An Extractor Explodes and Breaks a Man's Leg.

Thomas O'Hara, an employe in the Stevens mills, had his leg broken and was otherwise injured last Saturday morning by the bursting of an extractor in the wheel room, where he was employed. It was about 10.30 and the mill was preparing to shut down, nearly all the help having left, or the results might have been more serious. The extractor made a terrific noise when it exploded, and sent pieces of iron all about the room, but O'Hara was the only one injured, he being seriously so. Dr. W. W. Miner was called and had the man removed to his home, where he is being cared for.

A Lively Blaze.

The fire department was called out at half-past ten Saturday forenoon to a fire in the house of Charles W. Eddy. There was a little delay in ringing in the alarm, as it was hoped by those present that the blaze might be extinguished without calling help, but when the alarm struck there was no delay, and the firemen are deserving of the highest compliments for the masterly manner in which the whole affair was handled. The fire was quickly under control, but not until it had burned through the roof of the back room into a room in the upright part, where the most damage was done by fire and water. It seems almost incredible that the house could have been cleared of the furniture in so short a time with so little damage; all the best of the goods were taken out with scarcely a scratch. In this, as well as the handling of the fire, the firemen acted in a most commendable manner. The house was insured for $1000, and the personal property for $400, in "The London Assurance Co.," by the Davis agency. Mr. Soule, the representative of the company, was here yesterday and the insurance was adjusted very quickly to Mr. Eddy's entire satisfaction, allowing $192 on the house and $135.45 on furniture and wearing apparel. The cause of the fire was an accidental ignition of gasoline, and not from explosion as has been reported. Lyman Hathaway & Son have the contract to repair the house.

There will be lots of good days for bicycle riding before the snow begins to fly. You can enjoy them on the Swan and save part of the bicycle money besides. The Swan is a high grade bicycle with full diamond frame, is full ball bearing, fitted with M. & W. pneumatic tires. We have them with steel rims at $55, with wooden at $59. Hundreds of them are ridden in this city and vicinity since we began selling them.

Trunks and bags and toilet articles for the "summer tourist." Big enough assortments to make the choosing easy.

Here's a trunk that will worry the baggage smasher; it can stand lots of grief, and comes up smiling every time; it is a canvas covered, sound bodied trunk, bound with malleable iron tips, has three extra heavy strap hinges, excelsior lock, double tray, and is cloth lined. We have it in five sizes, thus:

28-inch at $5.68
30-inch at 5.92
32-inch at 6.42
34-inch at 6.72
36-inch at 7.37

Bargains everywhere in wash goods, in front and to the right and to the left of you when you get into the wash goods section. Right in the front of you there are the apron ginghams at 3 3-4 cents a yard, good styles; to the right, jacquard ginghams in dress styles, pretty things at 6¼ cents a yard; French imported cambrics to the left at 8 cents a yard—it would have made the manufacturer weep could he have foreseen such a thing.

—so dirt leaves, when Pearline gets after it. No matter where it is, the easiest, safest, quickest, cheapest way to get rid of it is with Pearline. Washing clothes is Pearline's most important work. That's because it saves so much wear and tear, as well as labor, by doing away with the rub, rub, rub. But don't lose sight of the fact that Pearline washes everything. Dishes, paint, marble, glass, tin-ware, silver, jewelry, carpets, hangings—there's work to be saved with all of these by using Pearline.

Tired, Weak, Nervous Could Not Sleep.

Prof. L. D. Edwards, of Preston, Idaho, says: "I was all run down, weak, nervous and irritable through overwork. I suffered from brain fatigue, mental depression, etc. I became so weak and nervous that I could not sleep, I would arise tired, discouraged and blue. I began taking and now everything is changed. I sleep soundly, I feel bright, active and ambitious. I can do more in one day now than I used to do in a week. For this great good I give Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the sole credit.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

It Cures."

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

A Broken Dream.

Within the tasseled hammock, gay
With threads of color bright,
A dainty, white-robed form she lay,
While o'er her soft and light
Floated the clouds. A summer day
Was waning into night.

The paths were fringed with hollyhocks
Pure white, deep red and pink,
The garden trim was full of phlox—
The lingering perfumes sink
Into her soul. She slowly rocks
And lists a boblink.

A world of lovely dreams is there,
The hammock gently sways,
A locust stirs the lifeless air,
The western sky's ablaze.
Life seems to her without a care,
O'er all a misty haze.

BY THE WAY OF UNCLE JOHN.—He was a hard-working and zealous board school teacher, and had just told the class that wool comes off the sheep and it is made into blankets, clothing, etc., to keep us warm in cold weather, and he proceeded to question little Willie, who had been rather inattentive during the lesson. "Now, Willie," said the teacher, "where does the wool come from?" "Off the sheep's back, teacher," replied Willie. "And what then?" inquired the teacher. Willie could not answer. "What are these things made from?" asked the teacher, touching Willie's trousers with the cane, Uncle John's old "uns," replied Willie.—Tit-Bits.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Bachelor Housekeeping.

He is a bachelor pro tem,
His wife's away.
And meanwhile you can make a mem,—
Life isn't play.

He sleeps in all the beds in turn,
'Twould make his wife's face set and stern
If she could see how things are mussed
Since she went off in placid trust
That things would stay where they were left
While her dear hubby was bereft.

The bureau drawers are half-pulled out,
With shirts and socks strewn all about
The floor, because he tried one day
To find a shirt she'd put away.

The parlor hasn't once been swept,
His old cigar stumps he has kept
Upon the center table, where
There chanced to be a small place bare.

Out in the kitchen in a pile
Are all the dishes gathered while
Her indolent, though loving spouse
Has been a bachelor keeping house.
The pile will grow without a doubt
As long as the supply holds out,
Then he'll brace up when need confronts,
And wash the whole lot up at once.

The whole house has a musty air
Of stale tobacco; everywhere
Newspapers litter up the floor—
And I could tell you of much more
Which, if his dear wife knew of it,
Would make her fall down in a fit.

Oh, things have gone to wreck and wrack
While she's away,
And you can bet when she comes back
Life won't be play.

HER BREAKFAST WITH LINCOLN.

An incident finely illustrating the simple, homely habits and sympathetic soul of Lincoln, from a source that renders it extremely improbable that it has ever been in print before. It can best be told in the narrator's own words.

"Early in the war my husband was instrumental, both by his energy and means, in organizing a volunteer regiment in New York, of which he was given the colonelship. Our marriage had been a youthful one, and when he bade me goodby to join the army I was a bride of 20, and a mere child, as far as any experience of worldly affairs was concerned. Not many months had elapsed after his departure until the distressing news came that he had been captured by the confederates and was a prisoner in Libby. I was, of course, wild with grief and excitement; and in my simplicity, I felt that if only some one would go to Washington and see the president myself. I knew my family would prevent me, if possible; so, under the pretense of spending the night with friends in a distant part of New York, I boarded a night train for Washington. I felt such confidence in the success of my trip as only simplicity and youth can.

It was no later than 6 o'clock, on a beautiful spring morning, when I reached the Baltimore and Potomac depot. I was so eager in my mission, so sure of my success, that I had no thought of hotels, breakfast, or anything else, but went directly from the station to the White House. When I rang the bell I was informed, to my dismay, that the president had not yet arisen, and positively would not receive any one before 9 o'clock. I tried to plead for an earlier reception; told the doorkeeper that I was Col. ——'s wife, that he was in Libby prison, that I had come all the way from New York to tell the president about it, but the door was closed upon me. Besides my eagerness to effect my husband's release I was fearful that delay might cause my absence to be discovered at home. I tremblingly walked to a seat in the park and impatiently waited for the hands of my watch to point to 9. Promptly at the minute I was again at the door.

"'Is the president up yet?' I inquired.

"'Yes, madam, he is at breakfast, and you cannot see him.'

"'But I must see him,' I repeated, excitedly. 'Tell him that I am here—Col. ——'s wife—my husband is in prison—I must get back to New York.'

"I suppose pity for my almost hysterical condition touched the man's heart, for he asked me to wait and in a few minutes I was ushered into the presence of the president. He was sitting at a round table near a window of the room—his library I think—before him a cup of coffee and a plate containing two large slices of beard cut the full length of the loaf. Up to this moment I had felt that once admitted to his presence I could pour forth my grief and prayers to him in words that would surely avail. But now there was something in the simple presence of that quiet man sitting there at the table that made me speechless. I felt that I did not know what to do. I wished I had not come.

"'Well, my little woman,' said he, looking at me over his paper, 'you wish to see me?'

"'Yes, I gasped, rather than spoke, 'my husband——'

"'Take that chair,' he said, kindly, seeing my inability to proceed; and after I had seated myself at the table opposite him he asked me in the most matter-of-fact way if I had been to breakfast. I told him, with an effort to control my voice, that I had not cared for any; I could not have eaten it.

"'This will never do,' he said, 'you must have breakfast with me, and while we eat you can tell me your story,' and, pouring a portion of his coffee into the saucer and halving the two slices of bread, he shared the bread with me and gave me the saucer of coffee. I was beginning to feel more at ease. I glanced at him uneasily, to try and catch some intimation of what I was expected to do. He was sipping his coffee. I tasted a morsel of bread. It was the old 'piece' dear to every country child—bread and butter and sugar. And as we sat there sipping our coffee and eating our bread—something like Pip and Joe Gargery, I have often thought since—my awe of the man before me was dispelled and I told him the story of my husband's capture and my sorrow, with all the simplicity and confidence that a daughter would speak to a father.

"Mr. Lincoln kindly explained to me that he could do nothing for my husband—that it was beyond his power. His only hope was that a parole would take place in four weeks, and that he would effect my husband's exchange if he could. I was back in New York again that evening, and never heard a word from Mr. Lincoln regarding my husband again. But in just a little over four weeks my husband arrived in New York, sick, emaciated and in a dreadful physical condition. But he recovered, and I have always believed that that bread and butter and sugar of Mr. Lincoln's saved his life."—Washington Post.

THE PHONOGRAPHIC NEWSPAPER OF TOMORROW.

Men will soon be dissatisfied with printed interviews, more or less correctly reported. They will insist on hearing the interviewee, upon listening to the discourse of the fashionable orator, hearing the actual song, the very voice of the divo whose first appearance was made over-night. What but the phonographic journal can give them all this? The voices of the whole world will be gathered up in the celluloid rolls which the post will bring, morning by morning, to the subscribing hearers. Valets and ladies' maids will soon learn how to put them in place, the axle of the cylinder upon the two supports of the motor, and will carry them to the master or mistress at the hour of awakening. Lying soft and warm upon their pillow, they may hear it all, as if in a dream—foreign telegrams, financial news, humorous articles, the news of the day.—Octave Uzanne, August Scribner's Magazine.

THE TRAGEDY OF TWO LIVES.

The lifework of Farmer Millsap's wife was over. Like a head of wheat fully ripe she was about to be gathered in by the grim harvester.

"Obadiah," she said, in a feeble voice, as the end drew near peacefully and painlessly, "you have been a good husband to me."

"I have tried to be, Lucindy," replied Farmer Millsap.

"You have laid yourself out to make things easy and comfortable like for me."

"I have always tried to do my sheer, Lucindy."

"Obadiah," she went on, "we've lived together 55 years, hain't we?"

"We have."

"And ever since we were married you've eat all the bread crusts, hain't you?"

"I won't deny it, Lucindy, I have."

"You've eat the crusts for 55 years, so's I wouldn't have to eat them, hain't you, Obadiah?"

"I don't deny it, Lucindy."

"Obadiah," said Farmer Millsap's wife, after a pause, "it was very kind of you. And now you won't mind my telling you one thing, will you?"

"No. What is it, Lucindy?"

"Obadiah," and there was a world of self-abnegation in her voice, "I always was fond of crusts."—Chicago Tribune.

Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil With Guaiacol

It will be noticed by people taking Slocum's Ozonized Cod Liver Oil and Guaiacol that after a week or two their appetites will commence to improve. Why is this? Because the Guaiacol destroys the poisonous Bacteria which are present in the stomach and the blood of consumptives, and impairing their appetite and digestion. By destroying these Bacteria we give Nature an opportunity to re-establish the original healthy condition of the tissues.

A perfect remedy for consumption. Pleasant to take.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A BOY OF HIS OWN, PERHAPS.

One day as I sat in the Union depot at Cleveland, waiting to go east, a big, bluff farmer looking man took a seat beside me, and we were talking about this and that when a mite of a boy, ragged and dirty, and looking as if half-starved, came along and asked for alms. He knew it was against orders, and kept one eye on the policeman as he moved around. Each of us gave him something, and he went over to a man reading a paper. He received no response to his request and repeated it, when the brute lowered his paper and gave the lad a cruel box on the ear. The boy cried out and came running back to us, and the next moment the big man crossed the space between the benches and loomed up before the man with the paper like a mountain. His face was white with anger, and he trembled all over as he demanded:

"Did you strike that child?"

"The little beggar annoyed me," was the reply.

"Look here!" thundered the big man, as he turned and pointed to the lad, "You have struck a poor, wee child, ragged, hungry, and heartsick! I came over here calculating to pick you up and break you in two over the bench, but I'm going to leave you to that God who watches over the poor and helpless and downtrodden. For every tear that child has shed, heaven will demand a drop of your blood! You are a thing, not a man—a creeping, crawling, contemptible thing!"

The other rose up, eyes flashing and lips compressed, and it was evident he meant to resent the words. Just then, however, the lad, still digging tears out with his fists, came forward and took the big man by the hand and said:

"Don't fight. Come away. Mother is awful sick."

The big man returned to his seat, too full to say a word for a moment, and during this interval the stranger sat down, got up again, lifted up his grip and replaced it, and finally walked over and stood before us and said:

"To say that I'm ashamed and humiliated does not express it. Here, child, take this."

And he left a $20 bill in the lad's hand and walked from the depot with hurried step, while the big man drew a long breath and said:

"I guess I was too hard on him, after all. I guess he believes in God and he has got a boy of his own. Come, sonny, I'll go with you and see about that sick mother."—Door County Advocate.

SCHOOL GIRL'S NAMES, 1894.

A curious little change, indicative of the altered attitude of thoughts toward woman, and of woman's added sense of her own importance to the world, may be observed in the catalogues of girl's schools. The pet names have vanished. No doubt there are still Mays and Nellies and Kitties and Madges in our home circles, Daisies and Pearls and Birdies around our hearts, but very properly good form has decreed that these familiar cognomens shall be kept for the lips of household love, not worn in the hearing of society. You search in vain today on a college catalogue for a Sadie or a Polly, a Flossie or a Lulu. But Florence and Julia, Mary and Sarah are there in stately grace, and there too are Eleanor, Katherine, Dorothy, Margaret, Mary and Elizabeth. The middle initial has gone too, and in its place is the girl's full name, Mehitable Frances, or whatever it may be, the whole baptismal legacy from grandmothers and aunts written out in full.

The Mary Janes and Emma Louisas and Eliza Anns of older generations have left the stage, and in their places we find pretty Gladys and dainty Alice, quaint Ruth and fair Rebekah, Helen, statuesque and dignified, Penelope, prim and sweet, Camilla, Isabel, or Edith, each flowerlike and musical. The girls of 1894 are to be congratulated on their names; the Lucys, the Susans, the Annes, the Charlottes, have associations at once so homely and so charming.

Sometimes, too, a girl bears a family name as her brother might, and there is a rare elegance and distinction in this when Sidney or Parker or Courtney is borne by a daughter of the line as her Christian name.—Harper's Bazar.

WHAT A COUNTRY.

Comedian William F. Hoey has just encountered a distinctly ingenious Britisher. The comedian formed his acquaintance during the Lucania's last incoming voyage, and the two breakfasted together.

"I guess I'll run out to see Harry after breakfast," said the guest.

"Harry?" queried the comedian softly.

"Yes, my brother," explained the Englishman. "I've two here. Harry lives in San Francisco and Charlie in Chicago."

"But you'll be back for dinner?" facetiously quizzed Hoey.

The Britisher took him seriously. "Sure, for dinner, if not for lunch," he answered. And, accompanied by the actor, now thoroughly alive to the humor of the incident, he found himself a few minutes later in the line of ticket buyers in the Grand Central depot.

An excursion ticket to San Francisco, stopping at Chicago station on return," he ordered.

The ticket agent put about a quarter of a mile of pasteboard under his stamp, pounding it for a minute or more, thrust it before the explorer and expectantly awaited payment.

"When does the train go?" asked the Englishman.

"In ten minutes," was the answer.

"How much is it?"

"One hundred and thirty-eight dollars and fifty cents."

"What?" the Englishman gasped. "How far is it?"

"Three thousand miles."

"Old Hoss" was right behind to catch the falling form, and as he guided the half-fainting Englishman back to the cab, where he snuggled

A RECKLESS GENERAL.

How the Duke of Wellington Trifled With Great Danger.

One day the Duke of Wellington's French cook came to him for orders.

"Oh, get anything," said the Duke impatiently. "I never think of what I put into my stomach."

The chef was horrified. Whether Wellington was punished with indigestion or not, history does not tell. One thing is certain. People who don't care what they eat soon find themselves unable to eat anything at all without agony. Their offended stomachs go on strike. Natural digestion ceases.

What is to be done, then? One cannot live without eating. The only possible help is in a pre-digested food, which science has furnished in the form of Paskola. It replaces wasted tissue and invigorates the entire system without aid from the stomach. Willard Hettrick, of Bridgeton, N. J., says:

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion until I was induced by a friend as a last resort to try Paskola. I am more than pleased to testify that Paskola has worked wonders in my case, as I have no distress after eating, and eat whatever the appetite craves. I advise all like sufferers to use Paskola."

This is the story of P. A. Hank, of Valpariso, Ind.: "Before I used Paskola I was very weak. I could not digest anything. I tried everything to gain strength but failed. My doctor told me to use Paskola, and I am satisfied that it is the only thing for a weak stomach.

"I have gained two pounds in a week. There is nothing that helps indigestion like Paskola. I have tried about twelve doctors and have been suffering more than twelve years.

"At times I could work only two days in a week. For nearly three years I spent all I had for doctoring and had given up hope."

Any up-to-date druggist will furnish Paskola. If you want to know how it works, send for free pamphlet to

The Greatest Sufferers in the World. are women; their delicate organizations being particularly susceptible to derangement and disease. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., purifies the blood and cures all the sicknesses peculiar to the sex; it fortifies the system against the diseases incident to old age. It is the best medicine in the world.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

The Day's Work.

Do the day's work, my dear,
Though fast and dark the clouds are drifting near,
Though time has little left for hope and very much for fear.
Do thy day's work, though now
The hand must falter and the head must bow,
And far above the falling foot shows the bold mountain brow.
Yet there is left for us,
Who on the valley's verge stand trembling thus,
A light that lies far in the west,—soft, faint, but luminous.
We can give kindly speech
And ready, helping hand to all and each,
And patience to the young around by smiling silence teach.
We can give gentle thought,
And charity, by life's long lesson taught,
And wisdom, from all faults lived down, by toil and failure wrought.
We can give love, unmarred
By selfish snatch of happiness, unjarred
By the keen aims of power or joy that make youth cold and hard.
And, if gay hearts reject
The gift we hold, would fain fare on unchecked
On the bright roads that scarcely yield all that young eyes expect,
Why, do thy day's work still.
The calm, deep founts of love are slow to chill;
And heaven may yet the harvest yield, the work-worn hands to fill.—All the Year Round.

A BRAVE GIRL.

I am not inclined to disparage the physical bravery involved in facing bastions and taking cities, but I do say that this is not the most difficult side of the virtue, and that there are moral victories won in the daily life evincing as honorable and enduring courage.

Mattie was the only child of Major John Darley, a man who had done good service in the Mexican War and been rewarded for it by an honorable and lucrative government office.

He lived in good style in a handsome house, and Mattie was generally understood to be as well off in money matters as she was attractive in person and winning in manners. She visited the most fashionable circles and was rather noted for her pretty toilets and the number of her beaux.

Mattie had, however, made her choice. Unreservedly she had given her affections to Mark Taylor, a young man of no particular family, but of handsome exterior and fair business prospects. Many, indeed, wondered at the Major sanctioning the match; but there are always reasons within reasons, and the poor father had his private motives for forwarding the views of the man who seemed most in earnest about marrying Mattie.

But before Mattie's pretty wardrobe was finished, and while the lovers were yet undecided as to whether the wedding was to be a public or a private one, Major Darley was found dead in bed one morning, and the house of pleasant anticipations became a house of mourning.

This was the beginning of Mattie's troubles. Vague but terrible rumors of suicide and ruin began to be heard, and Mattie, even in the first gush of sympathy for her desolate condition, could feel that indefinable something which expressed disapprobation as well as pity; and after the funeral was over she was quite sensible that her acquaintances and friends were ready to stand aloof from her at the first good opportunity.

The world, upon the world, is not flagrantly unjust; it thought it had good reason for its disapprobation. Major Darley had done wrong; he had squandered money not his own, and poverty and dishonor it refuses to sanction. In the main it is right. And when Mattie knew all and knew, also, that it was generally believed that her father had slunk into the grave because he was afraid to face the wrong he had done, she did not much blame the old world. She knew it must judge men and women on general rules.

But she did blame Mark, for he had no such excuse. He had made particular promises to her and her alone. But when misfortune does not strengthen love, it kills it; and before Major Darley was in the grave Mark's behavior had lost some of its respect, and he soon became querulous and inattentive. Mattie did not hesitate long. In a few dignified lines she gave him his dismissal, and it was coolly accepted, with a very unmanly and ungenerous reflection upon the dead.

Then the poor girl began seriously to consider her future. There was absolutely nothing for her but the furniture of the house in which she lived, and the half-and-half invitations which she had received from her two aunts to make her home for a time with them. One had a large family and lived in a pretty Jersey village; the other was an invalid and travelled a great deal.

She sold the furniture at auction, paid out of it her father's funeral expenses and found that she had about $1600 left. Upon the whole, the invalid aunt seemed the most desirable, and she accepted her invitation first. It was the beginning of summer, and Mrs. Dayton was going to Europe "for her health." Mattie was to go with her, but it was not until everything was arranged that Mattie found she was expected to pay her own passage. She drew $400 and went to sea with a heavy heart.

The next six months were a simple record of an imaginary invalid's whims and unreasonable tyranny; and Mattie took under these circumstances her first lessons in that knowledge which teaches:—

"How salt the savor is of other's bread!
How hard the passage to descend and climb
By others' stairs!"

And in spite of all Mattie's efforts and humiliations, she did not please. Mrs. Dayton and her niece parted at last on very bad terms.

She had still $900, and she found herself one morning in June in a New York boarding house, asking her heart twenty times an hour:—"What shall I do with it?" One morning she lifted a paper and eagerly ran her eye over the "Wants." This paragraph supplied her with the idea on which rested a very prosperous future:—

"WANTED—A thoroughly artistic, professional cook. A liberal salary given and two assistants allowed. Apply, etc."

Now, if there was one thing for which Mattie had a natural aptitude, it was the making of delicacies and the beautiful arrangement of a table.

"Why should I not learn how to do this thing?" she said. "This very day I will see about it."

She had to take many a fruitless walk and to bear a good deal of impertinent curiosity before she found what she wanted—a professional cook willing to impart the secrets of his art for an equivalent in cash. Even then he could not take her until the winter season made grand dinners in demand, and Mattie was forced to content herself with an engagement to the great artist in the following October.

Did she live on her small means in the interval? She took a situation as saleswoman in a retail store, and immediately began to sell trimmings and laces. Not infrequently she had to wait on ladies at whose houses she had visited and with whom she had frequently spent a morning shopping not 18 months before. Some ignored the fact and treated her as a simple shop-girl, and some spoke to her in that tone of constrained kindness still hard to bear. Others whispered to their companions, as they passed, her name and reverses; but, after all, she was amazed to find how little these things hurt her.

Still she was honestly glad one morning to receive a note from Professor Deluce, requesting her services. In a plain, neat dress, with her large apron and linen sleeves in her satchel, she entered at daylight one of the principal hotels and took her way resolutely to the professor's rooms. He set her to work with a very few words, and day after day, week after week, she assisted him in the production of the most wonderful dinners and suppers.

When the winter was over the professor was willing to indorse his pupil in all things, and he offered to secure her a position for the summer months. Mattie very gratefully accepted his offer, and in a few days he was able to make an engagement for her at a fashionable summer hotel. She was to have $1000 for the season and two assistants.

For five years Mattie spent her summers at this hotel, and her winters with some rich private family, making about $1500 a year, and saving nearly every dollar of it. For she had in view the opening of a large private hotel, and she knew that in order to get the necessary funds she must herself be willing to risk a respectable sum.

So she was patient and industrious, and the day on which she was thirty years of age saw her mistress of a magnificently furnished mansion, every room of which had been taken before it was opened. For by this time Mattie's skill was well known to wealthy epicures, and it was considered something of a privilege to sit at a table she provided for, or live in a house she ordered.

But though obliged now to dress as becomes a lady of such a house, she never relaxed her patient attention to the smallest detail of her duty, and her boarders knew that the elegantly dressed woman who presided at the table had been hours before in a linen blouse and cap busy among her bright saucepans for their benefit and enjoyment; and their knowledge detracted nothing from the respect and admiration every one delighted to give her.

In three years Mattie had paid off the last cent of the money she had borrowed in order to start her enterprise, and thenceforward she began to make money and save money for Mattie Darley alone. She was still handsome and had many admirers, but she was of that order of woman who loved once and no more, and many things about Mark's desertion of her had left a sting in her heart which no future love could extract. She did not know whether he remembered her or not; she had heard while in Europe that he was going to marry an old companion of hers, but that was twelve years ago, and twelve years rolled in between two lives generally effectually separate them.

When she was 36 years of age and a rich woman, she had an offer of marriage. She refused it, but the circumstances set her thinking about Mark in a very persistent manner. She determined to make some cautious inquiries about him; she was too old now for him to attribute any silly motive to her. The resolution ran in her mind for two or three days and she determined one afternoon to go and find out an old friend likely to be familliar with Mark's doings.

But while she was dressing, an English nobleman came to rent a suite of rooms and was so full of crotchets and orders, that she thought it best to remain in the house. He was very peculiar and insisted on having all his meals in his own room; but as he paid extravagantly for the privilege and kept his own servant to attend upon him, Mattie thought it worth her while to humor so good a guest.

She soon found, however, this strange servant a very uneasy element in her kitchen affairs. In a week her own maids were at open war with him; and she heard so much about his delightful singing and elegant manners that her curiosity was somewhat excited. One morning, as she was coming down stairs, dressed to go out, she saw the wine-colored livery of my lord's servant coming toward her with a tray, containing delicacies for his master's breakfast. As they passed each other Mattie looked steadily into the man's face and saw Mark Taylor.

He recognized her in the same moment, but with the instinct of a little mind pretended not to know her. After her stare and silence there was nothing left for Mattie to say. She had been going to see him, and, lo, even as a servant he would not know her! The next day the servant's parlor was desolate. Mark had left my lord's service.

It might be four years after this event that Mattie one bitter, snowy day received a letter which greatly agitated her. She was a very wealthy woman now, and though she still kept her hotel she also kept her private carriage. After half an hour's troubled and uncertain thought she ordered it, and greatly to the amazement of her servant requested to be driven to a very disreputable part of the city. It was hard for the vehicle to make its way to the wretched tenement she indicated, and Mattie's heart sank at the filthy, slushy court and dark, noisome stairs before her.

I might say that love made her regardless of these things, but that would not be true. There was no love in Mattie's heart now for Mark Taylor, but his note had said he was dying, and she had not found herself able to refuse his last request. Indeed, she half doubted him now, for during the past two years he had begged money from her under every possible pretext, and there was now more fear and contempt in her pity for her old lover than any lingering trace of affection.

But this time he had told the truth. Mattie barely got there in time to hear his last words—a pathetic entreaty for a half-starved little lad sobbing his poor childish heart out for his dying father. The child loved Mark—that almost redeemed Mark in Mattie's eyes. She promised faithfully to bring up the little boy as her own, and she kissed and forgave at last the poor, weak, heartless man. After the miserably selfish failure of his life, it was something to die with his child in his arms and the woman who had once loved him so dearly dropping tears upon his face and praying humbly for his peace.

So Mattie buried Mark, and took to her home Mark's little Roland. At first it was not altogether a pleasure. The love for other people's children is not instinct. But Roland had a handsome person and bright, bold manners. He won his way surely and rapidly, and Mattie, in his case, made true the sarcasm of a proverb, for this "old maid's bairn was well taught and well bred."

About five years after Mark's death Mattie sold her business and bought the loveliest of lovely farms. She came to the country with the intention of taking life easy and enjoying the fruits of her twenty years of hard, though pleasant labor. But Mattie can't help making money, and her berries and vines, her milk and butter and grains are the wonder of the country. When any one in our little community is sick or blue, or tired, we go to see Mattie; when the church or Sunday school wants a delightful meeting or pleasant picnic, it has it at Mattie's place. If a young girl has any trouble about her wedding clothes, she goes to Mattie; if the elders can't raise our good minister's salary, Mattie puts matters all straight.

Everybody loves Mattie Darley. Even her aunts come to see her now; for sooner or later we pardon our friends the injuries we have done them.

Now suppose Mattie had hung on to her aunts in wretched dependence. Suppose that she had dragged out a miserable existence trying to teach what she did not herself understand. Suppose that, at the best, she had married for a living some man whom she did not love. How much nobler to accept the humble work she was fit for, and dignify it by a conscientious, intelligent and artistic practice.

"You were a brave little woman, Mattie," I once said to her, "to dare the scorn of friends and the descent from social position that the profession of cooking entailed."

"Independence," she replied, "can brave a great deal. None of my employers ever said a disrespectful word to me. No one pitied or patronized or pretended not to see me. It is as great a pleasure as life affords to have work to do which you like to do and get well paid for doing it."

"But with your stylish bringing up and your gentle birth!"

"My friend, take your stylish bringing up and your gentle birth to market and see what they will buy you. I love Roland dearly, and he will have plenty of money; but if he wanted to make a shoe or learn how to sew a dress coat, I hope he'd be man enough to do it."—Amelia E. Barr, in New York Ledger.

THREE OF A KIND.

On upper Broadway there is a shoe store, in the window of which there are some sample shoes. On top of one pair is a large card, on which three new $1 bills are displayed. Below the bill is printed: "Three of a kind take a pair."

Yesterday a tough-looking Westerner, after gazing for a long time on the bills, the card and the shoes, stepped into the store and was met by a smiling clerk, the New York World says.

"Say, mister, is this a straight game yer givin' us?"

"You refer to—"

"I'm referring to them shoes in the winder. You sell them 'cordin' to the rules of poker, do you?"

"Oh, yes, yes, sir. Quite so, sir, ha! ha! Rather a clever thing, isn't it? Ha! ha!"

"D— clever. Show me a pair of number nines, that style."

The gentleman produced several pairs of nines, and the Western man tried them on. He selected two pairs and said he would take both.

"Now, see here," he said. "I want no shenanigan. You're sellin' 'cordin' to Hoyle, eh?"

"Yessir, we guarantee that. Couldn't take advantage of an old hand like you. You evidently know the game."

"I do, sonny, and I want nothin' but what's 'cordin' to the rules. I want a straight game with no looloos. Savey?"

"Yessir; certainly sir."

"Well, then, wrap up them two pair of shoes, and there's your $3."

"But every one pair goes for $3. Look at the card. Three of a kind, you know, take a pair."

"I know they do, but we're playing by the rules, an' 'cordin' to all the rules of poker I ever see, three of a kind, also, just natchurely and etarnely, scoop two pair."

The clerk ceased to smile for a moment, but suddenly recovered himself.

"Yessir, but three of a kind wouldn't scoop two pair when both pair are nines, would they?"

"Well, I'll be——. Gosh take it if yo ain't right! I thought I was workin' a smart game on you, but I'm a jay. I should have took a pair of eights and a pair of nines, an' then I would have had you, darn you. Well, so long; you city fellers are smarter than you look an' kin always squirm out o' a deal somehow."

BURNING OF A PETROLEUM OIL TANK.

The spectacle of a burning oil tank is one not easy to forget. Vast billows of smoke, like clouds of black ivory, roll hissing upwards. The masses of thick pungent vapor sprawl and tumble over one another. Through these, like a shuttle through a loom, dart swift arrows of glaring yellow smoke. When one of the big oil refineries in Long Island City was burning some years ago the smoke hid the sun for hours.

The most destructive petroleum fire in the history of this country took place at Titusville and Oil City, Pa., on Sunday, June 5, 1892. Strangely enough it began with a flood. A dam that had been built at Spartansburg, above Titusville, broke, and millions of gallons of water rushed down upon the city. The flood came at night, and the people were all asleep. The dam had head back a lake one quarter of a mile wide and a mile and a half long. The people of Titusville fought hard for their lives, and there were many daring rescues. Nevertheless, 50 persons were drowned. When the flood was at its worst a new horror was added. Tank after tank of petroleum caught fire and burst with awful roars. The fire ran along the flood, and swept away whole blocks of wooden houses. How many men and women were killed has never been found out.

From Titusville the flood swept down Oil creek. The usually tiny stream swelled to a mighty river. At dawn the inhabitants of Oil City fled from their beds only to be caught in the rushing, swirling waters. Many poor people lived on the lower levels, and the river ran around their portion of the city in the shape of a bent bow. Block after block was submerged. Such boats as could be hastily found were used in taking men and women and children from the upper windows of their houses.

As yet there had been no fire at Oil City. But hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude petroleum, kerosene, distilled naptha and benzine were floated down the flood. Many tanks had been burst by drifting logs, trees, houses, etc. Vast quantities of gas hovered above these inflammable stuffs.

Some say that a careless spectator lit his pipe and dropped the flaming match into the stream, and others say that a spark from a locomotive started the fire. At all events nearly the whole surface of the water burst into flame in the twinkling of an eye. More than 20 men who stood on the bridges gazing at the flood were killed by inhaling the surrounding flames.

Willis Stuart, James Rogers, James Harkins, U. S. Terwilliger, John Gordon and Sam Terwillinger were out in boats rescuing people from the flooded houses. In an instant these heroes, who had deliberately chosen to remain at work, although they knew their peril, were surrounded by roaring flames. They dove overboard and swam deep under the burning surface, coming up now and then to beat away the fire with their hands, and breathe for a moment. Then they again plunged under and made for the shore, 100 yards away. How many times they thus rose and sank no one knows. Only John Gordon and Sam Terwilliger reached the land. The others were burned and drowned. They were all as brave heroes as any soldiers that ever lived.—Harper's Young People.

In Sore Straits: Dickey (greatly puzzled by the twins—to one of them)—"Are you yourself or your sister?" One of the twins—"I'm my sister." Dickey—"Gracious! Well, where can I find you? I've got this dance with you."—Truth.

How Could I Know?

So many flowers bloomed in that noonday sun,
How could I know,
That when I trod on one
And crushed its golden glow,
Now wandering in dim lowlands brown and sere,
The tiniest faded blossom would seem dear?
How could I know!

There were so many days the sunshine kissed,
How could I know,
When one I gayly missed
And laughing let it go,
That in long watches of some solemn night,
Dawn's dullest ray, I should call heavenly bright?
How could I know!

So many dear ones in those happy years!
How could I know,
That when I mocked their tears
And left them, loving so,
In lonely, barren after-time I'd pray
For weakest touch of hands I flung away?
How could I know!

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN TO SWIM.

It is not too much to say that those who spend a great part of their time on the water ought to feel under an actual obligation to learn to swim. Not every one is strong enough to keep it up for a long distance, but many lives might be saved if people could keep themselves afloat for only a few minutes, until rescuers could reach them. Yachtsmen, as a rule, are swimmers, but many of the women who accompany them are not. This places more responsibility upon the men. In case of accident, they must risk their lives in making exertions to save those who might just as well save themselves. A well-known authority on the subject says that women can learn the art of swimming much more easily than men can. If that be true, then there is still less excuse for them, although it should be said, on the other side, that they probably often do not have so many opportunities for learning.

The suggestion has been made that swimming in a bathing-suit and in one's ordinary clothes are two entirely different things, and that the ability to do the former does not insure success in the latter. It might be interesting for a woman to enter the water in her usual walking costume and see what she could do, but the idea is rather impracticable, and I do not imagine that we shall hear of many such experiments.

Any form of athletic sport may be brought into discredit through its abuse. Those of us who are sincerely interested in the furtherance and improvement of all out-door exercises see this frequently, and with much regret. Without mentioning other instances, the single one of sea-bathing comes to mind at this time of year.

Prejudice has been aroused against it for different reasons. People who go into the water two or three times a day, staying there perhaps an hour at a time, are responsible for its condemnation on the score of health. A bath of half an hour or less, generally not more than once a day, is the utmost, I believe, that any physician approves of. Even that is too long for the first time, and many bathers never feel so well if they remain in the water more than ten or fifteen minutes.

Again, it may seem necessary to say that a bathing-suit is meant to be worn in the water, but some women do not appear to think so. To go directly from the bath-house into the surf, and return there as soon as the bath is finished, is in far better taste than to promenade a public beach in a costume which is not intended for such use, and would not be tolerated on the street.

As for recklessness, if the many drowning accidents resulting from venturing out too far do not deter people from it, words will not be likely to have much effect. The strong undertow at most places along the Atlantic coast is very dangerous, even for powerful swimmers, and should always be borne in mind.—Harper's Bazar.

CHINESE HOSPITALITY.

"Very few people have any idea of the great hospitality of the Chinese," said a Pittsburg Celestial recently. "Chinamen coming to this country retain their ideas of oriental hospitality, and always keep open doors for any of their race who may need shelter. A Chinaman arriving in Pittsburg without money would never want for a lodging and boarding place. He would simply go to the first Chinese laundry or residence, feeling assured that he would find a welcome there. If, after staying a couple of days, he should learn that the circumstances of his host were such that the latter could not well afford to keep him, he would move away, making his home with another Chinaman. He would continue doing this, dividing himself up, so to speak, until he was able to get work and support himself. Of course such wanderers usually endeavor to find the most wealthy Chinaman and become their guests. I have known some of the laundries in Pittsburg to have 10 and 12 transient visitors—you could not call them boarders—to stay over night.—New York Home Journal.

COULDOCK'S PHILOSOPHY.

Twenty years ago and old Mr. Couldock, the actor, are so indelibly associated in the public mind, thanks to Hazel Kirke, that to mention one is to think of the other. In fact, "Twenty Years Ago" is his nickname, and has replaced the old man's legitimate initials. In an up town resort, where the subject of the cheap actor was under discussion, one actor had this to say:

"Talk about getting cazed artistically and in cold blood. I had an experience once. Twenty years ago I was playing with Couldock in a road company. We played a repertory, and I was playing juvenile parts. I had quite an estimation of myself in those days. In fact, I used to be in such a hurry to spout my lines that on several occasions I broke in on Couldock's scenes and spoiled more than one of them. I saw the old man throw me a dagger's glance now and then, but I didn't give the matter a second thought.

"Finally one morning he asked me to go for a stroll with him. He was remarkably affable, so I went.

"'Young man,' said he, 'I've been thinking a lot about you lately. How much money do you you draw?'

"'Ten dollars a week, sir.'

"'Ten dollars! Dear, dear, that's not much! Can you save money out of that?'

"'Well, not much, sir. You see I have a widowed mother and sister to support.'

"'How about $15 a week? Think you could save money out of $15?'

"'Oh, dear, yes, I exclaimed, brightening up all of a sudden.

"'You're dead certain you could save money?'

"'Yes, sir; I am.'

"'Very well; after this you draw $15 from the box office every week and——'

"'Oh, thank you, sir!' I broke out impetuously. 'I knew you would appreciate my art sooner or later.'

"'Hold on now, I ain't finished yet,' interrupted Couldock. 'You go save money out of that, and soon as you've got enough laid up go buy an ax and knock your —— few brains out.' "—New York Sun.

Husband (very late from the club)—"Hum! I told you not to sit up for me." Wife (sweetly)—"I didn't. I got up to see the sun rise."—New York Weekly.

PALMER NEWS.

A Former Palmer Criminal Again In The Toils.

A well-known farmer of Merrimac, Edward Crosby, was shot and instantly killed Saturday morning by burglars who were attempting to rob the house of his brother, and Frank Little, who was sent to prison in 1887 for seven years for an assault on Talma and Loman Brown of Palmer, has been arrested as one of the three who were implicated in the robbery. About 11 o'clock Friday evening Jacob Crosby and his wife heard someone at one of the windows of the house, and looking out saw three men, who on being asked what they wanted demanded to be let in and stated that they were after money. They were refused, and after making threats fired a bullet through the door. Mr. Crosby went to the barn in the rear of the house for his gun, while the hired man went for help in one direction and Mrs. Crosby started for her husband's brother, who lived near by. He soon arrived on the scene and met the three men at the corner of the barn; a struggle ensued and he was shot dead. Frank Little, who was arrested as one of the three, was one of three men who on the night of November 2, 1887, assaulted and attempted to rob Talma and Loman Brown, aged and miserly bachelors living alone in the north part of the town. They were supposed to have a large sum of money in the house, but if so they managed to conceal it, and their assailants got only a small sum. Deputy Sheriff Healey worked the case up and arrested Little on the 27th of November, and he was sent up for seven years. While in prison he became acquainted with one of the other two who assisted him in this later crime. Which of the three fired the fatal shot is not known.

A Dry Sunday for the Drinkers.

To the crowd which usually hangs about the hotels Sundays for its drinks last Sunday must have been anything but a red-letter day, for it was almost if not quite impossible to get even a smell of anything as far as the hotels were concerned, and that on a decidedly hot day into the bargain. The cause was a warning from Judge Robinson of the district court to the owner of one of the hotel properties that Sunday selling must cease. The word was passed along, and a sudden drought struck the hostleries Sunday. Some two months ago complaints began to come to the court that one of the hotels was making quite a business of selling on Sunday. The proprietor was notified through his attorney by the court that he had better stop, and that if any evidence of violation of the law in this respect was forthcoming, he would be prosecuted without mercy. For a time there was apparently less Sunday selling, but about a month ago the complaints began to come again, and last Friday the owner of the building was spoken to. Monday the owner of another hotel property was also warned, and made the statement that no Sunday selling had been done until the other house commenced it, and then, because its regular week-day customers were patronizing the other place on Sunday and there was danger of losing them altogether, Sunday selling was commenced in self defense. A dislike of Sunday selling was expressed, and a promise that it should be discontinued made. The result remains to be seen.

The Water Supply.

The question of how long the water supply will hold out if it does not rain soon is the subject most frequently discussed at present. Springs which have never been known to fail are almost dry, and the outlook is serious. At the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company the lower one lacks some 14 or 16 inches of being full, and the upper one contains very little water. The stream running in is very small, probably not large enough to fill a three-inch pipe, and the water is hardly holding its own of late. Manager Gamwell of the water company is severely criticised for allowing the engines of the New London Northern road to have water when he knew the supply was so low and no immediate prospect of reinforcement. The Boston and Albany tanks were shut off some weeks ago, but the one in the New London Northern yard is still supplied. As there is no place between Stafford and Dwights where the locomotives of that road can get water, the drain on the supply at the reservoir is large.

Grade Crossing to be Changed.

The commission appointed by the superior court to look into the matter of the petition for the separation of the grades of the New London Northern railroad and the highway leading to Three Rivers, near that village, gave a hearing in the matter at the district court room yesterday forenoon. Besides the commissioners there were present the officials of the railroad and the selectmen of the town. A 'bus was taken to the scene of the proposed change and the premises viewed, after which the matter was gone over in detail. It was agreed that the highway should pass under the railroad, this being the most feasible and economical plan, some $3500 cheaper than an overhead bridge, but the selectmen and the railroad officials differed slightly regarding some points in the proposed location of the new road. The commissioners ordered the change made, and adjourned the meeting until September 14th, the selectmen and the road in the meantime to agree and have a plan of the proposed changes made by an engineer.

Shall Palmer Have a State Road?

There is no reason why it should not and many why it should. The town of Warren has already petitioned for one from the Brookfield line through that borough to the Palmer line, and if this strip is built there is no reason why it should not be continued through to Springfield. At the east of Palmer a small portion would lie in the town of Brimfield, and at the west is the town of Wilbraham. These towns should at once petition the county commissioners to recommend the building of this strip. The selectmen of Palmer are preparing a petition with this end in view, and it is expected that it will be in circulation early next week. There can be no doubt about the desirableness of the end aimed at, and the petition will no doubt receive the signature of every person to whom it is presented.

Ex-District Attorney Hibbard of Pittsfield was in town yesterday.

Thomas Dwyer, a brakeman on the Ware River road, is taking a vacation of a week.

There was a slight shower Monday, but not enough to do any great amount of good.

Sixty-four tickets were sold yesterday at the station here for the excursion to Newport.

The parties which have been camping at Forest Lake have all returned home this week.

Mrs. A. E. Fitch's class of the Baptist Sunday school picnicked at Forest Lake Monday.

C. G. Gardner's many friends are glad to see him on the street again, after an extended illness.

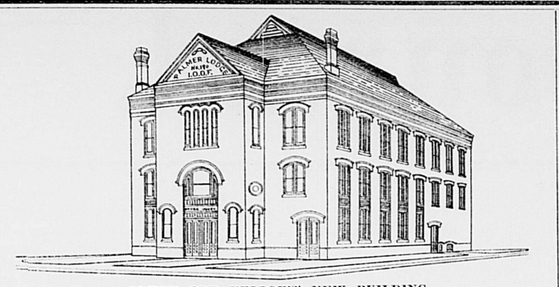
Rufus Flynt has purchased the Wellman farm in the eastern part of the village for a trout preserve.

The bicycle club is planning to have a spread in its rooms on the evening of Labor Day, after the tournament.

Mrs. William Fitzgerald and daughter Jennie from Ogdensburg, N. Y., are visiting her sister, Mrs. Thomas Roche.

The prizes for the bicycle races are on exhibition in the window of Barton's jewelry store, and make a pretty display.

Rev. S. T. Frost will baptize one person in the river back of the old electric light plant next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.



PALMER ODD FELLOWS' NEW BUILDING.

Carpenters are at work on the interior of E. Goodes's shoe store, throwing two rooms into one so as to make a larger salesroom.

Dr. W. H. Stowe has returned from the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston, where he has been under treatment for blood poisoning.

A freight car off the track in the yard of the Boston and Albany road last Saturday evening blocked the south track for nearly three hours.

The annual hunt of the Royal Arcanum will be held on the 17th of September instead of the 18th, as the latter day is the first day of the cattle show.

The management of Forest Lake Gardens are arranging for special attractions on Labor Day, full particulars of which will be given next week.

George Fisher, who had a hand so badly hurt on the New London Northern road a few weeks ago as to necessitate amputation, is able to be out again.

B. P. Morse, formerly proprietor of the Palmer Herald, is to be manager of the Hotel Jerome at Aspen, Col. Mrs. Morse left for Colorado this afternoon.

The track at the driving park was put in excellent condition for bicyclists after the rain of Monday, and will now be kept for wheelmen until after the tournament on Labor Day.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Woolrich entertained a small party of friends at Willoughby Pastures, their country residence, Monday afternoon, the occasion being their thirty-second wedding anniversary.

Rev. W. E. Schliemann of Malden preached in the Baptist church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Minard, who has been enjoying a brief trip to New Brunswick, is expected to occupy the pulpit the Sunday after.

J. H. Woolrich has found an abundant supply of water at his farm without going to China for it. A splendid flow was struck at a depth of 22 feet, 11 feet of the depth being through solid rock. The water is almost ice cold.

A large crowd gathered at the driving park last Saturday afternoon to witness the ball game between the North Wilbrahams and the Bondsvilles, and saw the latter win in an uninteresting game with a score of 13 to nothing.

Mrs. Patrick Hurley, living in the east part of the town, met with a painful accident last Friday. While walking in the road her ankle turned and she fell, badly spraining the ankle and breaking one of the small bones of the leg.

H. P. Holden's pacer "Roscoe" took third money in the 2.29 class at Albany last Friday. Thomas Blanchard's horse "Adelie" took second money in the 2.40 trotting class at Wallingford, Ct., yesterday, and "Lillie B." first in the 2.35 class.

The music committee of the Men's Sunday Evening Club of the Congregational church has engaged Wilbur F. Miller of Ludlow and a male quartette to furnish music for next Sunday evening, when the services in charge of the club will be resumed.

A large number of drunks were seen on the streets last Saturday night, and more than the usual number of arrests were made. All the cells in the lockup were filled at an early hour, and it was necessary to put two in some of them as later arrests were made.

The cut of the new Odd Fellows' building, which is shown above, gives promise that the building will be an ornament to the street and town. It will be of red brick with granite trimmings, and work is to be begun this fall. The architect is G. W. Canterbury of Bondsville.

There was a lively row on the New London Northern train reaching Palmer at 5 o'clock from the south last Saturday night. Two French women who were decidedly under the influence of the ardent undertook to settle their differences in the aisle of a car, and wearing apparel, hair and foul language filled the air for a time, Conductor Denny and Brakeman Todd having their hands full to restore peace. The belligerents were put off at Stafford.

Those who have been taking "Glimpses of America," the portfolio being issued from the JOURNAL office, have been disappointed for the past three weeks in not getting the parts the coupons called for. The annoyance has been caused by a delay in the publication office in sending the numbers, but a part of them have arrived, and the rest are expected to-morrow, and there will probably be no further trouble. All back numbers can be supplied at the uniform rate of ten cents each.

Henry Thayer, living on the road to Wilbraham, was complained of Tuesday by Agent Anderson of Springfield for neglect of his oxen. He appeared in court on being notified that he was wanted, pleaded nolo, and paid a fine of $10. Mr. Anderson found the animals in a particularly gaunt and uncared-for condition, weak for want of food and poor in flesh. The stable looked as if it had not been cleaned out this summer, and the animals almost stood on their heads in consequence.

Holden's new block is expected to be ready for the merchants about October 1st, and all the stores are engaged with the exception of a small room on Central street. O. P. Allen will occupy the corner store with his stock of drugs; Mrs. L. E. Carpenter's millinery store will be next, and then Robinson & Taylor's grocery store. The store room next to Lynde's block, in the small part of the new block, will be fitted up for G. A. Bills's meat market, and a shoe store will occupy the other room.

Mrs. G. H. Justin, living on School street, had occasion to go down cellar through the bulkhead Tuesday afternoon, and was much surprised on reaching the bottom of the stairs to find a man there. The cellar was dark and she could not see him clearly enough to be able to recognize him again, and the fellow rushed past her and up the stairs, shutting down the bulkhead door after him, so that when Mrs. Justin got out he was out of sight. Nothing was missing from the cellar, though doors to cupboards were found open.

It's a mighty poor fisherman who can't tell of the big fish he lost, but to tell of the big one caught is to court incredulous glances and an intimated acquaintance with Ananias unless the fish can be produced. That is why A. J. Northrop, who is something of a fisherman at times, brought home that nine-pound flounder from Block Island Monday night. He broke the record of the season at that place when he landed him Monday morning, it being the largest seen there, and "Jack" insisted on bringing it home, saying that no one would believe him if he didn't.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Company, fearing that it might possibly run short of water before the new 500-horse power engine is completed, is moving the engine and boiler from the old plant in the village to the plant at Blanchardville. There has been water enough so far, but in order to provide against a possible scarcity the lights have been shut off for a couple of hours each night recently, between the hours of 1 and 3 in the morning. Temporary flashboards have been put on the dam, which increases the storage capacity of the pond somewhat.

An excursion to Saratoga and return for only two dollars, with the privilege of staying over night at that place, is a wonderfully cheap outing, but that is what the New London Northern road offers for next Thursday. The route will be via Miller's Falls and the Hoosac tunnel, giving an opportunity to see that famous piece of work and the beautiful scenery along the Deerfield valley. A special train will be run in both directions, leaving Monson at 9.18 a. m., Palmer at 9.30, Three Rivers at 9.38, Barrett's Junction at 9.43 and Belchertown at 9.56, reaching Saratoga at 2.55 p. m. Returning the train will leave Saratoga at 3.10 p. m. on Friday, reaching Palmer about 8.30. This will give twenty-four hours in which to see the beauties of that popular summer resort, with its many places of interest, including the cottage at Mt. McGregor in which General Grant died. The number of tickets is limited, and those wishing to go will do well to procure them before the morning of the excursion.

District Court.

One civil entry was made last Saturday, D. W. Foskett of Brimfield against Robert Connors of Palmer.

In the criminal court Saturday William Donahue of Warren paid $10 for drunkenness.

On Monday Kazimioyz Malinowski of Three Rivers paid $10 for too free use of the ardent. Robert Connors of Palmer paid $15, it being his third appearance within a short time. Matthew Williams of Belchertown was assessed $10. Emroy McGregory of Wilbraham and James F. Rooney of Palmer paid $5 each. William Lewis, Fannie Andrews and Jane Hall of Monson parted with $10 each because of intoxication, while Jerome Treat of Hartford, one of the party, was let off for a five-dollar note. Treat and the Hall woman were found guilty of adultery and bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $500 each; Mrs. Hall secured bail, but Treat went to jail.

Tuesday was occupied with some Polanders with unpronouncable and unspellable names. Lorenz Indiasic and Sofy his wife, with Pioter Charneski, were charged with assault on Kazimioyz Malinowski. Charneski pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10. The others pleaded not guilty and the case was heard with the aid of an interpreter, the defendants being discharged.

John D. Murphy of Monson was up Wednesday, charged with drunkenness, and was sent to Bridgewater for a year. He has been to the house of correction and the reformatory at Concord, but neither seeme dto be just what he needed, so the court concluded to give Bridgewater a chance to work on him, Murphy remarking after his sentence that "it would be a good thing to keep me there as long as I live," which opinion was indorsed by Judge Robinson with a regret that he hadn't the power to carry out the suggestion so long as it would give pleasure to Mr. Murphy.

The continued dry weather is beginning to tell on the water supply, and unless rain falls soon the village will suffer greatly. Wells and springs which have never been known to run dry have given out, and more are likely to.

The people in town are wondering why so many of our young men visit Ware so often lately. There must be quite an attraction there. It is said already that two of them are thinking quite seriously of matrimony should they continue their visits until spring—and business picks up.

An excursion will be run over the Ware River and New London Northern roads a week from next Saturday to Block Island. A special train will be run, leaving Thorndike at 7.19, and the fare for the round trip will be only $1.50. A special train will also bring the excursionists home.

A New Reservoir.

The Thorndike Co. is to build a large new reservoir with a capacity of 17,000 gallons. The same will be built on the hill near Row 5, and will rest on piers. The water will be brought from the upper dam by means of a force pump located at No. 2 mill. The cistern once filled will, it is thought, be a sufficient supply for the use of tenements for about a week. When completed the new arrangement will prove a great benefit to all concerned, as well as a great improvement over the old way.

Base Ball

SOUTHBRIDGE 16—THORNDIKE 11.

The Thorndikes went to Southbridge on Saturday and played a game of ball with the local team, which is one of the strongest amateur teams in the state, and did their share of the batting, making a total of 22 hits. It was a good slugging match on both sides. Not a man on the Thorndike team struck out.

NOTES.

The boys go to Haydenville to-morrow.

The Thorndikes play at Bondsville to-morrow.

The Bondsvilles play their third game here this afternoon.

The Ware club is the next on the list that Manager Farrell wishes to meet.

Will Riley, of the Wheelwright club at Furnace, was in town during the week.

Manager Farrell has a mascot from Connecticut in the shape of a large English setter.

Three Rivers has organized a team, and no doubt will be in the race for the town championship before the season closes.

The Wilbrahams are expected to play their return game here in a few weeks, and the boys will try and make it a better game than the one played at Wilbraham.

DEBS says that he didn't order any of the strikes on the railroads in the west during the recent troubles there, at least that is what he claimed the other day before the national strike commissioners. He had better keep that for the class which the little girl said were kept on Uncle Sam's war vessels for the sailors to tell stories to.

JAPAN wants an American officer to direct the affairs of her army, and Col. J. R. Wason of Sedalia, Mo., formerly a well-known officer of the United states army, has been summoned to Corea to take charge of the mikado's forces there.

JOSIAH QUINCY has resigned the chairmanship of the Democratic state committee because the office "occupied too much time that he found necessary to devote to other business." It is evidently a thankless job this season.

THE announcement recently made that Miss Florence Pullman, daughter of George M. Pullman of Chicago, was to marry an Austrian prince, is denied by her father. Miss Pullman may congratulate herself that the report isn't true, and if she's a sensible girl she'll take good care that it can never be true. A careless glance around ought to be enough to convince her that the majority of American heiresses who have married foreign titles are not enjoying themselves any better than if they were superintending the home of some American who knew how to treat them kindly and appreciate their efforts to give him three appetizing meals a day.

CAMPAIGN speakers should be careful what statements they make on the stump, or like chickens, they may come home to roost, and that in an unpleasant manner. An Indiana Populist farmer has sued Congressman Bynum for $1500 because Bynum told them that wheat would be $1.25 a bushel if Cleveland was elected. The farmer planned for a big crop of the cereal on the basis of the election's result and Bynum's statement, and then had to sell it for 70 cents a bushel.

WHO the Democrats will nominate for the head of the state ticket this fall is what is sticking the managers of the party now. John E. Russell don't want it, neither does George Fred William, Judge Corcoran or James B. Carroll, though it is likely to fall to the lot of Messrs. Russell and Carroll to lead the forlorn hope in November.

THAT was a celebration decidedly out of ordinary at Italy, Texas, the other day, when the surviving ex-slaves of the Sims family, with their children and grandchildren, and the living members of "old massa's family" met and spent the day together.

COXEY announces that he is planning for another attack on the capital in December, when Congress reassembles. Some one ought to bottle up this nuisance and put the cork in hard.

MONSON.

HER ONE HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY

Celebrated by Mrs. Fanny Bradford.—Many Tributes to a Life of Rare Usefulness.

On Monday Mrs. Fanny Bradford celebrated her one hundredth birthday. By reason of her recent illness she spent the day quietly, only sitting up a little. A great many people called during the day, but only a few intimate friends were permitted to see her. Those from out of town were Salisbury Hyde and Miss Carrie Gates of Hartford, Ct., and Mrs. Charles Fox of Stafford Springs. As usual, she had a great many gifts; among them were dainty bits of china, pretty articles in silver, handsome lamp, an oil stove, pictures, a lace cap one hundred and fifty years old, a birthday cake, one hundred silver dollars, greenbacks, confectionery, wine and flowers in profusion, and many birthday letters. Rev. Julius Ward, a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Herald, sent a package of reminiscences from old acquaintances, mostly Monson Academy students who boarded with Mrs. Bradford. The following are extracts from the personal letters and reminiscences:

From Mrs. Alfred Newton of Los Angeles, California, formerly of Palmer, came this poem:

TO MRS. BRADFORD, ON HER BIRTHDAY.

A hundred years have passed away,
Yet ear, and eye, and heart
Still hear, and see, and give to-day
Love's gifts with simpler art.

What paths have you the long years trod,
Through spring and winter weather;
What joys and sorrows oft have shared
With friends who meet together.

The flowers of feeling brought to-day
Shall voice what all unite to give;
The kindly thoughts the truest way
A memory that will live.

Soft over you blow Heaven's pure breath,
And praise and honor come in shae;
And many a loving earnest wish
Close at thy side will wait.

Ring out, ye bells of long ago,
Ring in the gracious, gentler chime,
The music of the past, and now
Unite the intervals of Time.

To-day is here—so glad and strong,
The morrow hath a grace, maybe;
But now take freely of the best,
The heart's gifts—Love offers thee. L. V. M.

Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs of Brooklyn, who graduated from the Academy and after leaving college returned as a teacher and boarded with Mrs. Bradford, writes:

"I remember her as a remarkably active, faithful, capable and kind-hearted woman, earnestly christian in spirit, and earnestly desirous of these things for those whom she knew. * * Watchful for opportunities to do good."

Rev. Dr. Nathaniel A. Hyde of Indianapolis writes:

"I used to think that next to my own mother she was the best woman in the world, and I have no occasion to change my mind."

Mrs. Anna M. Bardwell, who was a very dear friend of Mrs. Bradford's daughter Jenny, writes from her home in Pasadena, California:

"It was the holy influence of the family altar around which we gathered every morning that was with us through all the day, and so drew us together that there could be nought but the spirit of harmony and love dwelling with us."

Samuel K. Foster of Springfield sends this poem:

God's own soft hand shall wipe the tear
From every weeping eye,
And pains, and groans, and griefs, and fears,
And Death itself, shall die.

We greet you on this happy day,
Devoid of cares and fears,
And thank the Lord for keeping you
All these one hundred years.

God's gracious hand has borne you up,
Whose prayers He always hears,
And blessed you in a thousand ways
All these one hundred years.

You've travelled on, till now almost
The "Golden Gate appears,
And rounded out your useful life
With these one hundred years.

Dr. H. S. Pomeroy of Boston wrote:

"When one considers what she is, what she has been for a century, one is not so much surprised that she has been of the favored few who have 100 years of happy, useful life. A good birth, a sensible life, wholesome upbringing, a calm, serene temperament, a large, kind heart, willing hands and a whole life dominated by the idea of loving duty towards God, her neighbor and herself, have been her happy lot. Such persons are not wont to die young, for their conditions make for wholeness of body, cleanness of mind and righteousness of soul. The day when the timid, delicate, homesick boy of 16 first met her—then in the prime of life, though 70 years had already come to her—the kind face, the sympathetic voice, the motherly words made me feel "at home" almost at once; and that first impression only deepened and broadened as the weeks grew into months and the months into years. If ever a woman was born for a mission Mother Bradford was born to be the foster-mother of all sorts and conditions of school boys. Her fitness for the work seems to me now to have been shown almost as much in the things she did not do as in the things she did do. She knew when to admonish and when to praise; when to speak and when to be silent, and we knew her so well, so respected her genuine womanhood, so felt her atmosphere, that her silences were often more eloquent than her words. Mother Bradford's "boys" always had pleasant rooms, good beds, a bountiful and wholesome table and—how lovingly memory lingers over it—a perennial cooky jar which, like the widow's cruse of oil, was never empty, in spite of continuous demands upon it. Then too, the whole house was ours, we were welcome and more than welcome to the sitting-room and the parlor, and were freely and lovingly taken into the inner circle of the family life. How well I remember the meal time discussions about everything that was of interest to us schoolboys—a perfect kaleidoscope of classics, the girls, mathematics, base ball, "Hammond's" behavior, the latest bestowed "nitten," and a hundred and one other things. Then there were the evening readings—"Aurora Leigh," "Les Miserables," and other of the current literary features of the time. Then, dearest of all, were the quiet Sundays, when, on the way to or from church, or on the sofa in the gloaming, we used to talk of our heart, life and home friends, and of the budding hopes and forming plans of the future when we were to do and be "something worth while." Ah me! the most of us are far enough from the goal of our boyhood's enthusiasm, and yet I am sure the distance between us and it is less because of those homes. How well I remember the bits of wholesome work Mother Bradford used to have for us to do; the hollyhocks to be weeded, the dear old chair to be mended again with screws, wire or twine—the dear old chair which had been mended so often and had so many "false joints" that it would rock and sway and twist like an Eskimo's sledge.—this chair used to be her throne, and when we had been particularly "highlarious," and had found it absolutely necessary to work off our high spirits in a "tussel" which had left the bedding in shreds, and Mother Bradford felt that the proprieties demanded a "lecture" from the throne, we used to listen with mock gravity until it was over, and then one more audacious than the rest would say: "Now, Mother Bradford, don't you worry about those blankets, just put them away until I'm president, and then you will bring them out and say, with tears of pride, 'The President of the United States tore those'." And then we would see the "throne" begin to tremble with the merriment which she hadn't allowed her face to show; presently a twinkle would come in the eye and then the whole group would join in a peal of laughter. But the reproof was felt, none the less, and we were all the more careful next time to try to please the dear old foster-mother who was so loving and so merry that even her "sermons" ended in a good laugh. And then too, she was so just. If one of us was being ill-treated and she knew of it, she at once came to our defense; and it made no sort of difference whether the offender was one of the "boys" or Mr. Hammond himself. Mother Bradford never "preached" at us. She never, that I recollect, made use of cant. Her personal atmosphere was worth more to us than the sermons we heard in the big church on the hill, and I am sure there was not one of us who did not feel almost to live up to her expectations and meet her approval as though she had been his own mother. And then, the after visits! Years and events crowded between; but when we came, for a little, once more into the quiet home of our boyhood, there it was, just as it used to be; there was Mother Bradford with a heart full of love for us and a memory full of reminiscences of us and those of our "set," and ready to tell the latest news of each; and the merry laughs or the quiet tear showed how deep and warm was the work in her heart where each was stowed away. Those little visits have done us good; for the time we were boys again. The burdens and disillusions of life were put off for a few minutes, at least, and if we didn't again grasp the eager joy of our younger days, we at least caught a glimpse of it, and that was something. One cannot recall those days and leave out "Father Bradford,"—the old-time gentleman,—a gentleman because he was a man and was gentle, and because he was in character a worthy "eldest son of the eldest son direct from Gov. Bradford." It would be hard to imagine a more fitting husband than he was for our Mother Bradford. And, too, the warp and the woof of those days is all intervoven with the memories of the two Bradford sisters, "sister Anna," who has already "gone before," and "sister Sarah," who is still the comfort and joy of the aged mother here. Pen and ink and paper are too slow and wearisome for the expression of a title of what the subject deserves, but we shall hope for such a renewal of physical strength that Mother Bradford's boys may yet enjoy visits with her here, and we are sure that in the by and by there will be joyous meetings and glad reminiscences on the other side. The good father has been kind to her in giving her loving trust in Him and in surrounding her with the loving care of relatives and friends. He has been kind to us in that He has loaned her to us for so long a time, and has let us see the light that shines from between the "Gates Ajar" reflected from her face as she drew nearer to Him. "At evening there shall be light."

Mrs. Emily Whitney Reed of Glen Ridge, N. J., who was Miss Anna's friend, writes:

"During the time we remained in her (Mrs. B's.) family she not only looked after our moral but physical welfare. In her own self she was a remarkably strong example of individual force of character. My girlish impression of her was of one whom neither accident, disease, nor adverse circumstances could conquer, and in the light of her one hundredth birthday I think so yet."

Prof. Stephen P. Knowlton, a recent graduate of Monson Academy, now teacher of Latin and elocution at Haverford College, Pa., writes:

"A century rounded out with good deeds, with purity and holiness and patient faith; a century of unusual physical and spiritual health, bright with the clear light to the very end."

Mrs. Mary Oliver Williams, writer of the book notices for the Boston Herald, writes:

"It is only a chosen few whom God permits to attain so great an age. That you should be numbered among the elect is a source of great happiness to all your loving relatives and friends."

Rev. James Tufts, in writing of Miss Anna, says:

"It is something to be the mother of such a daughter."

Rev. F. S. Hatch, pastor of the Congregational church, writes from Blue Hill, Maine, where he is spending his vacation:

"A hundred years. A whole century. How long it seems to us! How short it seems to you! Best of all, how sweet it is to have spent so many years amid peaceful scenes and with a contented spirit. Merely to live long on the earth, instead of going sooner to a better place, is nothing to exult over, but to have lived well, how glorious it is! No enemies to torment, no fears to distress you as you look out into the future; no remorse, as your memory surveys the past, to arise and mock you. These are some of the things you will have to-day. Instead, you have troops of friends, bright hopes, sunny memories, holy penitence, the joys of pardon and fulness of peace."

Principal Arthur N. Burke of the Academy writes from Norwich:

"As principal of the Academy it is a pleasure to acknowledge in behalf of the many students who have come, directly or indirectly, under your influence, the debt of gratitude which they all feel for the moral and intellectual benefit of that influence."

Rev. G. E. Sanborn of Hartford, Ct., Rev. Theron G. Colton, formerly pastor of the Congregational church, now of Hudson, Michigan, Rev. Julius Ward of Boston, Dr. Oviat of South Sudbury, and others also wrote interesting letters.

Found Dead in Bed.

Mrs. Elvira Nichols was found dead in her bed this morning, having retired last night in usual health with the exception of a little lameness caused by a fall which she had about a week ago. The bed clothing was not tumbled, and the position in which she lay would indicate she passed away without a struggle. A sad feature of the case is that Miss Charlotte, the younger daughter, is at Huntington on a visit, and will not be able to reach home until to-morrow. The funeral will take place Monday at 2 p. m. Mrs. Nichols, whose maiden name was Smith, was born in Chester in 1811, but she has lived in Monson the greater part of her life. She was married Jan. 1st, 1832, to Stephen Nichols, and has had three children, Alvin, who died in the war, Mary J., and Charlotte, with whom she lived. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. Porter of North Brookfield. Mrs. Nichols was a very estimable woman, a kind neighbor and friend.

Death of an Aged Resident.

George C. Wilson, one of Monson's oldest and most respected citizens, died at his home on Mechanic street yesterday afternoon at the age of 86 years. He was taken sick with cholera morbus early in the week, and yesterday fell into a stupor from which he did not arouse. Mr. Wilson was not born in town, but has lived here the greater part of his life, and for many years was the village sexton. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Stiles, with whom he lived, and a brother whose home is in Bridgeport. Funeral to-morrow at 2 p. m.

The public schools begin Tuesday, Sept. 4.

B. A. Day is improving his Main street block.

There will be a reunion of the Chaffee family on Flynt Park next Wednesday, and all members of the family and relatives are invited to be present. It will take the form of a basket picnic.

Rev. Charles Woodworth, professor of education in John Hopkins University, preached a most excellent sermon in the Congregational church last Sunday. He will preach there next Sunday.

The latest addition to Flynt Park is a drinking fountain on the northwest road. It is built of irregularly shaped stones, and has convenient places where man and beast may quench their thirst.

Dr. George E. Fuller, who has been quite ill with a malignant pustule on his right hand, went out of doors Tuesday for the first time for several days. An insect's bite was the cause of the trouble.

Selectman Norcross keeps our principal streets in the best of condition. He believes in keeping the gutters free from weeds and grass, and the very neat condition they present is appreciated by all.

Mrs. Myron Bradway and Edward Pease are having handsome granite curbings placed around their lots at the Center cemetery, N. S. Meacham doing the work with stone from Flynt's quarry.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Co. sent 30 more men to their Vermont quarry from here this week, and there are now 100 men at work there. One of their principal orders is from the city of Hartford for paving blocks.

The dance given on Flynt Park Thursday evening by the Ariel Club was a very pleasant affair. John Bacon was prompter, and everything passed off to the satisfaction of the large number present. The members of the club were very particular to see that the best of order prevailed. Hugh catered.

Louis Aldrich's horse, in attempting to pull a buggy between the house and shed in Mrs. Elizabeth's Aldrich's yard Wednesday afternoon, demonstrated the truth of the statement that "you can't put a No. 6 foot into a No. 4 shoe and have much room to spare." The result of the experiment was a slightly damaged buggy.

The Monson campers at Crystal Lake have had a very enjoyable time. Boating and fishing have taken a large share of their attention. They have been favored with visits from many Monson friends, also from Stafford, Rockville and Springfield, among them Miss Mabel Anderson of Monson and Harry Leonard of Rockville.

Herbert C. Norcross has in his window a stalk of corn twelve feet in height, which was grown in Mrs. Benjamin Church's garden. If a variety of corn grows to that height in such dry weather as we have had this summer, there is no reasonable doubt that under more favorable circumstances it would rival Jack's famous bean-stalk.

Although the work of excavating the ledge at Conant's dam is not as difficult a job as was at first expected, it is slow, so the progress is not as rapid as has been hoped for. The trench which has been dug outlining the collecting well is filled with water to within two feet of the surface, and all indications are that there will be a great flow of water ultimately.

Over six hundred persons were present at the Springfield District Grange meeting Wednesday on Flynt Park, and the exercises were very interesting. A business session for patrons only was held in the morning, at which it was voted to change the District Grange into a Pomona Grange at the annual meeting to be held at Wilbraham November 14. The afternoon session, over which Worthy Master F. G. Bennett presided, was open to the public. The literary programme by the Hampden Grange, the Clipper quartet of Monson assisting, was in charge of Lecturer W. S. Clark, and was as follows: Recitation, "The Unknown Speaker," Charles Ballard; "A Bicycle Ride," Miss Carrie Pease; song, Mrs. Solley; "The Relation of Beauty to the Successful Farm and Pleasant Home" was discussed by Master of State Grange E. D. Howe of Marlboro, Miss Inez Burleigh, Mrs. Charles Burleigh, H. M. Sessions, Rev. Mr. Solley and Dr. Ballard of Hampden.

HAMPDEN.

Missing Man Heard From.

John A. Upham, the man who disappeared so mysteriously on the morning of July 30th, has been heard from. Monday his son, Clarence Upham, received a letter from him dated at Nantucket. The letter stated that he had gone there for rest and recreation, and he would like to have some clothes sent him.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

O. F. Benedict returned yesterday from the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston, where he has been to have an operation performed.

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Butler celebrated their golden wedding last Saturday at the homestead on the Palmer road which they have occupied for the past forty-eight years. On account of the feeble health of Mr. and Mrs. Butler no attempt was made at a general celebration, only the children and grandchildren of the couple being present, these being H. F. Butler, wife and three children of Springfield, A. E. Butler, Mrs. S. M. Jones and son of Springfield. Another daughter, Mrs. E. C. Peck of Worcester, died two years and a half ago, this being the first break in the family circle. A number of presents were bestowed upon the aged couple, among them being two easy chairs, a set of crockery and a handsome album. Mr. Butler is 74 years old, and was born in Silver Street, within two miles of his present home, and has always lived within a short distance of his birthplace. Mrs. Butler was Maria Brown, and was born in Troy, Vt., being 82 last March. They were married in North Wilbraham fifty years ago, and two years later built the house where they now reside, and which has been their home since. Mrs. Butler is a member of the Baptist church at Three Rivers, while Mr. Butler is a Methodist.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mrs. Hines and daughter of Boston are the guests of Mrs. H. A. Hopkins.

Misses Grace and Blanche Fisher are visiting friends in Indian Orchard.

Miss Jennie Carey has gone to Washington, Ct., for a two-weeks' visit.

Mrs. Robert A. Davis of Stoughton is visiting at her old home for a few days.

George F. Babb has been chosen principal of the high school for the coming year.

Rev. Mr. Dickey of Milton, N. H., is visiting at the home of Mrs. A. L. Kendall.

Miss M. D. Chapin of Chicopee and Miss Julia Dickenson of Chicopee Falls are visiting friends in town.

Work has begun on F. L. Plantiff's new house, and J. R. Gould is considering proposals for building a new block.

The personal property of the Holland homestead will be sold at auction to-morrow, and if not previously sold, the place will also be put up for sale.

The ball game last Saturday between the "Wildcats," the old high school team, and the local team, resulted in a victory for the former. The score was 16 to 14.

There was a forest fire last Saturday, which proved to be quite destructive. It started on what is known as the Leach place, owned by A. W. Stacy, and from there swept in an easterly direction.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. Frank Bemis is recovering from a severe illness.

Miss Kate White gave a lawn party at the Maples Tuesday night.

Miss Mable Crouch is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, in Bondsville.

George Bliss has bought a valuable pair of carriage horses from William Clark of Ware.

The West Warren little nine beat the big nine of No. 4 on the latter's grounds Tuesday afternoon.

The Warren Cotton Mills are running this week from 7 o'clock in the morning until 12.30 p. m. on account of low water.

The Epworth League gave Fred and Charles Webber a farewell in the vestry of the M. E. church Wednesday evening. Ice cream and cake were served, and a general good time was enjoyed by all. They finished their work at the pump shop in Warren Wednesday, and will join their parents in Westboro, where they will remain until the first of September, when they will enter Wilbraham Academy.

An Almost Fatal Fire.

The house owned by John Connor on South street was badly damaged by fire last Friday. The L was occupied by Mr. Connor's family, and the persons in that part of the house were obliged to jump from the window of the second story to avoid the flames. The main part of the house, which was occupied by C. Shaw, was badly damaged, and several valuable paintings belonging to Mr. Shaw were destroyed. The total loss is about $1000; insured.

LUDLOW.

Serious Bicycle Accident.

Two bicyclists, Allie Fisher and George Booth, collided on the road from Ludlow Center in the hollow just out of town the other night. They were both coming home, and Fisher was riding quite fast. Booth was riding carefully to avoid accident, and as they collided Fisher went over his handlebars and struck his head upon the lantern-holder of Booth's wheel, which inflicted a severe gash over one eye and rendered him unconscious. Booth received a blow in the breast and was also rendered unconscious. In about half an hour Booth revived and picked up his hat. As he did so he saw another hat in the road and naturally looked around to see who it belonged to. He found Fisher and tried to revive him, but was unsuccessful. He dragged him out of the road and managed to get home, where he fainted in the doorway. His mother revived him, and he said, "There's a fellow up the road hurt worse than I am." Mrs. Booth sent Albert Gore to take Fisher home. In the meanwhile, Walter Atchinson, who was going home, rode over part of Fisher's wheel and got off to investigate. He found Fisher lying beside the road, and when Mr. Gore came with the team helped get him in. At the last report Fisher was getting on finely and Booth was able to work.

WALES.

W. A. Lyon and wife have gone to Maine for a two-weeks' visit.

C. A. Royce of Boston has been spending a few days with friends here.

Miss Orril Shaw is having her house repainted; C. G. Needham has the job.

W. A. Harrington and wife of Boston are spending a week among friends here.

John C. Chapman of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the guest of his sister, Mrs. H. M. Needham.

Mrs. J. C. Burly and her daughter Anna have gone to Whitesboro, N. Y., to spend two weeks.

Mrs. Robert Harding and daughter of Brooklyn, N. Y., have been visiting Mrs. H. Needham.

Frank Hill was taken quite ill with fever Sunday, but is now on the way to speedy recovery, thanks to Dr. Kinsman.

By a very large majority the town decided last Monday to rescind the vote taken to raise $1000 to repair the Center school house.

All persons who desire to get the benefit of the 6 per cent discount on taxes must pay on or before Aug. 31st. The rate is $10 50 on $1000.

Mrs. Josephine A. Webber of Worcester, and her granddaughters Josie and Elsie Church of South Worcester, Ct., are visiting friends in town.

There will be a dance in the Valley Mill on the evening of Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 3. Suprenant's orchestra of five pieces will furnish music, and Frank Hoben will prompt. The floor directors will be M. Dimmick, A. Barnes, Tom Moran, Fred Patnode and W. Peck.

Misses Grace and Mary Hiscock of Brooklin, N. Y., conducted the meeting at the Baptist church last Sunday evening. Miss Mary preached a very forcible and in teresting sermon from Acts 17:30, 31. Miss Grace played the organ and sang solos which were very much praised, and the two sisters sang a duett which was very fine. On the whole it was a most interesting meeting.

Alonzo Jones, who came from North Carolina last fall to take the position of hostler for H. F. Shaw, planted some cotton seed last spring and has quite a field of cotton now growing, which looks well. He says it compares well with cotton in the South, and sees no reason why it may not become a profitable thing to raise cotton in the north. Should he succeed, as he now expects, he will enlarge his field and quite a party of colored people will come here and engage in the business. Very likely one of the mills will be fitted up for cotton goods.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Carrie Brown of Springfield is spending a couple of weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Lyman Webster.

Louis S. Brown is home from the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston for a vacation of a week.

Rev. Mr. Kyle and a number of his parishioners are attending camp meeting at Laurel Park, Northampton.

Harry Gardner is home from the University of Vermont, and is spending his vacation with Dr. K. V. Sawin.

Mrs. Mary B. Shaw and Mrs. E. B. Smith arrived from Chicago Tuesday, the guests of Mrs. G. M. Hitchock.

George and Clarence Bacon are guests of Miss Alice Bacon, and John Ryan is the guest of Charles S. Tarbell.

The young people of 10 or 12 years of age will give a fair on the grounds of J. F. Converse on the afternoon of the 30th, at 2 o'clock. The sports will consist of running, wheelbarrow and potato races, etc., and premiums will be offered for the best displays of stock, fancy work, etc. Dinner will be served on the grounds.

Hitchcock Free High School Alumni Reunion.

The day long looked for by the former pupils of the Hitchcock Free High School, when they could meet each other face to face in Brimfield and talk of scenes gone by, arrived yesterday as they gathered at the fourth triennial reunion of the alumni association. The programme at the First church in the afternoon was carried out as announced last week, with the exception of the historial sketch, which was omitted on account of the illness of the historian. Rev. C. M. Tanner, a former principal of the school, made a short address filled with witty sayings of his own which kept the audience in a happy frame of mind. His subject was memories of S. A. Hitchcock, the founder of the school, and the benefits derived from his legacy, which have spread to all parts of the world. Also the fitting time for the reunion, it being the 100th year from the birth of Mr. Hitchcock; of the start of Mr. Hitchcock when a boy of 16 years with his worldly goods in a kandkerchief, starting out in the world and leaving home to accept a position as clerk in a store at Dudley. His oft expression was "give the boys a chance," and they are now wielding a power for good; and now we, the graduates, gather to lay a wreath of respect to his memory. There were also short addresses by W. B. Homer of St. Louis, Geo. C. Plimpton of New Hampshire, E. W. Norwood, M. D., of Spencer, J. N. Hubbard of Chicago, F. W. Blackmer of Worcester, George Haynes of Sturbridge, and others. Music was furnished by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Springfield. At the close of the programme a business meeting was called and the election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. W. McClench of Chicopee; first vice president, George H. Haynes of Sturbridge; second vice president, Fannie P. Walker of Hardwick; secretary, Jennie E. Livermore; treasurer, Chas. S. Tarbell; executive committee, R. M. Lincoln, O. F. Brown, A. T. Tarbell, F. B. Gates, M. Anna Tarbell. At 5.30 Keith of Warren served supper; covers were laid for 300. Informal speeches made it a lively occasion. A promenade concert in the town hall, which was beautifully decorated with potted plants, ferns, etc., followed at eight o'clock, with dancing from ten to twelve, finishing a most delightful day for the alumni. Among those present were: Dr. and Mrs. E. N. Norwood of Spencer, Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Webber of Wilbraham, Dr. and Mrs. M. H. Davis of Hardwick, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Marsh of Maynard, W. B. Homer and daughter of St. Louis, Mo., Salem D. Charles of Boston, J. L. Hubbard of Chicago, Rev. E. M. Tanner, Hon. W. W. McClench of Chicopee, F. W. Blackmer and wife of Worcester, Frank H. Brown of Port Chester, Rev. James Tufts of Monson, James D. Lincoln of Pasadena, Cal., George Sherman of Taunton, Prof. George Plimpton of Tilton, N. H., Professor George F. Perry of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Winter of Southbridge, Frank L. Mullen of Worcester.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Charles S. Parker Narrowly Escapes Being Killed. No Known Cause for the Deed.

A dastardly attempt was made on the life of Charles S. Parker, or someone else, on Tuesday evening. We say someone else, for it seems almost impossible that anyone should make such an attempt on Mr. Parker, who has many friends and not an enemy that he knows of in the world. The circumstances were these: He was driving through Main street to his home on Church street; with him were his wife, daughter and his wife's mother. When nearly opposite Marsh Brothers' store a man stepped from the sidewalk, advanced to the carriage and struck him in the side with a paring or shoe knife. It was not very sharp, and did not penetrate his clothing at all, but was turned aside and broken. Mr. Parker did not realize what had been done until he felt the knife blade in his lap. The would-be assassin crossed the street, running between the buildings by the express office. The police were quickly notified, but so far have failed to find any clue to the perpetrator of the deed. It is a very mysterious case, as if the assassin really was after Mr. Parker there are hundreds of better opportunities, and if some other person was to be the victim it is strange how the mistake could have been made in the glare of the electric light. Mr. Parker is one of the best known men on the street, always jovial and kindly toward every one. He came to this town from Milbury, Mass., where he had been engaged for many years in company with his father in carriage manufacturing, building up a business that was widely know in this section of the country. He has been here some years, a large repository having been built for him for the sale of carriages, harness and other goods in that line, on Parker street, which was named in his honor.

Forbes & Wallace's.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., August, 1894.

This week we begin a clearance sale of women's and misses' ready-made suits, jackets, capes and waists.

Everything belonging to spring and summer must go. The new fall and winter stocks are beginning to arrive and must have possession of the cloth-room in a short while.

To make this possible we have marked the prices lower than such goods ever sold for before on the remaining stocks of ready-made suits, jackets, capes and waists.

And there is another consideration that is largely responsible for these ridiculously low prices. It has always been our policy to start in fresh and new each season, with no last season's stock to be handicapped with.

That will be true with next summer's season if low prices will close out this summer's remaining socks.

Here is the price story.

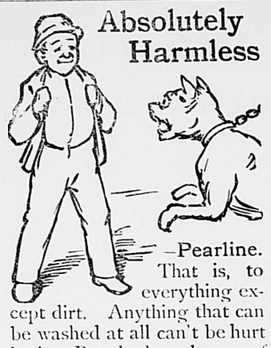
Women's duck suits
at 68 cents, that were $1 25;
at $1, that were $1 05;
at $1.50, that were $3.50;
at $2, that were $5.

Serge and covert cloth suits
at $4.95, were $7.50 and $10;
at $7.50, were $10 and $15;
at $10, were $15 and $20;
at $2.50—a few odd suits, not a complete range of sizes, that were $3.98, $5 and $7.50.

Women's jackets
at $2, that were $5;
at $4.50, that were $7.50 and $10.
at $7, that were $15.

Capes
Not more than 50 odd garments in stock. They will be marked low enough to close them at once.

Silk waists
at $2.50, that were $5;
at $5, that were $7.50 and $10;
at $7.50, that



Absolutely Harmless

—Pearline. That is, to everything except dirt. Anything that can be washed at all can't be hurt by it. But that's only one of its merits. Add to its doing no harm, that it saves it, by doing away with the rub, rub, rub that wears things out; that it saves labor, time and money, and costs no more than common soap—then you wonder, not that millions of women do use Pearline, but that there are any who don't.

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feelling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

MRS. HARRY E. STARR, Pottsville, Pa.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Chinese Warriors' Victory.

In far away
Grotesque Cathay,
Where the loo loo sings all night
In a willow tree
By the sad, salt sea,
Brave men went forth to fight.
There were Li Hung Chung,
And Ki Wun Lung,
And bold Chee Chi Choo Cham,
With Chang Wong Ching
And Sam Moy Sing,
And fierce Wah Wee Woo Wam.
There was sword nor gun,
But each brave one
A tomtom wildly beat,
And they all cried "Boo!"
At the foe and flew
To a safe and snug reteat.
There were Li Hung Chung
And Ki Wun Lung,
And the bold Chee Chi Choo Cham,
With Chang Wong Ching
And Sam Moy Sing,
And fierce Wah Wee Woo Wam.
No blood was spilled,
No one was killed,
But they all marched home once more,
And to this day tell
How they drove pellmell
The foe from their sacred shore.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

ON THE COMMON.

She stood on Boston Common, and her attitude was grand,
While the strains of Wagner's choicest flowed from the Cadet Band;
Her face and form were faultless, and unto my soul it seemed
The music held her spellbound, while the master's dream she dreamed.

Just then her chum espied her, and when those fairies met
The words which froze my romance I ne'er can quite forget;
She, whom I'd placed so high in art, unto her friend did say:
"I wish they'd git threw tunin' up an' tackle 'Boom de ay.'"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Days Gone By.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The apple in the orchard, and the pathway through the rye;
The chirrup of the robin and the whistle of the quail,
As he piped across the meadows sweet as any nightingale;
When the bloom was on the clover, and the blue was in the sky,
And my happy heart brimmed over, in the days gone by.

In the days gone by, when my naked feet were tripped,
By the honeysuckle's tangles, where the water lilies dipped,
And the ripple of the river lipped the moss along the brink,
Where the placid eyed and lazy footed cattle came to drink,
And the tilting snipe stood fearless of the truant's wayward cry,
And the splashing of the swimmer, in the days gone by.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The music of the laughing lip, the luster of the eye;
The children's faith in fairies, and Aladdin's magic ring,
The simple, soul-reposing, glad belief in everything,
When life was like a story, holding neither sob nor sigh,
In the olden, golden glory of the days gone by.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

LITTLE MISS CARNRICK.

No wonder the young minister, Paul Edson, trembled as he stepped up to the altar that first Sabbath morning of his pastorate in Blauville; in through the stained windows the warm June sunshine gleamed, flooding the altar with its golden light, while in the vines outside robins and swallows were singing and chattering.

It was so long a time since any one beside old Parson Deane had preached in the village that the pretty, vine-covered church was well filled to hear the gifted young preacher; not even old Deacon Truet fell asleep while the clear, musical voice sounded through the still, hushed air, as in tender tones he told them that while he knew he could never take the dear old pastor's place, yet earnestly and prayerfully he yearned to be to them all that any man could be. And when, services over, he had clasped each rough hand within his own strong manly one, he felt that in place of strangers they had all become his friends.

"I tell you what," exclaimed Squire Williams, as they walked home, "if that young fellow, with those fine words of his, don't set all the girls in Blauville on an edge, then I'm mistaken!"

"Then I do hope," returned his wife, "that he'll have sense enough to pick out a good religious wife that the village won't be ashamed of; and I do hope, John, between us two, that he'll see what a difference there is between our Cornelia and the other girls, and if he is as bright as he is said to be, it won't take him long to find it out."

How the girls all did envy Cornelia Williams! How, at the sewing circle's meeting, they all declared that if ever a girl was born under a lucky star that girl was Cornelia. Such a beautiful complexion, such golden hair as she had, made every other girl in the village hide her head. And such dresses! Far too gorgeous for Blauville, it's true, but gay enough to turn all their foolish heads. Then, too, she was Squire Williams's only child, and that was no mean distinction when one remembered that the Squire was by far the richest man in the place, and many acres of good farm land would be his daughter's dower. In her own mind this much-envied maiden had settled that, either by hook or crook, Paul Edson, handsome, winning and talented, should marry none but her charming self.

Meanwhile, there in the little parsonage, so close to the church that the vines had climbed over and grown about his study window, the young minister worked and hoped. Never before had the church been so well attended or the poor of the village so well cared for. How the sick and the aged brightened up when they heard his happy voice; and old Sandy, the Scotch blacksmith, whose brawny arms had not held a hammer since paralysis had marked him for its own, more than once said to him, "Aye, Maister Edson, but ye be e'en most as cheery as bonnie Lida Carnrick!"

How could any in the village speak anything but good of her? For in her whole twenty-five years of life, lived in the same little cottage by the church, no one had ever known her to be aught but true and loving and womanly. There had been the two sisters, living alone, but the elder had long since married, and the younger, known to every one as the little Miss Carnrick, lived on in the little home alone, save for the old serving woman who would not leave her. No one, in all her life, had ever called Lida Carnrick pretty; but such a cheery light shone from her eyes, such loving words could fall from her tender lips, that all the village loved the dainty little figure, whose kindly help was never called for in vain.

Perhaps there stole a little gleam of jealousy into Cornelia Williams's selfish heart as she heard in what warm words Mr. Edson spoke of the girl, but then she laughed as she thought of such a thing. Why, what was Lida Carnrick's slight little form, in its sober brown dress, beside her in all her loveliness? Then she would peep once more into the mirror at the golden nodding curls, while her doting mother would swell with pride in anticipation of the time when the eloquent young minister would be her son-in-law.

"Do you know," Cornelia had remarked to the pastor one evening, "that Lydia Carnrick is so common! She smiles and talks to every old woman she may meet. You know you preached about that last Sunday, doing charity in public, and I do think that is all she does it for!"

"Indeed!" he answered gravely, while an amused light shone from his deep gray eyes, as he remembered that that very morning, when he had met her in a home of poverty with her hands full of dainties, she had fled in dismay.

"And do you know," she went on volubly, "that she is quite poor? Indeed, she has nothing but the house she lives in, and she isn't a bit pretty. Don't you think it queer that the Lord didn't make us all pretty?"

"Oh, no, indeed! I know that if everyone were beautiful beauty would not be appreciated; and, too, since in His sight we are only beautiful when covered by the veil of purity and goodness, who can tell if the homely here are not glorified in His sight?"

And Cornelia, as she went to bed, wondered savagely if after all her plans and strivings, all her mother's invitations to dinner and her father's liberal contributions to the church funds, she should have a rival in plain, homely Miss Carnrick.

It seemed so natural, in the warm summer evenings, to go across the road to the little porch, covered with fragrant honeysuckles, and to watch the deft fingers with the gleaming knitting needles; and when tired and homesick he would feel how lonely the parsonage was, it seemed so easy to go over to the cozy little sitting room, where even the tiled fire-place gave token of the careful mistress. In his study, among the flowers of the parsonage garden, even in the quaint little church, he would see the peaceful face of Lida Carnrick, and he wished that Cornelia Williams, nay, all the would itself, could know how dear to him she had grown.

Into Lida's gentle heart no thought had come of what Rev. Mr. Edson might think of her; quietly, lovingly, as always before, she had gone about her task.

True, she did find her cheeks flushing, when in the evening, he would speak to her of his plans and purposes, and feel her heart beat a trifle faster when she saw his face grow lighter as he met her, or meet his eyes, or when on Sunday morning he would speak from the altar such words of love and encouragement that she would treasure them for the troublesome moments of the coming week. Besides, didn't all the village know that on one Sabbath he went home with the Squire's family! Had not Cornelia told with a simper at the circle's meeting that she was going to get a brown dress because he liked that color? Then she would grow more reserved when he came, until he began to wonder if in her great loving heart there was any room for such a person as Paul Edson.

Then came the fall, and Edson began to show the effect of the long summer's hard work; he had grown thinner and appeared to be tired. Lida Carnrick, looking from her sitting-room window, noticed how late the lamp burned in the parsonage study, and had she looked further might have noticed his wistful gray eyes peering though the gloom in the direction where her cheery little light was gleaming through the night.

Then came four weeks of illness, when worn with fever, he could only lie on his couch, while his anxious parishioners hovered over him. Only Lida, from her window, could know how many useless errands kept Cornelia fitting in and out of the parsonage, while Mrs. Williams spent all of her spare moments attending the patient. But Lida did not know that when he was first taken ill, and Squire Williams had proposed taking him to his own house, Mr. Edson had firmly and most ungratefully refused. Oh, the long weeks of convalescence, when all he could do was to listen to the click of Miss Carnrick's gate and watched the tidy form as it went slowly up the road.

"I tell you," said the Squire at the next trustee meeting, "what that man needs is a wife! Somebody to watch over him; to kind of take care of him, you see. Now a man is nothing without a wife, especially a minister, and I'm in favor of kind of hinting it to him, sort of letting him know its all for his own good, you know."

"By George, Squire, but you're right!" was the hearty approval from both sides, and it was tacitly decided that a committee headed by Squire Williams should wait upon the minister as soon as he was well. How Cornelia's heart did swell, and how her shrewd father did chuckle when they thought of it all!

Paul Edson, when he heard of the committee (for when did news ever fail to reach the interested ears?) felt his pale face flush. He watched the cottage across the way and prayed for courage to ask its mistress to come to him. "What right have I to ask her?" he thought bitterly. "She is loved on all sides, and I can only give her my love. God knows she has had that long." Then desperately crushing down his weakness, he put on his hat and hurriedly, lest his courage should leave him, he crossed the road and rang the bell. Then, when he had been seated in the cosy little room by the fireplace and had said "Good evening," an awkward silence fell upon them.

"Are you quite well again?" she asked anxiously, when ten minutes had passed; "you seem so uneasy and restless I thought you might be ill."

"Oh, no, I am feeling quite well, thank you. That is, well in body, but troubled in mind. Really, Miss Lida, I came to-night to ask you something; you see—that is—you know I felt lonely, and I came over here."

"You are right, and I am glad to see you," she answered, while her heart gave a great throb as she thought, "he has come to tell me of Cornelia," and then wondered how so eloquent a man could be so awkward, so uneasy in just telling of his engagement.

"Miss Lida, if you loved a woman what would you do?" he asked at length.

"Do?" she echoed, "why, tell her so, of course."

"Yes, so would I if I were sure she loved me. But you see I very much fear that she has never looked upon me in the light of a lover, and, worse still, mayhap she never can."

"Oh, Mr. Edson, I am sure you are mistaken! She must love you, and she is so pretty!" she ended feebly, while a sob crept up into her throat and her heart felt suddenly very sore and weak. "Every one knows that Cornelia will make a lovely wife."

"Will she? But then, you see I am not thinking of Cornelia!"

It was Lida's turn to flush and tremble now as she met the calm gray eyes, and murmured: "Oh—I thought you meant her —I—you—see—I—" then stopped helplessly as he came over and took both her unresisting hands in his own.

"Lida, I have loved you so long, and I am so lonely! Come to me, my darling, and God knows no wife shall be more blest than you."

Only the gleams from the fireplace chasing up and down the tiles, and the little pale moonbeams peeping through the curtained windows, heard Lida's happy sob as she whispered: "I will come, Paul."

I was not until the next week that the committee, after many consultations, and many hems! from the Squire, found courage enough to call upon the minister in his study. He had come forward with such a bright greeting, such a happy look, that Old Deacon Trust had exclaimed: "Wal, now, parson, but you do look well again!"

"Not near as well as you would if you had a wife," remarked Squire Williams, facetiously.

"No, I agree with you A man's nothing without a wife, especially a minister; is he, Squire? I've been thinking of it lately."

"Is that so, parson? Then that makes our task easy. You see we've been talking among ourselves lately how you've been looking pretty bad, like as if you needed a wife's care, you know. We thought as how you ought to ask some good, sensible girl to marry you; and there ain't one of them that would refuse you, parson."

"Thank you, Squire Williams, but you see I've done the asking and won the best girl in the world."

With a bound the Squire had caught hold of the minister's hand and giving it a hearty shake exclaimed: "Well done! and Cornelia never told me a word about it neither!"

"Didn't she! But then I don't believe she knows it."

"Oh—what?—you mean that—a—"

"I don't believe Lida has told any one yet."

"Lida? Lida who?"

"Why, Lida Carnrick, to be sure! Who else could make me as happy as I have been this week?"

"Parson Edson," the Squire's face was very red and his voice very husky, "Lida Carnrick is about the finest girl in town, and I congratulate you! And I am the biggest fool!"

And before the stately committee was fairly out of sight the dignified young reverend had gone across the road to the little cottage, and taking a trembling figure into his strong young arms, had heard a happy voice whisper: "Poor Cornelia!"

Then, with tears in his brave eyes, while his voice quivered with its new found joy, the only answer, "Happy Paul Edson!"—Troy Daily Times.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

What makes consumption? This question is less interesting to sufferers than one other: What

CURES CONSUMPTION?

Sometimes there is no cure at all, but that is not the case as often as folks suppose. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, allays inflammation, stops that weakening cough, and promotes the formation of solid, healthy flesh on emaciated bodies. And it is pleasant to take. It contains healing properties of great value, scientifically combined. That answers the second question.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

DUE NOTICE REQUIRED.

An angry discussion was taking place between two colored men on Bates street, yesterday, and one of them was about to lay hands on the other when "Daddy White" came down Cadillac square and stopped to ask what the row was about.

"Dat man owes me half a dollar!" replied one of the disputants.

"I don't deny it!" said the other.

"Den why don't you pay me?"

"Kase it's too soon."

"If yo' doan pay dat half a dollar I'ze gwine ter smash yo' fine!"

"Hole on, Mister Simpkins—hole on!" said "Daddy," as he stepped between the pair. "Let's see how dis yere case stands. How long has dis gem'lan owed yo' half a dollar?"

"'Bout fo' weeks."

"Has yo' dun axed him fur it befo'?"

"No, sah."

A CHUNK OF LEAD.

It Killed a Brave Man's Chances of Promotion.

"Somewhere inside of me," said a veteran officer in the United States army, "is the bullet that struck me down at the first battle of Bull Run. It spared my life, but killed my chances of promotion, because I could not pass the doctor. So I must stay in my present grade the rest of my life."

They have a stern sense of duty, these army surgeons. One of them treated Sergeant Henry Chilton, of Battery "M," Fourth Artillery, for chronic dyspepsia. In a few months the sergeant, who is six feet tall, lost twenty-eight pounds. He was discharged for disability, March 11, 1894, and went to live at 40 Washington street, Anacostia, D. C.

He heard of Paskola, a pre-digested food, absorbed directly into the system, and rapidly taking the place of cod liver oil. Paskola is made of starchy products and puts fat on emaciated bodies. "Just the thing for me," he thought.

"I concluded to try a few bottles and am pleased with the result," he writes. "My weight is now 149 pounds—a gain of eleven pounds, with only eight small bottles."

Says Mrs. Emma Clark, of Bridgeton, N. J.:

"I take pleasure in handing you my testimony as to the benefit I have derived from taking Paskola. After being under the care of my physician for a long time and trying almost every remedy known to science I was induced by my friends to try Paskola as a last resort. I felt a great improvement and benefit before I had consumed the first fifty-cent bottle and had no trouble to retain it on my stomach when all other preparations nauseated me.

"I now have a ravenous appetite and can eat the most hearty food, and now I am gaining in flesh daily."

How this was done is explained in a pamphlet which will be mailed free on application to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

Me an' Mary.

There's a lot of joy in livin', and a lot of fun in life
When a feller has a sweetheart an' is thinkin' of a wife,
An' that kinder now reminds me that I lived on honey-comb
When Mary did the milkin' an' I drove the cattle home.

I was kinder shy an' bashful, an' what folks would say was "green;"
An' the writin' in the Bible put down Mary "seventeen;"
I'd been thinkin' of the city—bein' much inclined to roam,
But I wondered, if I left her, who would drive the cattle home?

But there wasn't so much in farmin', or in drivin' cows to milk;
It kept me down to cotton jeans an' Mary fur from silk;
An' so, though I was up to go—for leavin' of the loam,
As I said before, I wondered who would drive the cattle home?

You see, they kinder knowed me—been a-drivin' of 'em so!
An' Mary had to milk 'em at a certain time—you know!
Would they come up in the twilight, would they know the time o' stars?
An' who, like me, could coax 'em, and let down for 'em the bars?

I remember, it was springtime—'bout the settin' of the sun;
An' I'd drove the cows to Mary, an' the milkin' had begun;
An' I said: "I'm sorry, Mary, that the two of us must part;"
An' I kept a-whistlin' careless, like 'twould break nobody's heart.

But she looked across the meadows, with her blue an' beamin' eyes,
Which was like a dream of heaven, an' jest took in all the skies!
An' then—an' then—can't tell how—I couldn't think or see—
"Do you like the city livin', or the cattle, more than me?"

Warn't no milk in that ere farmhouse that evenin' —not a drop.
The cows got in the cornfield an' jest eat up half the crop;
But the dish that I was feedin' from was sweet with honey-comb
From the red, sweet lips of Mary as I kissed her goin' home!

I lost sight o' the city life, whatever it might be;
One acre in the country was enough, an' more, for me;
An' I've made my mind up certain, an' I ain't inclined to roam
While Mary does the milkin' an' I drive the cattle home!

A LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL.

"Whew—ew—ew!"

The postman was going his rounds through the many-storied office building, and at the sound of his whistle Alex Darrow's partner went to bring in a handful of mail.

"Firm letters—papers—a circular—a bill of my own," he ran over, sorting them out. "Hello! here's a fine ladyfied epistle to come to a young lawyer's office on business—though the writing is considerably off. For you, only, too." He tossed it to Darrow across his desk. "If you weren't such a steady-going fellow, I should certainly suspect you of a billet-doux."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Darrow, his eyes fixed on the few lines traced on the satiny creamy-white sheet he had hastened to unfold.

"Yes, I should most decidedly say so, to judge by your excitement," was the sarcastic retort. "The dickens! I don't believe the man hears me, or was talking to me at all. I say, are you going to drop all the papers in Milner vs. Milner, and go flying off at this time of day?"

Mr. Darrow was already putting on his overcoat.

"I must—it's to keep an appointment—some most important business," he dropped fragmentarily, as he hurried out, with Marjie Taine's letter in an inner pocket very close to his heart.

Marjie had meditated much before she sent it. She was well aware that it was quite out of the usual course for the lady to propse to the gentleman, but then she was so very sure that Alex Darrow was in love with her. Had he not always paid her a great deal of attention, unlike most of the young men who seemed to find so much entertainment in her Aunt Marion's society? And his attentions were so respectful, too; he had never ruffled her dignity by tossing her up in his arms like a mere baby, and trying to make her kiss him against her will, and only laughing when she cried with anger and humiliation and told him he insulted her, as that altogether horrid Mr. Rogers had once done. She had felt almost as much insulted by Mr. Rogers's attempt to make his peace with a big Paris doll; for she thought herself quite too old for dolls, and had solemnly given away her whole family of them the day before her eighth birthday.

But Mr. Darrow was very different. He brought her flowers and bonbons, just as men brought them to Aunt Marion: and Marjorie knew that these were considered attentions, for Aunt Marion laughed and said they were, when she asked. He had told her she reminded him of a sister of his who died; and he had taken her out walking, and to the chrysanthemum show, and even sleighriding on the lake shore drive, when she had felt so badly because she couldn't go with Aunt Marion and Mr. Blair. He had taken her to see Elsie Leslie in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and Mr. Blair took Aunt Marion to the theater, and did not all the servants say that Mr. Blair was going to marry Aunt Marion? And if he did rather discourage her when she wanted to talk about her favorite books, and seemed to think it was better for her to play with the pug he had given her than to read and improve her mind, even the best of men could not be expected to understand one completely.

Marjorie was well versed in the woes of souls misunderstood. She was a great devourer of books, especially sentimental novels, of which an unlimited supply was constantly coming into the house for her pretty, pale, mamma, who lay among the rose pillows and down cushions of her lounge reading all day long, except when Aunt Marion coaxed her out for a drive in the brougham, or the doctor came, or a few choice intimates called, to whom she could lament the state of her nerves and the dreadful responsibility of being left with a child to bring up.

When the child came into the room on her daily duty call, Mrs. Taine invariably looked to see if her hands were well kept and her hair brushed becomingly, and then usually told her to run away to be a good, quiet girl; and it was a matter of perfect indifference to her what books Marjorie took with her, so long as she was not reading them herself. Marjorie's nurse had early found out that a book would generally keep her quiet, and leave herself free to flirt with the men servants, and though Aunt Marion had insisted on her being provided with a governess, Mlle. Duval had soon discovered the same unfailing recipe to keep her charge out of active mischief and herself in ample leisure. There were certainly many things in these books that Marjorie could not understand, but this mystery only made them the more fascinating.

So mamma continued to nurse her nerves, and Aunt Marion went on in her bright, busy life of a society belle, thinking her small, white-faced, deep-eyed niece in good hands, while Marjorie watched her with profound admiration, and made her the heroine of a hundred romances, borrowed from her books, until now that she had a romance of her own.

It is true that even she was compelled to recognize a decided difference of age; but, then, wasn't Strathmore at least thirty years older than that lovely Lucille whom he adopted as a baby and married at seventeen? There were less than twenty years between herself and Mr. Darrow; and this disparity seemed slight by comparison. She was also forced to admit that she was rather young; but Juliet was not full fourteen when she died for love of Romeo, and was there not a real princess of France who married a real English king when she was only eight years old? Marjorie thought she was quite old enough to marry if that princess was.

Reasoning from these famous examples, she dismissed the question of age as certainly not the obstacle which kept Mr. Darrow from a proposal, and cast about for it elsewhere. She found it in her fortune. She knew she would be rich some day; for, whenever she cried over a hard lesson or a scolding from mademoiselle, during that young lady's occasional paroxisms of discipline, nurse always comforted her with assurances that it was a shame to bother her with such things, so it was, when she was too big an heiress ever to need to know anything but how to look pretty, and sure she'd do that same anyway, the beauty of the world that she was! And she knew that Mr. Darrow was not rich, for she had once heard Mr. Rogers speak of him as nothing but a beggarly lawyer; and in how many of her mamma's novels had not the hero persisted in making the heroine and himself miserable from the first till the last chapter, merely because she had money and he had not? Sometimes this deadly difference had been bridged by a determined effort on the part of the heroine; and after long thought, Marjorie decided that such an effort was required of her now.

"Priscilla proposed to John Alden in Longfellow," she confided to Punch, the pug, who heard more of her fancies than anyone else in the house; "and I've known several girls in stories who did, too, and nobody seemed to think it was awful of them. Wouldn't you do it right off, before leap-year is over, if you were me? Honest, now, Punchie?"

Punch, this appealed to, sat up on her knees, begged with pendulous paws, rolled his goggle eyes lovingly at her and kissed her hand with the tip of his tongue, as in token of sympathy and approval; and Marjie felt strengthened in her resolve.

She might perhaps have asked Aunt Marion's opinion, too; but Aunt Marion was dressing for a ball, and Marjie knew that though she would run up to the school room for a moment to kiss her good night, and let her see her pretty gown, she would have no chance to talk to her till next day, at her noon breakfast, and then it would be too late. As for asking her mother about anything whatever, that wild idea simply never once crossed Marjie's mind.

Therefore she wrestled with her problem alone, but for Punch; and therefor Mr. Alexander Darrow found in his mail next day a small, square letter, with the well-known number on Calumet avenue engraved across the top of a sheet which held a brief, straighforward offer of marriage, signed Marion Leslie Taine.

It was the sweetest, strangest, most impossible thing; yet she had really told him that if, as she had so long suspected, he truly loved her, he might come to her in the library at half-past three that afternoon; and if she were too bold in thus inviting him, he must remember that leap year was almost gone, and she could not lose her only chance to speak for herself for four years more.

And to think that the postoffice had delivered that letter only just barely in season for him to keep the appointment! He caught a hansom, however, and bribed the driver to such speed that he reached Calumet avenue some ten minutes in advance of his time.

Yes, the servant said; Miss Taine was at home, and would see him in the library. Yet he could scarcely believe his own senses until he entered the room, and all bewilderment and wonder changed to assured joy as he saw her awaiting him, tall and fair and serenely sweet in her trailing Russianesque tea gown of ivory plush edged with dark fur. He was beside her in an instant.

"Dear," he said, "you must have more than suspected—have plainly seen—that I love you, yet I never thought to dare to speak!"

He was certainly daring a good deal now; for he had taken both her hands in his, and proud Miss Taine was letting him do it. She found it strangely sweet to yield even her pride to this sudden masterful tenderness and fire that had replaced all his old reserve, as he drew her into his arms and kissed her lips and eyes and chestnut hair.

"My queenly sweetheart, my own wife that will be! How could you ever fear that I should think less of you for your heavenly goodness in writing the letter that brought me here to-day?"

She started away from him.

"What letter? I never wrote you a line in my life. What do you mean?"

"But I received a letter from you this afternoon"—

"I did not write it. Who has dared make free with my name in this way? What was the letter like? Oh, is it all—all a mistake?"

"I'm sure it isn't a mistake that we love each other, and are going to be very happy now that we know it, however it came about," firmly declared Mr. Darrow. "As for the letter, here it is."

Miss Taine took it gingerly, as one touching a snake.

"It's my paper, certainly; but what writing! How could you ever suspect me of it? And, oh, Alex, do you really think I should spell three words wrong on only one page? And the high-flown sentimentals? But the matter is worst of all. Alex, how could you help having sense enough to know that I never, never would have asked even you—to—to marry me?"

She was laughing, blushing, happy, and vexed all at once.

"Of course I know better now," said Alex. with great meekness; "but for all the same I'm profoundly thankful somebody wrote that letter and I made the mistake. I didn't notice the spelling, and although I did wonder at the writing a little, I never saw any of yours, and I set down its faults to nervousness."

"Nervousness, indeed! As if any amount of that could make me write such a hand! Who could have done it? It must have been some servant who had access to my desk and stole my paper. Why, it's downright forgery to sign my name to a thing like that!"

"I didn't—I signed my own name, Marion Leslie Taine," said a small voice.

They turned to behold Marjie—Marjie, very pale and grave and determined, who, true to her appointments, had arrived on the scene to find her lover in conversation with her aunt, and to hear enough to know what her proposal had done for them.

"You wrote that letter?" gasped Miss Taine the elder.

Marjie nodded her chestnut curls. "Yes," she owned, in tones that suggested repressed sobs. "I wrote it. I didn't mean to steal your paper, though I did take some, because it was more grownup looking than mine. I thought he was my lover; for he's always been so nice to me, and he isn't near so much older than me as Strathmore was than Lucille, either. And Priscilla asked her lover to marry her, because he didn't ask her himself, and so did some other girls in the novels, and—and so—I thought—I could, too. I'm glad I did it, anyhow, for I'd rather you and—and—he—should be happy—than I."

The sobs came now in full force; but Marion had her arms round the tiny figure and the curly head on her breast.

"Oh! you poor baby!—you darling bit of a heroine!—you blessed little simpleton!" she cried, sobbing too. "What have we been thinking of to leave you to get such fancies and do such things out of your books? And yet I can't help being glad you did it, too! But you'll learn better now, dearest, and your own auntie will look after you, if you—if nobody else does."

"I've learned better now," said Marjie, solemnly. "I didn't know you'd never have done it, or that he'd want to laugh at me."

If Darrow had been inclined to laugh (and it must be owned that for one perilous moment at first he had been on the brink of open mirth), the small, shame-stricken face Marjie lifted would have cured him of any desire to do so.

"You are mistaken in that last," he said, gravely and gently. "A man can only feel honored by the preference of a young lady he respects, even if he cannot fully return it; and, indeed, I have always loved you as a very dear little friend, for your own sake as well as your aunt's. Be sure I shall never forget how much you have helped me, and that I want you to be good friends with me still, and let me help you forget all the disagreeable part of this."

Marjie bestowed on him one long, keen, suddenly searching look out of her wide, innocent brown eyes, and then gave him her morsel of a hand with heart-broken dignity.

Four years make a great difference in a small maiden's life, however, and in this next leap-year from that Marjie, no longer pale and grave and too old for her age, much prefers Alex Darrow as an uncle than as a lover.—Glen Hathaway, in Woman's Journal.

A BOSTON IDYL.

The Disagreeable Man was a mere shadow, yet he easily filled two seats in the electric car. His paper, which he read continually, occupied the space of another seat.

No one spoke to him; but he didn't give a hang or a cuss or a continental darn whether they did or not. He was waiting.

The bell sounded two weary strokes. Bernadine entered the car with a preoccupied air; it was all she had, for she was poor. Her clothes were dusty and she was hot. So was the day.

She reached the front of the car and dropped into a seat. It was the Disagreeable Man's paper seat. He partially looked up in complete surprise. No one had ever done that before.

"Room for one more on the left, please," called the knight of the fare.

The Disagreeable Man did not move.

"Did you hear what he said?" asked Bernadine.

"I hear what you say," replied the Disagreeable Man.

"Then I say what he said," she went on.

The Disagreeable man was lost in thought. He was thinking of her. "Does he mean me?" he asked himself. She was the only girl who had ever made him think.

In fact, he thought twice. His second offense was: "If it were not for the promise to my mother not to stay out after dark while she is alive, I would see this girl home." And still he waited.

The conductor came to collect the fares.

The Disagreeable Man paid for both.

"Hadn't you better let me cash up now?" asked Bernadine, making a bluff to find her pocket.

"Yes," he answered. "Five cents, please."

Bernadine was surprised; but she was game. That was one on Bernadine.

They rode for a long time in silence. At last a Polish Jewish widow entered the car. Bernadine moved along to give her a seat.

"Why did you do that?" asked the Disagreeable Man in a huff. "When you have a thing in this world you want to freeze to it for yourself."

"You don't understand," was the calm reply. "I have a philosophy of life."

"You're the next thing to a fool," he said.

Bernadine was beginning to thaw. He was not like other men. His noble frankness pleased her. But she could not resist the temptation.

"Don't call yourself hard names," she said.

That was one on the Disagreeable Man. But he smiled that 4 by 6 sunburst smile of his and lapsed into silence.

Yes, he would see her home. He was sure his mother could not have lived through the hot day that was now drawing to a close. So it was all right.

He helped her from the car.

"Stop squeezing my hand!" she said.

That settled it. He was sure he loved her now.

But he was politic. "Don't flatter yourself," he said. "Talk about hands! I held four queens last night."

That was one too much for Bernadine. She knew he was her Jack—the Jack of her heart.

Just then they stopped near a lamp-post.

The Disagreeable Man noticed for the first time that her eyebrows were black and her hair of a delicate hempen gold.

Then he realized the truth. It was as if a herdic had struck him.

And so Bernadine dyed!

He pulled himself together, turned silently from her and started home to his mother. He would seek some hell on earth. He would go to Chicago, where he would join the American Railway union and get a job burning bridges.—Boston Budget.

THE NIAGARA FALLS POWER COMPANY.

The supply canal leaves the Niagara river about 7000 feet above the falls. It is 188 feet wide and 12 feet deep, with cut stone walls. From this canal water passes by gates and penstocks to the turbines. At present the wheel-pit is constructed only on the western side of the canal. This pit is 21 feet wide, 179 feet deep and 150 feet long, and the turbines are now being placed in the northern end of it. The penstocks which supply the turbines are 7½ feet in diameter, and the turbines themselves, each of which is double, take the water at the center and discharge outwardly. These are five feet three inches in diameter, and each double turbine will develop 5000 horse-power. The shaft from the turbines is of hollow steel, 38 inches in diameter and three-eighths of an inch thick. At bearings the shaft is solid and 11 inches in diameter. The turbines are so arranged that the weight of shafts, turbines and gear is counterbalanced by the upward thrust of the water, so that when running the thrust will be on the bearings at the top. These are to run at 250 revolutions a minute. The breadth from the surface of the water in the canal to a point half way between the two double turbines is 136 feet. The tail-race is a tunnel 7000 feet long, 21 feet high, 18 feet 10 inches wide, lined throughout with brick. It has a fall of 52½ feet, and opens at the bottom of the gorge, just below the upper suspension bridge, at the level of the stream.—Scientific American.

HORSE-RACING BY ELECTRIC LIGHT.

There is but one place in the world in which horse-racing may be seen at night, says an article in Harper's Weekly. That is in St. Louis, Mo. The track was built as a regulation daylight race-course, but Missouri pool laws soon after went into force and drove all the "talent" to the track across the river in East St. Louis. A stockholder in the venture suggested that the place be lighted up and run at night as a sort of curiosity, but he did not dream that horses could be run successfully in a long meeting at the full distances that are common on short courses. The venture was tried, however, and it succeeded from the start. Before the summer and fall were half gone the grand stand would not hold the people who thronged to see the races.

When the track was opened for business the stabling accommodations were large enough for but 40 horses. Now more than 700 racers have their homes on the grounds, and new quarters are being built every month. All of the stables are lighted by electricity, and the stable grounds are also well illuminated. There has been a small number of mishaps. No more in proportion to the number of events than in ordinary racing meets. The track is kept in good condition, and the rules that govern the national association apply in its government. If a jockey has been ruled off the daylight tracks he cannot ride here, and a horse that has been disqualified elsewhere, or any owner who stands in the shadow of irregularity, has no recognition. The attendance this season has averaged 2000 people a night.

There is a bunch of electric lamps every 25 feet around the track, which is five-eighths of a mile in length. Over 20,000 candle-power is expended on the course alone, not to speak of the grand stand and those scattered about other parts of the grounds. The entire atmosphere of the race-course, judged from a distance, is that of a circus. There are hackmen, tamale-venders, peanut-sellers, ticket-peddlers, and what not. About the interior is evidence of everything but that which we commonly associate with horse-racing. The big plaza is brilliantly lighted by incandescent lights, and a throng of people in the cool garments of summer evening wear stroll slowly along to the entrance of the grand stand, which, in a glare of light, stands out against the dark sky in front. When the track is lighted every part of it can be seen and it shows almost white at the turns, where the force of the light is doubled. Away on the back stretch a pair of horses wearily drag a scraper along near the fence. Down in front of the grand stand the clods can be as plainly seen as if it were daytime. Just across the track is the judges' little stand, with a great dial in front of it. "Next race, 8.30," it says. It is an odd time to see on an announcement dial at a race-course. The entire thing is strange. There is no dust, no glaring sun, no panting horses and no perspiring jockeys.

Everything is managed as in the regular meeting. The trumpeter calls the horses to the post at exactly 8.30. They enter the track at the gate at the first turn, and parade up past the grand stand and return to the start. This is done in order to give the audience familiarity with the numbers and colors. Until this moment there is nothing in the general atmosphere or familiar sights about the place to remind one of a race-course. But the work of the starter and his marshal is at once familiar. The animals prance, break away and are driven back time and again. Finally the flag falls. "They're off!" is the shout that goes up from one end of the grand stand to the other. The audience arises. Now it is the daylight race-course over again. The scene is an exciting one. Suddenly as the racers come into the stretch, a powerful search light is thrown on them from one of four little elevated houses that are situated at the turns. The colors, even to those of sashes worn by the jockeys, stand out in the perfection of clearness. The search light follows the horses around the turn, and then another one takes its place as the animals break into the stretch down past the stand. Never was a daylight race more exciting than this. The spectators yell like mad as the animals go by the judges with a rush. As they reach the turn they go into the glare of the steel-blue search light, and again is the beautiful color effect presented. The finishes are generally exciting and the running fair.

A LARGE FAMILY ON A SMALL FARM.

We stopped over night at the house of a man by the name of Joseph Gallier, who lives about 40 miles from Galveston on the line of Jefferson and Chambers counties, writes a correspondent to the Galveston (Tex.) News. He formerly lived in Beaumont, but his wages as a mechanic became insufficient to support his large and increasing family. He says he thought if he could get into the country he might live for less and the children help raise what they required to live upon. So he went out on the prairies where the land was cheap and bought 50 acres. He says they have always had plenty to eat and to spare since that time; they have had no sickness in 15 years requiring a doctor, and that their 18 children are all alive and well.

I think I have never seen a happier family. The old gentleman moved around among his small army of sons like a patriarch directing their work, and no weed was to be seen in their garden and fields. There was growing on this place cotton, corn, rice, sugar-cane, sweet and Irish potatoes, a great variety of vegetables, and fruit. They had pears, plums, figs and grapes. And they knew how to prepare their table. We all agreed that the cuisine surpassed that of the hotels generally in the state.

You should have seen the spinning wheel and loom! The good housewife and her industrious daughters had spun and woven the coarser fabrics which they used from the cotton of their own raising, and most of their own shearing from their own little flock of sheep. Talk about independence! Why, they raised almost everything they required or used, even to the sugar for their coffee.

I have heard land in Texas talked about in 1000-acre tracts, and was surprised to find that this man had only 50 acres and that he considered that enough. There are thousands of acres of land in those counties that can be had from the state for settling on them, and other lands that can be bought on the buyer's terms. It seems to me that many men who are out of work and complaining of low wages might do well to follow the example of this man.

THE NUMBER FORTY IN THE BIBLE.—The rain that produced the flood fell for forty days and forty nights, and after it had ceased it was forty days before Noah opened the Ark. Moses was forty days on the mountain fasting, and the spies spent forty days investigating matters in Canaan before making their report. Elijah fasted forty days in the wilderness, and Jonah gave the people of Ninevah forty days in which to repent. The forty days' fast of Jesus is known to all readers of the New Testament.—Ex.

PALMER NEWS.

A Possible New Water Supply.

Many rumors have gone the rounds during the past ten days in connection with the purchase of the Wellman farm by Rufus Flynt, of the formation of a new water company and the bringing of water into the village from this source. Nothing of the kind has been done or is contemplated by Mr. Flynt. He bought the farm with the intention and for the purpose of making a trout preserve on it, which can easily be done, as since his original purchase he has bought other land and now owns all that immediately surrounds the source of the brook, thus preventing the possibility of having some one cut off the timber and injure the supply of water. The advantages of the place for a water supply have been noted, however, by several persons interested in such matters, and some measurements made. The farm is situated a little east of the village, and is the source of what is known as the Keith brook, which is to-day running water enough to fill a six-inch pipe. The height of the pond which Mr. Flynt proposes to establish will be the same exactly as that of the Palmer Water Co's. reservoir, 164 feet from the curbing at the Flynt Building and Construction Co's. office, while the location, at the bottom of a U-shaped valley, would allow of great storage capacity. The water is clear and fine, and shows no sediment after standing over night, the sample being taken from the middle of the stream running in the brook the first of the week. There has been some talk of the fire district buying the plant of the Palmer Water Company, but the price is $75,000, and those who have watched the matter closely think it is too much for the amount of water furnished. During the past week the stream running into the reservoir has not been large enough to fill a three-inch pipe, and last season and this have demonstrated most emphatically that in case of a long dry spell the supply is not ample for the needs of this village, which is each year consuming more and more water. Mr. Flynt says that if at any time the fire district wishes the farm he has recently bought for water purposes it can have it at a reasonable price, he reserving the trout privilege, and it is estimated that $20,000—or at the extreme outside $25,000—would purchase the farm, build the reservoir and bring the water into the village. The district could then have two supplies, one for fire and one for domestic purposes, or could combine the two, or could use one and drop the other. It is not unlikely that the matter will be brought before the fire district at the annual meeting next spring. If the system of sewers which has been arranged for is ever established in this village more water will be an absolute necessity, and any one who will go across the flat between the foot of Commercial street and the river on a warm afternoon will be greeted with effluvia which will say sewers in a loud voice. There is no question but that at the price above named the water supply would yield a handsome revenue to the fire district, which will make a mistake if it does not acquire the land and put in the works.

The Labor Day Bicycle Races.

Everthing points to an exciting afternoon of sport on the driving park next Monday, the occasion being the annual Labor Day tournament of the Palmer Bicycle Club. The track has been put in the best of condition, which can but result in fast time and good contests. The number of entries is large, as will be seen by the following list:

One Mile Novice—J. F. Fahey of Indian Orchard, Archie Cooley of Springfield, A. J. Kent of Belchertown, Ernest Marsh of Palmer, A. T. Campbell of West Warren, E. C. Hollis of Springfield, C. H. Evans of Ludlow, R. C. Gardner of Springfield, W. J. Knowlton of Bondsville, H. E. Bowen of Belchertown, Charles Goodrow of Ludlow.

Half Mile Open—H. A. King and Charles Goodrow of Ludlow, F. T. Parsons of Springfield, F. A. Blanchard of Spencer, C. D. Holden of Bondsville, J. F. Fahey of Indian Orchard, W. G. Cummings of Ware, R. C. Gardner and E. C. Hollis of Springfield.

Half Mile for Boys of 15 or Under—Thomas Russell of Bondsville, Allen Atkins and Albert Shaw of Palmer, Horace Parsons of Belchertown.

Mile Race for the Waite Prize Cup—Joseph Richard and A. W. Hapgood of the Central Bicycle Club, A. W. Stacy and H. A. King of the Palmer Bicycle Club, F. A. Blanchard of the Star Cycle Club.

International Invitation Race—A. J. Adams, W. S. Tricket and F. U. Wetmore of Palmer.

One Mile Local—Joseph Richard of Spencer, W. G. Cummings of Ware, C. D. Holden of Bondsville, R. S. Ousterhout, A. W. Hapgood and F. A. Blanchard of Spencer, J. T. Campbell of West Warren.

Half Mile Special—A. E. Fitch, F. D. Barton and W. F. Waite of Palmer.

One Mile Handicap—A. T. Parsons of Springfield, A. W. Stacy of Belchertown, F. A. Blanchard, R. S. Ousterhout and A. W. Hapgood of Spencer, A. E. Craw of Ludlow, E. C. Hollis of Springfield, H. A. King of Ludlow, W. J. Knowlton of Bondsville, A. J. Kent and H. E. Bowen of Belchertown, Archie Cooley of Springfield, C. D. Holden of Bondsville, Joseph Richards of Spencer.

Communion at the churches next Sunday.

Sunday services will be resumed next Sunday at St. Paul's Universalist church.

The Congregational Sunday school picnicked at Flynt's Park, Monson, to-day.

A concrete walk has been laid along the Central street side of Holden's new block.

The regular quartette at the Congregational church will resume its duties again next Sunday.

Miss M. E. Marsh will reopen her private school at her residence on Church street next Tuesday.

Miss Ola Northrop gave a party to a number of friends at her home on Central street last evening.

Fred Winter of Boston has been spending the week in town, called home by the illness of his father.

As next Monday is Labor Day the selectmen will postpone their regular meeting until Tuesday.

The Twilight Cycle Club will hold a meeting this evening with Miss Mabel Sedgwick on Pleasant street.

E. W. Carpenter, correspondent of the Springfield Republican, has had a telephone put into his rooms.

Porter Plympton has sold the Weeks farm, just over the river on the road to Brimfield, to a New York party.

Master Robbie Barton gave a party to a number of young friends at his home on Highland avenue Tuesday.

Harold Shaw goes next Monday to Worcester, to spend a year at Worcester Academy before entering college.

John Manning has returned from Greenfield, where he has been for several weeks recovering from an operation.

The Young Men's Library Association will hold a meeting in the rooms in the Memorial Building next Monday evening.

Dr. Auger will open an office in Lynde's block next Monday, with office hours from 8 to 9 a. m., 2 to 3 and 7 to 9 p. m.

A bicyclist en route from Detroit to Boston passed through Palmer Wednesday morning, having been on the road 15 days.

A jolly party of about 20 young people picnicked at Forest Lake Tuesday afternoon, chaperoned by Miss Della Holbrook.

A number of Palmer horsemen are planning to attend the races at the Ware driving park to-morrow and Monday.

D. L. Bodfish of Bridgewater expects to have his new dry goods and clothing store in the Cross block open to-morrow morning.

Miss Hattie Paine will be one of the clerks in the new dry goods store of D. L. Bodfish, and Miss Nettie Coleman will be bookkeeper.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. have decided that they will have a dining tent on the fair grounds both days of the coming cattle show.

G. W. Adams has resigned the principalship of the grammar school at Three Rivers, but the school will open next Tuesday with the others.

It is conceded by all that the present dry spell has no parallel in the "memory of the oldest inhabitant." The last rainy day was away back in April.

A merry-go-round is located on the land recently purchased by the Odd Fellows for their building on Central street, and will remain about a week.

Mr. Rogers, of the Rogers-Osgood Hat Co., is to occupy the house on Central street recently vacated by C. L. Alexander, and it is being thoroughly refitted.

Regular services will be resumed next Sunday at St. Thomas's Catholic church with high mass at 10.30 a. m., Sunday school at 3 p. m. and vespers at 7.30.

D. B. Collity, mail carrier between the post office and the trains, has been laid up on account of illness this week, and Eugene Marcy has been doing his work.

Water street residents have been somewhat annoyed lately by some person peeping in the windows at night, and there will be trouble for the fellow if he is caught.

Miss Annie Fish goes next Monday to Montpelier, Vermont, to enter the Vermont Seminary, where she will devote her time to the study of music, fitting for teaching.

Quite a number of Palmer people went on the excursion to Saratoga yesterday, run over the New London Northern road by way of Miller's Falls and the Hoosac Tunnel.

D. Mulvihill has opened his tailor shop in Eager's block on Main street. Mr. Mulvihill has had many years' experience in the business, and is considered a first-class workman.

The law does not allow the catching of trout after to-day, and as far as that is concerned it might have been applied several weeks ago, as the streams have been too low to tempt the anglers.

Remember that if you wish to save the 6 per cent discount on town taxes you must pay them to-morrow. Interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum will be charged on all taxes paid after that time.

The pastoral committee of St. Paul's church will hold its regular monthly meeting next Tuesday evening at 7.30. A full attendance is desired. Plans for the fall work will be submitted for consideration.

A Palmer young lady who vacationized at Block Island this summer is now wearing an engagement ring acquired at that place, although the fact has not yet been generally noted by her acquaintances here.

A little "scrap" between two business men on the street this forenoon gave promise of being decidedly interesting for a few moments, but both thought better of the matter and no serious damage was done.

The streets were unusually quiet last Saturday night, the wholesale arrest of drunks the week before and the warning sent out by Judge Robinson of the district court evidently having had a salutary effect.

The Block Island train on the New London Northern road and the boat between New London and Block Island will run a week longer than usual this season, the last trip being on Monday, September 10th.

J. B. Haviland of Ludlow has been appointed by the selectmen as the town's engineer in the matter of separating the grades of the highway and the New London Northern track on the road to Three Rivers.

It is expected that next Sunday will be Rev. C. R. Minard's last at the Baptist church, and that he will then resume his studies, which will occupy another year. Mr. Minard has filled the pulpit most acceptably for several months.

The New London Northern road will sell round-trip tickets to the Vermont State Fair at White River Junction, next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, for $2.70, good going the 3d to the 7th, inclusive, and good returning until the 8th, inclusive.

What is expected to be a ball game well worth seeing is to be played on the driving park to-morrow afternoon between the Thorndikes and Bondsvilles. Each team has won two games, and the one to-morrow is for the championship. The game will be called at 3 o'clock.

A lot of campaign torches are standing in a barrel in the rear of the bakery salesroom on Church street, having been removed from their storage place in the basement of the bank block. It can't be that they have been gotten out with any expectation of using them this fall.

A Boston paper Monday contained an item to the effect that S. W. French had dropped dead on one of the streets of that city, and people here were at first fearful that it might be the S. W. French who formerly lived in Palmer, but it evidently was not, as nothing more has been heard of the matter here.

The Palmer Water Company has shut off from the New London Northern road's tank, and hopes to have enough water for domestic purposes until rain falls. An artesian well is to be sunk near the resevoir, with the expectation of striking a supply of water, and if it should prove successful probably several will be put in.

Peaches are scarce this year, and not of the best quality, though fair fruit is offered at from $1.25 to $2 per basket. It comes from New Jersey and Connecticut. The condition of the crop may be judged from the fact that the state of Maryland, which usually ships some 400 cars a day in a good season, will not ship one carload this season.

Mrs. Jane L. Patterson of Roxbury, the "Home" editor of the Christian Leader of Boston, will be a guest at the Universalist parsonage to-morrow. Mrs. Patterson is well known here as the wife of Rev. A. J. Patterson, D. D., one of the first Universalist preachers in this village. She will give a short address in the Universalist church Sunday morning.

The employes of the Palmer and Monson Electric Co. had quite an experience Tuesday with the boiler which they were moving from the old plant on Water street to the new plant at Blanchardville. They loaded it on a truck and started up Commercial street to Main, but the boiler was too high in the air and hit the railroad bridge. It was finally lowered sufficiently to allow it to pass through, but the job occupied a good share of the day.

A good chance to spend the day at the seashore and get a whiff of the salt air will be offered by the New London road next Monday, Labor Day, when an excursion will be run to Mystic Island, Watch Hill and Block Island. The train will leave Palmer at 7.35 a. m., Monson at 7.42, and the fare for the round trip is only $1.25 to Mystic Island or Watch Hill, though by the payment of 25 cents additional on the boat the trip can be extended to Block Island.

The new caucus law passed by the last Legislature compels the holding of all caucuses of each political party on one of two dates, which must be specified by the state committee of that party. The Republican state committee has named September 18 and 19 as the dates on which the caucuses of that party must be held, and the caucus in this town will be on the evening of Tuesday, the 18th. The Democratic state committee has not yet designated the dates for its caucuses.

Forest Lake Garden will no doubt receive generous recognition next Monday from the sport seekers, as the management has arranged a programme which, though not extensive, will be appreciated by some. There will be dancing day and evening, with music by a first-class orchestra. During the afternoon six Montgolfier balloons, each 15 feet in circumference, will be sent up, and in each will be a ticket for one of the following articles: Lemonade set, cup and saucer, Majolica cream pitcher, two damask towels, and a silk necktie. In the evening there will be fireworks from Masten & Wells of Boston.

E. W. French, the sewing machine agent living at the Point of Rocks, has been developing signs of insanity during the last three weeks, and Monday became so violent toward his family that he was complained of in the district court and his brother in Willimantic notified. The latter came Tuesday and induced his brother to consent to go to the asylum at Hartford, where he was taken. One of his peculiarities was the proposal to buy all the eggs he could find of the farmers hereabouts. He would agree to take all the farmer had and call for them the next day, but would not put in an appearance. At one place some fifty dozen were kept standing about in various receptacles for several days on his order.

Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock and Miss Louise Hitchcock of Palmer, with Misess Christa and Lillian Park of Brattleboro, formerly of Palmer, had a narrow escape from serious accident at Brattleboro one day last week while driving. When part way up a hill the horse was taken with a fit and commenced to turn around, nearly upsetting the carriage in the ditch on one side oi the road, then turned to go the other way. The ladies were naturally frightened and got out of the carriage as soon as possible, but in doing so the skirt of Mrs. Hitchcock's dress caught on the step and she was thrown down and dragged a little distance, bruising her face and side somewhat, but inflicting no serious injury. The horse walked a little way down the hill and was stopped, no further damage resulting.

The schools commence their new year's work next Tuesday, as Monday is Labor Day and a legal holiday. The school committee met last Saturday and appointed the four pupil-teachers for the grammar schools from the young lady graduates of this year, and they are Miss Eloise Stone of Palmer, Miss Lucy Twiss of Three Rivers, Miss Mabel Ryther of Bondsville and Miss Bessie Royce of Palmer, ranking in the order named, though there was less than two per cent difference in their standing. Miss Stone will assist in the school in the Depot village, Miss Twiss at Three Rivers, Miss Ryther at Bondsville and Miss Royce at Thorndike. The second examination for admission to the high school was held Tuesday, and there were 13 to try, 11 of whom passed. This makes the entering class at the high school 22, of whom only five are conditioned, and those only on minor points.

Editor of the Journal:—Allow me through your columns to call attention to a valuable and timely book, entitled, "The Sphere of the State, or the People as a Body-Politic," by Prof. Frank S. Hoffman of Union College, just published by the Putnams. The book, desirable as it is from the consideration given to certain special problems of the present and the near future, has a peculiar local interest from the fact that Prof. Hoffman in 1873-74, while a student at Amherst, resided in Palmer about two years, a part of the time in the family of Mr. Fisherdick, and identified himself closely with the religious interests of the town. Prof. Hoffman writes in a clear but comprehensive style, adapted to both interest and instruct the average citizen. He defines the true conception of the state and ably discusses its relations to government, education, property, corporations, transportation, labor, taxation, money, criminals, the poor, the government of cities, the family, the church, and its relation to other states. The book is a tastefully bound volume of 275 pages, sells for $1.50, and can be obtained at the book-store of O. P. Allen.

Rev. G. W. Andrews, wife and daughter of Dalton, and Rev. W. F. English of South Windsor, Ct., have been spending a part of the week with Rev. and Mrs. F. F. Jenkins.

THREE RIVERS.

Mrs. G. E. Dalrymple is visiting friends in Granby.

Harry Newell spent a few days in Chicopee last week.

Mrs. Cheney has returned from Saco, Me., after an extended absence.

Several from this place went on the excursion to Saratoga yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Brown are spending a vacation in Philadelphia.

Irving Calkins of Springfield visited friends in town Wednesday.

Miss Addie Walker of Belchertown visited friends here Wednesday.

Mrs. O. B. Sikes is at present staying in Ludlow with her sister, who is ill.

George Adams, who was principal of the grammer school last year, has resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Upham are expected to return from Block Island next Monday evening.

Mrs. Haynes has returned after an extended vacation spent in Springfield and vicinity.

In consequence of Monday being Labor Day, the Palmer Mill will be shut down during the day.

Miss Rosa Blanchett intends, in the near future, to enter the French-American College in Springfield.

The members of the Sunday school of the Baptist church intend to hold a picnic at Forest Lake next Monday.

A number of Miss Ethel Herrin's little friends gave her a birthday party last evening, and had a very enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. Avery and family intend to leave here to-morrow, with the intention of spending a few weeks in Moretown, Vt.

Charlie White has passed the examination to the high school, and is the only person who goes there from Three Rivers this year.

Miss Della Gage, Miss Alice Cooley and Mrs. S. T. Blair of Springfield, with Mrs. Fay of Fitchburg, have been the guests of Mrs. F. A. Ruggles this week.

Mr. Van Tassel of Palmer has moved his family to this place, and is occupying the tenement which was made vacant some time ago by Mr. and Mrs. Gannon.

A large number from here intend to take the opportunity which the excursion on the Ware River road affords to-morrow to spend next Sunday at Block Island.

Rev. E. C. Weeks of the Baptist church will preach his first anniversary sermon next Sunday morning, and will take as a subject in the evening: "The Coming Morning." This will be a sermon on the signs of the times, and Mr. Weeks hopes to make it interesting for a large audience.

The road over Baptist Hill toward Willoughby Pastures has been fenced up by the selectmen this week because of its unsafe condition. The road is very steep at best, and has been so badly cut up by the heavy loads of logs hauled over it by Keefe Bros. as to make it unsafe for light vehicles.

The grove meetings at Red Bridge will open this season as usual, on September 4th, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Simondson of Springfield. Plans are being made to have several prominent speakers during the week, and many people here intend to be present at some of the enthusiastic services which are sure to be held during the time.

John Ruggles had a narrow escape from being drowned one day this week. As the little fellow was playing on the brink of the river he took a notion to get into a boat which was chained near where he was diverting himself with a fishing rod, and loosing the chain he began to drift into deep water without any oars. Fortunately one of his sisters, who was going in the direction of the stream to look for him, was alarmed by his cries, and hurrying home told her parents, who soon went to rescue their dangerously located and badly frightened boy.

Thomas Moynahan, who has been sick with consumption at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Griffin, died last Friday and was buried Sunday.

On Thursday as C. B. Pasco was going through Mr. Sullivan's woods his dog treed a wildcat, which on seeing Mr. Pasco jumped down and ran into the thick underbrush and disappeared.

The many friends of Mrs. Ida Pasco will be sorry to learn that she is sick with consumption at her father's home in Connecticut, where she went from here in the spring to take a rest. She has worked for the Boston Duck Co. a number of years.

E. J. Fuller and wife and son Philip of Forest Lake, with Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Rood of Springfield and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Kendall of Thorndike, have made up a party and will start for an outing in Portland, Me., next Tuesday, to be gone a week.

House Burned.

The house belonging to Mrs. Patrick Breen, on the Thorndike road, was burned yesterday afternoon about 1.30 o'clock. The fire is thought to have started from a defective chimney. The barn was saved, but the house was totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1000, partly covered by insurance.

Thorndikes 12—Bondsvilles 8.

The fourth game of the series between the Bondsville and Thorndike ball nines was played here last Saturday before fully 1200 people, and was won by the Thorndikes. The first three innings looked pretty gloomy for Thorndike, the score at the first of the fourth being 6 to 0 in favor of the home team. Flemming was put into the box and gave the Bondsvilles only two runs in the remaining six innings, and by good headwork and the terrific batting of the Thorndikes in the sixth and eighth innings they pulled out of a very small hole and won the game. The features of the game were the fine playing and base running of Vigneaux, the catching of Whiting and Gay's throw from center, cutting Sullivan's run off at the plate. Key did fine work for the home team, as did Bridgman on first base. Crane, who pitched a few innings for the Thorndikes, was put out of the game in the fourth inning, after being an easy mark for the Bondsvilles. There was much betting on the game.

THORNDIKE.

Mrs. Julia Kelly and Miss Lillian Connelly of Holyoke, with Miss Mary Connelly of Northampton, are the guests of Miss Nellie Coffee of Church street.

Misses Maggie and Mary Cronin of Groton, who have been the guests of Mrs. William Sullivan for several days, returned to their home on Monday.

The choir at St. Mary's church will resume duty next Sunday, after a vacation of several weeks. Services will begin at 10 a. m., instead of 10.30 as heretofore.

The schoolrooms in this village have been newly painted during the past two weeks, and will be in readiness for the fall term which commences next Tuesday.

The village was again deserted on Saturday, nearly everyone in town going to Bondsville to see the ball game. Some came back with pocketbooks filled with Bondsville money.

Rev. E. B. Blanchard occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church again Sunday after a vacation of three weeks, spent in the northern part of New Hampshire and Vermont.

Orders for goods are coming in fast, and the Thorndike Co. is making large shipments. If the water supply was more abundant it is said that working hours might be somewhat increased.

Mr. Slattery, who lives on the Ware road, while burning brush on Saturday allowed the fire to get beyond his control and it went into a woodlot near by, where it burned till Sunday, doing considerable damage.

The excursion to Block Island takes place to-morrow. A special train will leave here at 7.19 a. m. The fare for the round trip is $1.50, and quite a number from this place will avail themselves of the cheap rate and attend.

Next Monday being Labor Day, the majority of the young people will attend the Diocesan Field Day at Holyoke. Others will attend the bicycle races at Palmer, while Forest Lake will no doubt attract the usual number.

The beamers and weavers played a game of base ball on Tuesday afternoon, which resulted in a victory for the beamers by a score of 27 to 14. The features were the batting and first base playing of D. Fleming and Parker Shea.

If the party who took the shawl owned by Mrs. John Molloy on Wednesday afternoon from her lot on the Ware road will return it there will be no trouble, otherwise it may result in bringing the parties into court to answer to the charge of theft.

Miss Mary Ryan, who died at Three Rivers on Monday, was at one time a resident of this place, and her many friends were much surprised to learn of her death. The funeral took place Tuesday, and was largely attended by people from this village.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Chewdonnet have the sympathy of many friends in their deep trouble, having buried two children within a week with the whooping cough. Several children are down with the malady in the village, but these two cases are the only ones which have resulted seriously as yet.

Paymaster A. B. C. Deming Resigns.

A. B. C. Deming, who has been employed as paymaster in the mills here for about seven years, severed his connection with the company to-day.

A Close Call.

What might have been a bad accident, and which would perhaps have resulted seriously to three occupants of a carriage, en route for Ware, occurred about 9.30 Saturday night. The party was coming from the direction of Three Rivers, and had crossed the railroad crossing near the No. 1 mill safely, but collided with the corner of the iron bridge with such force as to free the horse from the carriage. The animal ran wildly up the Bondsville road, but was captured soon. The occupants of the carriage were uninjured, and the only damage done was to the carriage and harness. The electric light near the Congregational church was out, as usual; had it been lighted it would have perhaps prevented the accident as, it throws sufficient light across both bridges to enable people coming through the village to see where they are. The driver says that the light at the top of the hill blinded him when he got near the crossing; it seemed pitch dark, and before they were aware of their whereabouts they struck the bridge.

Base Ball

BONDSVILLES 8—THORNDIKES 6.

The Thorndikes and Bondsvilles met here on Friday for the third time, and played a fine game, which was interesting from the start. Newell of Orange was in the box for the visitors, and pitched a good game. Driscoll officiated for the home team and pitched a winning game, but was poorly supported. Key played a good game for the visitors. The features were the fine fielding of Gay and the hitting of the home team in general. The poor fielding and the wild throwing lost the game for the Thorndikes. Much money changed hands over the result. The score.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Manager Farrill has lost his Mascot.

Two and two—who gets the rubber?

Vigneaux is a fine all-round player, and a splendid base runner.

Andy was in his old form on Friday, and pitched a winning game.

It seems everyone had an off day on Friday; errors were of no account.

Crane did not show up very well. One would never have thought he was the once famous pitcher for the New Yorks.

Gay is getting to be quite a hitter, and his batting average is first-class. Sugrue is generally finding the ball for a three-base hit each game.

Riley played a hard game on Saturday, and to insinuate that he sold the game is not doing him justice, after playing such winning ball for the Bondsvilles.

The game would have been lost if Fleming had not been put into the box in the fourth inning. He pulled them out of a very small hole, and saved many dollars for the Thorndike people.

The boys say that it was a wonder that the ball which was thrown to Sugrue at first base, and by which the Bondsville scorer gave Donovan a home run, was not found in the pocket of the pool table.

Three events in Saturday's game which pleased Manager Farrill—When Fleming struck out Key, where Gay shut Sullivan's run out at the plate from center field, and where the Thorndikes hit the ball in the 6th and 8th innings.

The last game of the series between the Bondsvilles and the Thorndikes will take place at Palmer to-morrow, and the hottest kind of a contest between the rival clubs may be expected. Each has won two games, and this will be the decisive one.

Connie McAuliff fractured his collar bone last Friday in the game between the Bondsvilles and Thorndikes while running to first base, being thrown to the ground and striking heavily on his shoulder. Dr. Holbrook set the fracture, and he is getting along as well as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stacy and daughter, and Mrs. Hiram Stacy are taking a carriage drive through Connecticut. Among the places they will visit is General Putnam's wolf den.

Thompson Bros. have the contract for removing the dirt and rebuilding the stone wall which recently caved in between the houses of Mrs. Harriet Fenton and Dr. George E. Fuller.

An invalid lady living at North Monson, who by reason of her infirmity had not been in the village for twenty-four years, was treated to a ride one day last week by one of the King's Daughters.

James M. Curran, principal of the high school in Portland, Me., who with his family has been spending his vacation with Mrs. Frank Maguire, Mrs. Curran's sister, left Monday for Portland.

Mrs. Ann Carney died suddenly at her home on Bridge street Tuesday afternoon at the age of 47. She leaves three children, the oldest being 14. The funeral was held at St. Patrick's church Thursday morning.

Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, returned last Friday evening from her home in Springfield. Miss Wood and her sister, Miss Edith, are housekeeping in Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich's tenement on Lincoln street.

A peculiar misprint occurred in the advertisement of G. L. Fuller last week, making it appear that he was offering shoes at higher prices than prevailed earlier in the season, when it should have stated that $1.25, $1.50 and $1.60 misses' russet shoes are all marked at the same price, $1.

The topic for the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor Sunday evening is "Worldliness in the Church; the Church in the World;" John 11: 13-17, 16: 11-17. George L. Keeney will have charge of the meeting at the Methodist church, and Alonzo M. Beebe at the Congregational church.

The funeral of Mrs. Emily Stewart Woodard, who died of consumption Friday, at her home in Boston, took place Sunday afternoon at the residence of her brother, Julius Stewart, Rev. W. H. Marble officiating. Mrs. Woodard was 36 years of age, and a native of Wales, where her early life was spent. Before her marriage she lived for several years in Monson.

Lack of water is becoming a serious matter all through the village. Heimann and Lichten, who have been dependent for three or four weeks on two wells which were put in by Merrick & Fay for just such an emergency, report that these wells are getting low, still they hope to be able to run their shop for the present. By the way, they are turning out a very fine line of felt hats in about a dozen different colors.

The eighth annual Chaffee reunion was held Wednesday on Flynt Park, with about 150 persons present from Monson, Palmer, Hampden, Enfield, Springfield, Stafford, Suffield, Crystal Lake, Hartford and New York. The company gathered in the forenoon, and after dinner a very interesting genealogical address was given by Jonathan F. Morris of Hartford, followed by election of officers for the coming year. A vote of thanks was given to Hon. William N. Flynt for the use of the park, after which it was voted to meet at the same place next year. The company was loud in its praises of the park, saying that what nature had not done for it Mr. Flynt had. The presiding officer was Frank Chaffee of Stafford.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Morris and daughter, Miss Louise, arrived home from their Raymond excursion last Saturday. Miss Alice Morris stopped at Minneapolis; Edward F., Jr. stopped in Worcester. Their trip was an exceedingly pleasant one, and Mr. Morris speaks very entertainingly of it. He says that the hard times are felt much more in the West, and particularly on the Pacific coast, than here; that empty stores and tenements are seen everywhere. The Alaska trip covered about twelve days. In the vicinity of the glaciers the mercury is down to 27°, while outside of those localities it is at about 60°. Ice stores itself near the glaciers and good clear ice can be had for the getting at any season. The stay in the Yellowstone National Park was for one week. It is as cold there as Alaska, but for a different reason. In the park it is the high altitude, in Alaska the north latitude, where the climate is such that a snow storm is liable to come at any moment. There are no attempts at cultivation. There are a great many people in the Park this year, especially campers, who are in parties of ten to fifteen persons and stay about ten days. They catch fish, but as there are no other means of supply in the Park they have to carry all other provisions. Geysers are constantly bursting forth, and there is plenty of hot water for all uses. The hotels, which are owned by a corporation called the Yellowstone Park Association, are comfortable, and the fare is good considering that every thing has to be carried in. No one is allowed to take life of any kind except fish by hook. Two companies of U. S. troops are stationed there to protect curiosities and game, and it is expected that under this system there will be a large increase in animal life. A large part of the reservation has never been explored, as the mountains are so densely wooded as to make it a difficult matter to go through them. There is but one way in and out,—a stage trip of 15 miles,—which is similar in shape to a tennis racket. Cinnibar, the terminus of a branch of the Northern Pacific railroad, is seven miles from Mammoth Hot Springs, the first stopping place.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. Jonathan Webber is visiting at Franklin.

Louis S. Allen and family have moved to Ashburnham.

Mrs. George Crane and niece are guests of Mrs. M. H. Baker.

Mrs. W. A. Jones has left for a visit at Manchester, N. H.

Bradford Homer, with son and daughter, have returned to St. Louis.

Miss Lilly Warren and Miss Cruyer are spending a few weeks in town.

John N. Hubbard and family leave for Chicago, their home, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Boardman and son are guests of George M. Hitchcock.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Sherman are rejoicing over a son born to them.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Miss Lucy Shaw is at home for a short stay.

The continued drouth is seriously felt in this vicinity.

Peter Prou, Sr., is visiting friends in northern Vermont.

J. J. Boynton and wife of Brookfield were in town Sunday.

Nelson Andrew of Chicopee is stopping in town for a short time.

Frank Allen is soon to engage in the manufacture of ice cream.

Miss Gertie Holland, who has been dangerously ill, is recovering.

Miss Nellie Lawrence has returned from a week's stay at Provincetown.

Mrs. Charles Ward and children of Springfield called on friends in town Tuesday.

Mrs. Charles Bullock has returned from a two weeks' visit with Springfield friends.

Messrs. Allen and Wight of Wellesley were the guests of Mrs. W. H. Allen Sunday.

Mrs. J. L. Austin gave a dancing party Wednesday evening, which was much enjoyed.

Mr. Cadmus and family and Miss Lucy Suchon of Bayonne, N. J., are the guest of Mrs. A. B. Newell.

A young Dane employed by N. S. Powers has a curious pet in the shape of a black snake four feet long, which he handles with all the grace of a female snake charmer.

HOLLAND.

Charles F. Roper sold his mare last week to a Mr. Brown of Brimfield for $200.

H. E. Wallis has entered his herd of Devons, also several swine, at the New England Fair at Worcester, Sept. 4 5-6-7.

The taxes in town are $20 on $1000, the unusually large per cent being caused by a vote of the town last spring to cancel a debt on which it has been paying interest for years. The largest tax payers are non-residents.

The water is getting very low, not only in the ponds and rivers, but the springs and brooks are drying up. Some farmers are compelled to draw water nearly a mile in barrels to water their cattle. Crops have suffered severely for want of rain, and in some places will prove almost a failure.

For the last five or six weeks there has been an unusual number of visitors in town, even for the vacation season, including persons from several of the cities and towns in the state and out, who have apparently enjoyed the hospitality of their friends and relatives, who are always glad to see them.

Fishing has been indulged in the present summer to a greater extent than for a long time before. Most of the surrounding towns have furnished large parties of fishermen, who have endeavored to the best of their ability to reduce the number of the finny tribe in the ponds and river, and have succeeded to a great extent. A large number of black bass have been caught, some weighing between four and five pounds. Many choose the sport of nocturnal fishing, staying out all night and carrying off in the morning whole baskets full of pouts.

WEST WARREN.

C. O. Walker and children spent a few days in Boston last week.

Mrs. Rufus Baker is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Susan Smith, in Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Rood and children spent Sunday with Mr. Rood's mother on Chapel street.

The Junior Epworth League held a lawn party at the parsonage Wednesday afternoon from 4 until 7.

Joseph Faneuf's children, Joseph, Jr., John and Rosia, are all very sick with typhoid fever.

Samuel C. Bowdoin, an old resident of this town, died at his home in Limerick, Me., last week Friday.

Rev. William Dockham exchanged pulpits last Sunday with Rev. A. M. Osgood of the M. E. church in Ware.

Frank Bliss of Warren played the organ in the M. E. church last Sunday, in the absence of C. O. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Reed spent the day Tuesday at Flynt's Park, Monson, at a family gathering.

Incendiary Fire.

The house of Mrs. Bridget Connor, on the corner of Main and Summer streets, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Mrs. Connor was awakened about one o'clock by smoke pouring into the room, and found the woodshed and main part of the house in flames. The occupants had just time to escape, without even securing any clothing. The building was insured for $1000 and the furniture for $500.

LUDLOW.

David Trombley is on the sick list.

Mrs. Peter Morin is on the sick list.

Mr. Bly has returned home after a few weeks' vacation.

Miss Mary Trombley is slowly recovering from her recent illness.

The King's Daughters of the Center held a peach supper Wednesday evening.

The mills had to run on short time this week, on account of a scarcity of water.

Many of the oldest residents say that they never before saw it so dry as it is this year.

Adelbert E. Corey has sold his land and buildings to Lewis W. Chapin for about $250.

The Christian Endeavor society will hold a social in the vestry of the church next week.

Two bicyclists from here are entered in the Palmer races Labor Day—Goodrow and Craw.

Mrs. Keith and daughter Lillian have returned home after a visit with friends in New Bedford.

Alexander Birnie started Thursday evening for Indianapolis, where he will enter the naval academy.

Mrs. George Mackintosh and Mrs. James Henderson have returned from Scotland, after a few months' vacation.

Rev. Mr. Knight, from the School for Christian Workers, preached in the Center Congregational church last Sunday.

The Ludlows defeated a ball team from Chicopee Falls last Saturday by a score of 20 to 17. The batteries were: Ludlow, Bergeron and Ducate; Chicopee Falls, Mason and Coquette. The Ludlows will cross bats with the East Longmeadows next Saturday.

BELCHERTOWN.

Clarence Scott spent Sunday in Rutland, Vt.

The Guild will hold an entertainment next Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Longley are spending a few days in Boston.

Lawyer Israel T. Cowles of Detroit, Mich., is the guest of his mother, Mrs. J. L. Cowles.

Mrs. Mason of Topeka, Kan., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Miller, on the Enfield road.

Cephas Hyde is suffering from an attack of paralysis, which has affected his lower limbs so that he is confined to the house.

Charles Walker has bought the place owned by the late Jonas Holland for $1500. The sale does not include the wood land.

Rev. V. C. Harrington is expected home from his vacation this week, and will occupy the pulpit at the Congregational Sunday.

The creamery association has declared the dividend for July; 116,100 spaces of cream were bought, the price per space being 3½ cents. After the sale of considerable cream 15,092 pounds of butter were made from the remainder. The shrinking in the cream for the last month was more than usual, owing to the drouth.

Mrs. Julia L. Hazen died at the home of her son, D. L. Hazen, last Sunday after a short illness. Mrs. Hazen was the widow of Frederick Hazen, and was 86 years old. She was born at Feeding Hills, and was a descendant of Gov. William Bradford. Forty years of her life were spent in Springfield, where she was one of the oldest members of the North Congregational church. She was an earnest Christian woman, and will be much missed by her many friends. The funeral was held Tuesday morning at the home of F. S. Hazen in Springfield.

S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

We wish to thank our friends and customers for their very generous patronage since our removal into the Caryl Block. It has been very gratifying to us to find that our endeavors to sell CHEAPER THAN OTHER STORE IN MASSACHUSETTS have been appreciated, and we shall endeavor in the future to break all records for selling goods cheap. No business house will sell goods cheaper than we do if we know it, for there are none who can afford to do it; our expenses are the smallest, we buy from first hands, take all the discounts to be had, and do not wish to get rich in a year. Our percentage of profit is less than any house has ever heard of, and taking these facts into consideration, who is there that can compete with our prices?

We shall endeavor to have in stock everything, but should we not have just the article, will obtain it for you in a day's time. We would respectly invite an inspection of our many departments and a comparison of prices with any other house either in city or country.

Yours respectfully,

S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

Remember that we have got all the goods affected by the Tariff reduced to the new basis. Much better to face the new conditions immediately than to shirk and keep putting it off.

Every cent of reduction that the new law makes possible you shall have at once.

School suits for boys are all ready. Just fit for the hard knocks and general grief they will soon be subject to. Can't get them too strong.

Get them strong enough, so they won't rip, and wear out at the elbows, knees, and seat. They won't with the SANDOW, the strongest boys' suit ever made. We give a new suit for every suit that does.

The SANDOW is strictly all wool, silk sewed, taoed seamed, has double elbows, knees and seat, and riveted buttons; comes in ten styles in light and dark mixtures at $5 the suit.

Boys' combination school suit, coat and two pair of pants, at $2.50 the suit.

Boys' strictly all wool combination school suits, coat and two pair of pants, at $5. Any mixture.

Boys' strictly all wool long-pant school suits, fit boys 14 to 19 years, at $6.50 up to $10 the suit.

Boys' school knee pants, 4 to 15 years, medium and heavy weight, 38 cents to $1.25 each.

Gold! Gold! Gold!

The most accessable of all the Cripple Creek Gold Mines. The workings are in the town limits, thereby making labor, transportation and supplies cheaper and more practical. Every indication points to a great boom in Cripple Creek Gold Stocks. An opportunity of this nature is not offered to investors indefinitely. As soon as sufficient funds are acquired to complete certain developments all stock will be withdrawn from the market. A small block may be a constant source of revenue to its owner for years to come. This flattering proposition will safely bear the most careful investigation. Write any expert, bank or miner in Cripple Creek Gold District. It will reflect credit to the Camp, our Company, and be exceedingly profitable to yourself.

The Ela Helean Gold Mining Company

of Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek, Colorado. Capital one million. Equally divided into 1,000,000 shares, par value $1.00, fully paid and forever non-assessable. All dividends, if any, will be declared on every share. Incorporated under the laws of the State of Colorado. 280,000 still remain in the treasury, 80,000 shares are now offered to the investment public at three cents per share, proceeds of all sales to be used exclusively in development work at the mines. The Company are in possession of a twenty years municipal franchise to mine under the streets and alleys of the town of Cripple Creek, being directly in the heart of the richest gold producing district in the world. The Company own mineral bearing lots scattered throughout the entire town, and have also acquired twenty year leases to extract ores from under nearly 50 lots. In the Company's workings an eight foot vein has been opened up from which assays have been taken running from $12.00 to $500.00, and many specimens showing free gold. The property is under the entire management of Mr. J. C. Dickey, formerly manager of the famous Summit Company and Yankee Girl, the latter which sold nearly one million.

$ 3.00 buys 100 shares.
30.00 buys 2,000 shares.
300.00 buys 10,000 shares.

Half cash required on blocks of 10,000, balance in sixty days at 6% int. The officers are as follows:

FRANK H. PETTINGELL, President.
J. C. DICKEY, Vice President.

Just a word in regard to Tapestry Carpets.

The new goods are in and the busy trade we have had in that department goes to show us that people appreciate the very low prices. 50, 62½ and 75 cents a yard, and the handsomest line of patterns we ever had the pleasure of showing.

Look at our Velvet Carpets, $1 a yard and laid. Best goods ever shown for that money.

First floor.

We propose to close out all the figured muslins we have in stock. Remember we are selling them at half price. Pieces contain enough for one, two and three windows, and we cut any length required. This is an opportunity every lady should improve to procure at such a small cost one of the most desirable goods for window draperies in the market.

50 cent goods at 25 cents, 37½ goods at 18 cents. All the latest patterns and colors.

PIAZZA FURNITURE.

Some excellent bargains can be picked up all through our piazza stock. Patterns being closed out at a great sacrifice. Good style piazza chairs and rockers for 75 cents. Large size rockers for $1.50.

OFFICE FURNITURE.

Don't forget our elegant line of office furnishings. Quality always talks, but when you get superior quality at the price of cheaply made goods, then the dealer talks.

Our 50 inch roll top desk, made of selected oak and polished in the best manner, for $22.50, has no equal. Our line of superior flat top desks suits every customer. They have only to be seen to be appreciated.

Office chairs of every description.

IRON AND BRASS RODS.

All kinds of iron beds finished in white enamel from $6 up. A full line of handsome all brass bedsteads from $18 up.

Dressing cases of all kinds to match above.

Has Her Hands Full —the woman who won't use Pearline— her hands full of work, and her head full of worry. Suits herself. If she'd rather work hard, and keep everlastingly at it, it is nobody else's business. But that isn't all of it. The clothes that she washes, with her careless, tiresome, rub, rub, rub, are soon worn out. That's your business, if she washes your clothes. It will pay you to look after it. Pearline saves them.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 324 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Right Arm Paralyzed!

Saved from St. Vitus Dance.

"Our daughter, Blanche, now fifteen years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. We feared St. Vitus dance, and tried the best physicians, with no benefit. She has taken three bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine and has gained 31 pounds. Her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid."

The Candidate.

When the Junebug is a-hummin',
And the bumblebee is bummin'
And a-flashin' of his yellow tail across the garden walk;
Then the simperin' candidate
Is a-comin' sure as fate,
You can tell him by his greetin' an' the honey of his talk.

Oh, he'll talk o' crops an' weather,
Till he gets you by the feather,
Then he'll tell about the money kings up there in old Wall street;
How the country's goin' to ruin,
An' the trouble that's a-brewin'
Till you think he is a oracle, he talks so wise and sweet.

Then he'll talk about the tariff—
How the country will have war if
We don't do something pretty quick about free wool and sich,
An' in language well selected,
Tells how, if he's elected,
He will legislate so wisely that the county'll get rich.

Ah, the mockin' bird is singin',
An' the woods is all a-ringin'
With the music of the whippoorwill a-soundin' soon an' late;
But the land is filled with sadness,
And there is no piece or gladness,
For the candidate has come to stay; his horse is at the gate!

"Will—"Why do you always carry those corks with you when you go to call on your fiancée?" Jack—"Well, you see, she lives in a flat, and I use them for stopping up the speaking tubes when I am bidding her good night in the vestibule."—New York Herald.

Husband—"Our bills for household expenses are as large as ever. I told you to reduce them." Wife—"I did. I took from $10 to $20 off each one, but the tradesmen acted so about it that I thought you'd better go around and reduce them yourself."—New York Weekly.

"Harold," she murmered, as her head pressed against his stalwart bosom. "Harold, do I hear the beating of your fond heart?" "Not exactly," said Harold, blushing slightly; "I didn't mean to tell you, but you see I'm temporarily obliged to carry one of those $3 watches."—Chicago Record.

Mrs. Henpeck—"On the 25th of next month we will celebrate our silver wedding. Don't you think we ought to kill the fatted calf and ask in the neighbors?" Mr. Henpeck—"Kill the fatted calf! I don't see how the unfortunate animal is to blame for what happened twenty-five years ago."—Tit-Bits.

Mrs. Innit—"Ethel, that young Mr. Spark's attentions to you are becoming quite noticeable. He comes here every night in the week excepting Saturday. Do you know his intentions?" Ethel Innit (demurely)—"Yes; he said he intended coming Saturday night, too, after this week."—Puck.

Banks—"Rivers, would you mind giving me one of your cigars?" Rivers—"I shall be delighted, old fellow. Such a request, coming from a man as fastidious as you are, is a compliment." Banks—"One will do. Thanks. I want to smoke it when the assessor calls on me."—Chicago Tribune.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

From "A Ballad of Crossing the Brook."

Oh, it was a dainty maid that went a-Maying in the morn,
A dainty, dainty maiden of degree.
The ways she took were merry and the ways she missed forlorn;
And the laughing water tinkled to the sea.

* * * * * *

She was fain to cross the brook, was the dainty, dainty maid;
But first she lifted up her elfin eyes
To see if there were cavalier or clown a-near to aid—
And the water bubbles blinked in surprise.

The brook hared its pebbles to persuade her dainty feet,
But the dainty, dainty maid was not content,
She had spied a simple country lad (for dainty maid unmeet)
And the sly water twinkled as it went.

Now, that simple lad had in him all the makings of a man;
And he stammered, "I had better lift you over!"
Said the dainty, dainty maid, "Do you really think you can?"
And the water hid its laughter in the clover.

* * * * * *

He reached the other side; he set down the dainty maid;
But he trembled so he couldn't say a word.
Then the dainty, dainty maid—"Thank you, sir! Good day!" she said—
And the water-bubbles chuckled as they heard.

THE SURPRISE PARTY.

"There's going to be a good hard frost to-night," said Deacon Cummings as he pulled the ragged buffalo robe over his knees and touched up old Dick with the extreme point of his whiplash.

"It is cold," asserted Clara, her blue eyes intently fixed on the evening star.

The Deacon was grim and hard featured, with a nose that reminded one of Cape Cod on the map, and a complexion like a badly tanned piece of leather.

Clara was plump and pretty, with skin like a rose leaf, long-lashed eyes, and a dimple which no one had ever been able exactly to locate.

"Hey!" said the Deacon. "What's that air in your lap, Clara? A bandbox? I didn't buy nothin' that would likely be packed in a bandbox."

"No, I know you didn't," said Clara. "Its a bonnet for mother. There's the surprise party, you know, at the parsonage to-night, and I am going to trim up something decent for her to wear."

"A—bonnet!" The deacon jerked the reins in a way that had nearly collided Old Dick with the churchyard wall. "Ain't your mother got a bonnet? It does seem, Clara, as if money burned a hole in you young folkses pocket."

"Got a bonnet? Of course she has got a bonnet!" retorted she. "The same she's had for five years, until I'm sick of the brown satin bows and the black poppies on it. Mother's a real pretty old lady, father, or she would be if you'd give her a chance."

"And who's to pay for all this finery?" demanded the deacon after an ominous silence.

"It isn't finery, father, it's only bare decency; and I'm going to pay for it," said Clara.

"Hump!" grunted the deacon. "I'm glad you feel so rich. I don't. Gee up, Dick, or I'll let you know I'm here, ye lazy, idle creetur!"

"The bonnet was only fifty cents—I couldn't let mother go to the surprise party with that horrid old brown thing!"

"I don't myself see no occasion for goin' gallivantin' around to surprise parties—the hull kit and boodle of us I mean! Of course folks will expect to see you there, bein's I'm a deacon."

"And everybody else will be there," quickly retorted Clara, "and I don't mean mother shall stay at home. She gets so few chances to see anything or anybody! There! you tipped over the vinegar jug, father, with Dick cantering in that absurd fashion. I knew something would happen."

"Whoa, Dick—whoa!" bawled the old man. "There ain't nothin' broke, luckily. I didn't realize we were goin' so fast, an' the roads is froze pretty stiff. You see I'd calkilated to carry a nice bag o' dried apples for my share, and if mother goes—"

"I dare say we can find something for mother to carry," said she. "I shall take a ten-dollar gold piece. My salary was paid last week, and I shall never forget how good Parson Potter used to be when I was a child."

"Ten dollars!" echoed the deacon. "Be my ears a-deceiving of me?"

"Yes, ten dollars. It's my own, isn't it, to spend or to keep, as I please?"

"It's a downright flingin' away of money!" gasped the deacon. Is the gal crazy?"

"Here we are," cried Clara joyously, springing over the wheel.

Mrs. Cummings hurried, smiling, to the door; but the deacon looked sour enough as he drove around to the barn.

"I hadn't thought of going," faltered Mrs. Cummings.

"But you must go, mother," said Clara, with the bow of ribbon twisted around her finger.

"I hain't nothin' to take."

"There's the loaf of plumcake that you baked for Sunday's tea. Nothing in the world could be nicer."

"I've got a piece o' blue gingham—three yards—that I hain't made up into aprons yet. Would that do?" wistfully questioned the poor woman.

"It would be just lovely!" protested Clara, and then she confined to her mother the secret of the ten dollar gold piece.

"You see," said she, "I feel somehow as if I were paying a debt to these dear old people, who have worked so hard all these years for so pitiful a salary. And I've put the money in the little flat shopping bag—just like the one I gave you, dear—and I shall slip it into Mrs. Potter's hand. Won't she be surprised when she comes to open it?"

Clara Cummings, however, had an auditor to their sweet filial confidence of whom she little knew.

"It's sinful," said the deacon to himself—"absolutely a temptin' o' Providence! Ten-dollar gold piece! Ginghams! Loaves o' cake, not to say nothin' of the dried apples I was calkilatin' to fetch. I—don't—see—"

Suddenly the deacon's dull eyes brightened. He came to a dead standstill on the stairs. The deacon had an idea.

Going softly to his wife's bureau, he abstracted the little leather reticule which Clara had given her on her birthday, and quietly substituted it for Clara's, lying on the pillow of her bed, first, however, placing in its outside pocket a squarely folded one-dollar bill.

"That'll be a great deal more suitable," thought he. "The bags is just alike and Clara won't know the difference. And I'll keep this 'ere gold piece towards the shinglin' of the barn ruff. Goodness knows, I need money a great deal more than Parson Potter does, and Clara ain't no business to be so wasteful and extravagant."

And he went down stairs chuckling softly to himself.

"Ain't supper ready?" said he. "What! cold corned beef and parsnips? And biscuit! There wan't no need of anything but bread and cheese, seein' we're goin' to have a slap-up supper to the parsonage. Here, Clara, put this meat on the shelf for breakfast to-morrow mornin'. And set them preserves back in the closet. Hump! we'd all fetch up in the poor house if we went ahead in this fashion."

Mrs. Cummings would have enjoyed her evening at the parsonage if her husband had not glared so savagely at her new bonnet.

"Gloves, eh?" said he, as she climbed out of the wagon. "Squire Sillcock's wife don't wear no gloves. I'll go bail them cost fifty cents! Hump!"

"But they're mended, father—and I've had 'em a year!"

"Hump!" was all the reply he vouchsafed.

The parson, a withered little man in a threadbare suit, received his guests in a truly Christian spirit of resignation.

"I hope there'll be enough for them to eat," whispered he to his better half, a tall, pale woman.

"I guess likely there will," she responded. "Most of 'em has brought victuals—and very little else."

Everything was there. Plates and dishes which matched nothing; brass warming pans, of no use except for sensational decorations; tissue paper flowers and gruesome worsted work; painted banners and embroidered "splashers"; crotchet lace and damaged tidies; and as they kept arriving, Mrs. Potter's heart sank accordingly.

Presently she came to Clara with tears in her faded eyes.

"Oh, Clara!" she faltered, "how can I thank you enough for your kindness, your noble generosity? Mr. Potter is as grateful as I am, but his voice is simply gone. He can't speak."

The deacon hugged himself.

"I knowed that dollar bill would be a plenty," said he. "Bless me! there's that young Lawyer Harrison, the parson's nephew, goin' off to the study with Clara. He once had quite a notion for the gal. Wonder if they're goin' to company keepin' again? Kind o' singular he should be here to-night. Folks say it was him who brought the handsome, black walnut desk in parson's study. Strange how extravagant folks will be! 'Specially young folks. Eh! what's that they're sayin'? A fire—and in our direction! Now, I wonder if Clara didn't leave the taller candle burnin' in her room an' the cat knocked it over? And there was that hundred dollars Dr. Pettibone paid me for hay, in the house. Polly, look here," to his wife, "do you see that blaze? My eyes ain't as good as they was. Is it anywhere out our way?"

"La, no, deacon!" said his wife. "It's only little Peter Pettibone's bonfire."

"I'm glad on't," said the deacon. "Polly, what did you do with that hundred dollars I gave you to keep for me till I got a chance to bank it?"

Mrs. Cummings looked puzzled.

"I put it in my little reticule—the one Clara gave me," said she—"in the bureau drawer. Where are you goin', deacon?"

"I just remember that I did n't fodder the cows afore I started," said he. "I guess I'd jest better step home an' look arter 'em. Gimme the key of the bureau drawer, Polly."

On the outer doorstep he paused, however. There was a little buzz and hum of gossip in the air.

"Mrs. Potter has been cryin' ever since," said the Widow Parkiss. "Tears o' real, ginooine joy, you know. She somehow can't get over it. A hundred dollars! And from little Clara Cummings that teaches school over to Green's Mills. Folded away in a leather bag with steel trimmin's."

For a second or so the deacon stood motionless as the Sphinx. Then he went back into the house.

"I guess," muttered he, "there ain't no use in my goin' home to git them cattle foddered. I may as well stay and eat my supper. It's like to cost me enough."

Clara's face was radiant when she came to breakfast the next morning. "Father," said she, "two such strange things have happened! Aleck Harrison has asked me to be his wife, and," added Clara, "our two leather reticules somehow got mixed up last night and instead of the ten dollar gold piece I had intended, I gave Mrs. Potter mother's bag with a hundred dollars in it. Of course you intended it for a surprise, for the gold piece was gone out of the other bag. Father, dear, it was a noble act, and I shall explain it all to Mrs. Potter."

"No, don't do that!" precipitately uttered the deacon. "Just let things be as they are. I—I'd ruther not have no more said about it."

And he could not suppress a sepulchral groan.

"I always knew father had a generous heart," said Mrs. Cummings. "And the Potters deserve it, if anybody does. And now Clara, dear, we must talk over your wedding things."

"The least said, the soonest mended,' said Deacon Cummings. "One thing's plum sartin', though—you won't never catch me at no more surprise parties!"—Saturday Night.

THE BEST ADVICE NONE TOO GOOD.

The young man had just been admitted to practice at the bar, says Harper's Magazine, just as if the story were a new one. He sat within the bar inclosure, speculating upon the chances of clients coming to him, by mistake or otherwise. He heard his name spoken, and started to his feet.

"Mr. De Novo, the prisoner at the bar, is unable to employ counsel. Will you defend him?"

"Certainly, your Honor. May I retire with him to the bar office for a few moments' consultation?"

"Yes, sir; and give him your best advice."

A hardly perceptible sneer curled His Honor's lips as he uttered these last words, but the young man did not appear to notice it. Motioning for the prisoner to follow him, he passed into the other room. The door was closed and for ten minutes the lively clatter of many conversations filled the court room. Then the young man strolled into the room and dropped into a chair. The crier proclaimed: "Silence in the court room!" His Honor gazed upon the young man and said:

"Are you ready to proceed?"

"Yes, your Honor."

"Where's the prisoner?"

"I really don't know."

"What?"

"I'm sure I don't know."

"Mr. De Novo, will you explain what you mean by this most extraordinary conduct?"

"Your Honor told me to give him the best advice I could, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"May it please the court, when I consulted him I found he was guilty and had really no defense whatever. So, in pursuance of your Honor's so-kindly-meant suggestion, I advised him to drop out of the window and make himself as scarce as possible. I presume, in fact I know, that he followed the first part of my advice, and I believe he will also observe the rest of it."

The prisoner that was is still at large.

AN ELOPEMENT OF OLDEN TIMES.

A famous elopement interested Thomaston about 90 years ago. It was that of Sophia, the beautiful daughter of Dr. Isaac Bernard, and a young sea captain named James Sears. Dr. Bernard looked for a more aristocratic son-in-law and forbade all intercourse between the young couple, and when he found that his orders were disobeyed sent his daughter to some friends on Long Island with peremptory orders to watch her closely and never allow her, when dressed, beyond their watch and ward. When she went to bathe even, she was to leave her shoes and stockings and outer garments at the house. But Sophia was a girl of resources. She managed to see her young sailor and one day, clothed only in a wrap, without shoes or stockings, strolled off apparently to bathe, but in a few minutes was on board her lover's vessel on the way to Bangor. A part of the cargo was dry goods and, although she couldn't find anything better than a sail needle to work with, Sophia managed to make her wedding dress out of it before reaching Bangor, where she was married, after which they started on a long voyage. Although the stern parent hastened in pursuit, he didn't see his daughter again until she returned with a baby in her arms, and then the doctor thought fit to forgive and forget.—Rockland (Me.) Star.

CESARISM—"All gall is divided into three parts." The first division is situated in Indiana, and its name is Debs. The second part lies in Kentucky, and is known as Billy Breckenridge. SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

There is not the least mystery about Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol. The proprietors are perfectly willing to tell what it is made of. First, the oil, of course. Then

Ozone,

a very active form of Oxygen,

full of healthful, healing properties, and finally Guaiacol or purified creosote, made from the resin of beechwood. United in a compound pleasant to take and certain to be retained on the stomach, these three foes to disease cure consumption.

THE BREAKING OF RECORDS.

What Science Can Do in This Line when She Tries Hard.

Steamship captains, horse owners, bicycle-riders, and a lot of other people are making strenuous and untiring efforts to "break the record." The great public looks on at the game with good natured interest.

Once in awhile sober science does a little record-smashing on her own account. One of her latest and great achievements is the discovery and application of a process for artificially digesting food so that it is absorbed by the system, without imposing the least labor on a weak stomach. This food is called Paskola. It restores the debilitated, and gives fat to the thin because it is starchy. Only starches add real, solid lasting flesh to the body. Oils and fats don't and never will.

Mr. H. O. Mahood, of Emlenton, Venango Co., Pa., says: "I was so weak and run down I thought I would have to give up my business. I could not eat nor sleep. After one bottle of Paskola I began to gain at once and I have gained over fifteen pounds in less than three weeks and I now feel like a new man."

No wonder.

Mrs. S. C. Stonch, of Wellington and Dauphin streets, Philadelphia, writes: "I have been sick nearly three years, at times suffering terrible burning pains in my back and then cold in the lower part of my bowels. Sometimes I thought I should die. All this time I was constipated. When I first began to use Paskola I was tempted to give it up, thinking it would do me no good, because I had taken so much medicine. I feel Paskola beginning to do me good, and to-day I took a longer walk than I have been able to take for three years. I am much stronger. I am taking my fifth bottle of Paskola, and I eat almost everything now. I am 56 years old, and was always active, having worked hard."

Paskola may be bought of any reputable druggist. An interesting pamphlet on food and digestion will be mailed free on application to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

The Old Church.

The old church stood back from the road
In homely garb of gray,
And round its porch the merry boys,
Let out from school, would play.
Though some there were who hurried by,
As if they surely knew
That ghosts of sermons, grim and cold,
Were hov'ring in each pew.

Its steeple pointed to the sky,
Its shingled pomp and pride—
As if to say, "This is the way
Where good boys will abide."
The porch was loose and pulled away
From holy place within,
As some backsliders do, you know,
To roll once more in sin.

I used to dread that gray old church;
My feet scarce reached the floor
In those old high-back, narrow pews
That made us boys so sore,
Grandfather was a deacon there,
And wore big squeaky shoes;
He passed the great, long-handled box
To get the gospel's dues.

But when the sermon first began,
He'd cover up his face,
And sleep untill the "lastly" came—
Then wake up full of grace.
But every time I'd fall asleep,
As little boys will do,
Grandmother'd thump me on the head
And split my dreams in two.

I used to laugh to see 'Squire Jones—
He couldn't keep awake—
His bobbing up and down just seemed
Like fishing in a lake.
His head would go way down, and then
Jerk back with all its might;
It looked as if he'd caught a fish,
Or had a great, big bite.

The preacher used to preach two hours,
And pound the Bible, too,
And then to dinner go with us
And swell on chicken stew.
He always said grandmother's pies
Just fairly touched his heart,
And then he'd sit and stuff and eat
Enough to fill a cart.

And yet, sometimes, when tired of all,
The new-style sort of preach,
That talks of almost everything
Except what Christ did teach,
I wish I were a boy again,
In that old high-back pew,
Half sleeping, watch the preacher's twist
And hear his "lastly," too.

SHELLY OF MUSKRAT SWAMP.

"The Shelly of Muskrat Swamp" lay dying in his bunk. There was no doubt about that whatever to any ordinary dispassionate observer. But the one observer, the sole critic of the moribund poet was not dispassionate, and he refrained from obtruding the fact upon the notice of the sick youth. Outside the wind roared through the bush; the churned waters of the Ottawa beat against the wooden piers, their rough music calling upon the youthful Shelly to depart through the Valley of the Shadow, although he knew it not. Amid the howling of the wind, the hoarse roar of the flood, the crackle of the logs upon the hearth, came the silvery tones of the invalid reciting a moving composition which had occupied his attention for the last ten hours, that is, when he was not otherwise occupied in spitting blood or coughing. The one oil lamp on a wooden stool by his bunk gave out a smoky light through which the boy's eyes shone with unearthly brilliancy. Jake—Timber Jake, as he was popularly known among the gentlemen whom he distinguished by his jovial preference—sat on the only other stool which threw in different suggestions as to the originality of the poet's natural history, suggestions which the latter received with petulant impatience.

"There!" said the poet as he finished. "Stop your infernal row for a moment. What do you think of that, Jake?"

"Me not being a scholard," Jake replied in slow, simple tones, as he dropped the spoon on the ground, "me not bein' a scholard, you sez to me, ez between man and man, 'Jake, old pard, how does it pan out?' And I sez to you, me not bein' a scholard, but ez between man and man, 'bed rock every darned line of it! Bed rock!' Thar's things there like the singin' of robins in spring; thar's things there like the little flashes of light, when dragon-flies goes across the sunshine; thar's things there ez Shakespeare couldn't ha' done, or—or," he somewhat lamely added, "the Frisco Times, or any of them mud-colored ink-slingers over the river."

The youth's cheek flushed warmly at this whole-hearted eulogy. At the sound of it, he turned momentarily away from the entrance to the Valley of Death. Then he shook his head, and fell in the bunk with a sigh.

"Maybe, Jake," he said, "maybe; but for all that, the durned old editor at Marysville won't print 'em unless they're paid for at advertisin' rates. He sent back the last lot kinder sarcastic with his compliments to 'The Shelley of Muskrat Swamp,' and he wasn't takin' any stock in poetry or chipmunks just then."

An ominous frown gathered on Timber Jake's brow.

"Bein' a one-hoss concern, he nat'rally wouldn't know real high-toned poetry when he had it chucked under his nose, the flap-doodle eatin' slumgullion. You 'lowed just now ez you felt a sort of chill when his arnser came back?"

"A death chill, Jake. Timber rafting begun it, and that Marysville coon's sorter finished me up. Yes, I'm goin' under. Don't you hear the river callin', callin'—'Come away'?"

Jake did not affect to despise the gravity of the situation, but listened to the roar of the rapidly rising river against its banks.

"You don't feel?" he asked quietly, "you don't feel sorter called to wrestle it out 'stead of passin' in your checks?" There was a tremor in his voice which the other was quick to note.

"Not a durned wrastle," said the poet, falling back again, and letting his two sheets of manuscript rustle to the floor. "I'm played out, Jake—done for. Something'll bust in a day or two and finish me off. I'd have liked to see this yer chipmunk foolishness in print before I vamoosed the ranch; but another night'll finish me, and I shan't get a chance of bein' even with that Marysville chap. I'd die easier if I could dip his head in his own ink bar'l."

Jake gazed thoughtfully into the fire with puzzled, simple eyes. He was a man who thought slowly, but who always acted with commendable promptness when he had once made up his mind.

"I was over to Hutchinson's to-day," he resumed presently, "an' the Doc gave me some stuff for you. I'll fix you up with a dose, an' then you won't want anythin' till mornin'. It's 11 o'clock now."

The poet looked at Jake curiously. "You ain't had a sleep for a week, I reckon, Jake?"

"Not bein' used to your goin's on," said Jake, "nat'rally I ain't had a wink. When you gets to rearin' round an' breakin' blood vessels, an' seein' angels playin' flutes in the distance, an' callin' for your old woman, when thar ain't no female in this yer shanty, its only nat'ral these yer unknown parties'll expect some one to look after 'em when they gits here."

As he spoke he poured some medicine into an old cracked tea cup and held it to the sick youth's lips. One arm stole gently round the boy (he was little more than a boy), who, with a gleam of mischief in his great eyes, put up a thin, white hand to the bronzed cheeks above him and gave them a caressing rub.

Jake was manifestly discomposed by this poetical exhibition of tenderness. "Quit yer foolin', he said huskily, "an' drink this yer mixture. It'll keep yer quiet till mornin'."

The boy drank with difficulty. "Yes, Jake, I reckon it'll keep me quiet till mornin'; that's about the time the river leaves off callin'."

Jake affected not to hear this pessimistic remark, but talked on in wandering fashion until the boy's fair head fell back upon his arm. Then he covered him up carefully, veiled the light of the lamp with an old towel, and drew a revolver from the shelf.

The wind, as it blew beneath the rude floor of pine slabs, rustled the papers about the floor. Jake picked them up, bent over the boy to make sure that the opiate had done its work, and crept cautiously into the darkness.

A low whinny of delight greeted him as he entered the narrow shanty which served for a stable. Without striking a light, he saddled his brown mare, led her into the trail and mounted.

"Now, old lady," he said, "you bet you've got to hustle."

The mare whinned again and broke into a long, swinging gallop.

As she sped on through the darkness, Jake sat squarely back into the saddle, the reins hanging loosely, and only stirring when a splash of water from the mare's flying hoofs wetted his cheeks. A mistake on her part meant that his brains would be dashed out against the trunk of the nearest pine; but he made no sign, only holding the papers a little tighter when his mare left the track.

After an hour's hard galloping, his practiced eye detected a light in the distance.

"Shooh!" he said to his mare. "Gently, lass, gently. We're almost thar."

He drew rein on the outskirts of Marysville, and tied the mare to a pine stump. Then he crept to the one tumble-down hut in which there was light, and peered through the window with a satisfied look.

Watson H. Bangs (Mr. Bangs comprised in his own person the editor, staff, devil, printer, advertising agent and proprietor of the "Marysville Gazette") was composing Saturday's leader, assisted in his consumption of the midnight oil by a bottle of whisky, which occupied one end of the table where he sat. Every now and again he snipped long paragraphs from "exchanges" on a bench at his side, and laboriously pasted them together. Then he would march to the nearest "case," pick up the type from various little boxes and throw it about with all the rapidity of a practiced juggler.

Suddenly the door opened and Jake entered, dropping from the storm.

"Old Mr. Bangs" made for the drawer of a distant table in which his revolver lay hid. When he recognized his visitor he abondoned all warlike intentions, casting at the same time a reluctant glance at the whisky bottle, as if uncertain how long it would hold out against the newcomer's attacks.

Jake slid into the editorial chair, after carefully closing the door, and Old Man Bangs, with a reluctant nod in the direction of the bottle, went on with his task.

"Sit down," said Jake briefly, pointing to a chair, and declining the implied invitation.

Old Man Bangs sat down and refreshed himself with a pull at the bottle.

"It's a nice sort of a night up at the Four Corners," he said, cheerfully. "I guess, if the river keeps on risin', old Hutchinson'll be drowned out afore morning."

"Mebbe," said Jake.

"There's a sort of yarn, when the river's that high," said Old Man Bangs, lighting his pipe, "there's a sort of yarn, when the river rises suddenly it carries away a soul with the mornin' light. But I reckon you don't take no stock in such dum foolishness?"

"Reckon I do," said Jake, still speaking without a sign of resentment. "Reckon I do. That's why I've come down."

"Jusso," said Old Man Bangs, puffing away with undiminished composure. "Jusso. What's up, Jake?"

Jake carefully laid his revolver on the table. Old Man Bangs realized that his visitor meant business, and had him at a disadvantage.

"Some folks at the Four Corners allow ez this yere paper of yourn ain't hightoned," said Jake carelessly. "You don't put on frills enough."

Old Man Bangs looked longingly at the table drawer. "Guess I could put more tone into the conversation if I'd my usual seat," he said significantly, and went on smoking.

"Mebbe," said Jake, "mebbe." He laid the papers he had brought with him on the table. Some of the folks at the Corners was wishful of a little native talent in this one-hoss paper of yourn. They allowed, mebbe, you orter take more stock in poetry, an' native produce, such ez straddle-bugs an' chipmunks, an' things."

"All the fools at the Corners ain't dead yet," said Old Man Bangs, savagely.

"Mebbe," said Jake. "I 'lowed ez they was wrong. 'Yer don't give Old Man Bangs a chance,' I sez to 'em. 'He's well-meanin'' is Old Man Bangs, but yer don't give him a chance. Now, if I were to sorter drop in on him permiskus like,' I sez, 'why Old Man Bangs would be right thar.' So they 'lowed I'd better try."

Old Man Bangs, with studied composure, stretched out his hand and took up the papers on the table. He recognized a note in his own spidery writing, which Jake had pinned on the top.

"I kinder told 'em," said Jake speaking with slow insistence, "I kinder told em ez how I'd take Old Man Bangs down some native produce and he'd rear up on end an' print it straight off."

Old Man Bangs rose without a word, walked to the composing case and rapidly began to "set up" the verses which Jake had brought, his fingers flying with all the precision of machinery. After half an hour's hard work he screwed up the type in a "form," took a "pull" and brought it to Jake, who laboriously spelt through the words, still keeping one hand on his revolver and criticising the spelling with a sublime disregard for conventional methods.

"Will that do?" growled Old Man Bangs, with sullen resentment at his enforced labor.

Jake gazed admiringly at the poem so rapidly called into being. "Sorter pretty, ain't it? I'll tell the folks at the Corners you ain't no slouch when you get a chance at native produce," he said admiringly.

He tucked the printed paper carefully away into his vest pocket and sprang for the door. Old Man Bangs rushed for his revolver in the drawer of the distant table and with a dexterity acquired by long practice, took a flying shot at Jake, as he disappeared, then blew out the light and waited for reprisals, but none came.

The brown mare scented her master, as he crawled slowly through the darkness and hauled himself with difficulty into the saddle. "Gently, Winny, gently," he said. "Guess you'd better crawl sorter keerful; old man's planted a bullet in my arm. He allers shoots straight when he's blind drunk."

The mare walked with her burden as it swayed from side to side. Something warm ran down her flank and made her start. For three hours she paced slowly along the narrow path, halting every now and then when her rider clung to the saddle and groaned, for he was faint from loss of blood. The wind fell as suddenly as it had risen. Through the straight trunks of the pines the swollen river glimmered here and there with faint streaks of white. A rift in the sullen sky betokened the coming dawn. With careful steps the mare plodded onward, halting now and again to look around at her master, who motioned her on with a feeble wave of his hand.

When they reached the clearing Jack slid out of the saddle and crawled into the hut, leaving his mare standing at the door. Seizing a whisky bottle he drank long and eagerly, then propped himself up on his stool by the boy's bunk and tightened his sash. "It's sorter lucky that old coon missed the papers," he muttered, and waited. "I'm all right now my arm's stopped bleedin'."

Presently a ray of sunlight strole into the hut, and the shadows fled away before the cheerful singing of the birds.

The boy awoke with a glad little cry. "Jake, where are you? Jake, I've had such a dream."

Something white glistened on the rude blanket. "Ja—why, snakes alive, Jake, how did this come here?"

He fell to reading the verses with delirious enjoyment. A soft pink flush came into his cheek. "Why, Jake, they're printed! 'Song to a Chipmunk, by our gifted fellowtownsman, The Shelley of Muskrat Swamp!'"

A fit of coughing interrupted him. Jake, leaning back so that the boy could not see his face, lied with tranquil indifference. "Oh, Old Man Bangs come up after you'd dropped off."

"Yes, Jake, yes?"

"He printed 'em, an' brought 'em over, and planked down a $10 bill. Here's the money."

The boy gave another cry.

"Jake, Jake, that's fame! Hang the money! No, let me see it. Where is it?"

Jake handed him the money with difficulty. The boy pressed it to his feverish lips. "Jake, Jake, there's blood on it! Wha—"

Jake tried to raise his head, but in vain. A little later the mare, alarmed at her master's silence, thrust open the door with her velvet muzzle and walked into the hut. The dead boy lay on the arm of his friend, and Jake, with a rude piety, natural in one unacquainted with conventional forms, was conducting an improvised but fervid funeral service over the remains of "The Shelley of Muskrat Swamp."

NEVER WOULD FORGET HIM.

A man from the interior of Indiana was in New York not long ago, and meeting a friend there proposed to blow him off to a good dinner. He didn't know just where to go, and by some chance he stumbled into a swell cafe where prices climb higher than the thermometer on the hottest day. The Indianian never thought of that though, and had a dinner that was really fine, having left it to the waiter's taste and discretion. When the bill was presented it was for $17.25.

"What do you mean by this?" he exclaimed as he looked it over.

"That's the bill, sir," replied the waiter, respectfully.

"Excuse me," said the Hoosier, gulping down his feelings before his guest, and he gave the waiter a $20 bill.

When the change was brought back he chucked it into his pocket and started out, his friend being some distance in advance.

"Beg pardon," murmered the waiter, "are you going to forget me, sir?"

"Forget you," hissed the Hoosier, in a low, penetrating hiss, "forget you? Well, you bet your life I never forget a man that lets me pay $17.25 for a dinner, when dinners are plenty for 50 cents, and if I ever catch you in the state of Indiana, by gum, you'll wish I had forgotten you, and don't you forget that, will you?" and he walked out so mad that if there had been half a show for him he would have tackled the waiter right then and there.—Detroit Free Press.

HOW ANARCHISTS SHOULD BE PUNISHED.

Since the anarchist acknowledges no duty to government, he can claim no rights from government; consequently, when a man is duly convicted of anarchistic sentiments, let the government at once announce that it no longer extends its protection to his person or property,—that he is an outlaw, with no defense but his own strength against any hate or greed of which he or his may be the object. If outlawry fails to keep the anarchist in exile, shall the sanction be confinement or death? Eradication is the only cure; and delay, even hesitancy, is cruelty. If you put him in prison or asylum, there is no sort of security that he would stay there. If there be here and there a thoroughly reconstructed man working out a long sentence, the fact is a shame, and the idea of keeping a cured man shut up, especially in an asylum, is intolerable. It is a peculiarity of the anarchist's case that can be taken. But to take that is practically impossible. His disorder does not prevent dissimulation, and all that he has to do is to profess a change of heart and stick to it. To entrap him, through argument, irritation, surprise, or espionage, into a statement of his true sentiments, would often be impossible. Remember how Gérard dissembled, though before his crime. Before he gets so far as actual violence, your anarchist may be the mildest-mannered man that ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship. But that is the very time to shut him up: it is too late when his ferocity is unloosed. Yet see the paradox—before his ferocity is unloosed, it is wasted trouble to shut him up, because he can dissimulate himself out; but to wait till his ferocity is unloosed, is absurd. Hence it is ridiculous to depend upon shutting him up at all.

Outlawry and exile failing, and confinement being demonstrably impracticable, there is nothing left but to kill him. The only question is whether we shall wait for him to kill somebody else first.

Let the state, then, say to the professed anarchist, without waiting for him to commit his murder: "You have abandoned the right to stay among us. We have no desire to take your life; but we will not have you among us. Go elsewhere, and use whatever chances you may have. You prove yourself not fit for human society, and we shall, as a matter of decency, notify all organized societies of that fact. If you come back here we shall kill you. If you go there, they, if they are wise, will do the same. Your only possible home is your only fit home—the wild and desert places of the earth, with the other beasts of prey that man has not yet exterminated."—Henry Holt, in the August Forum.

To-morrow.

I said, "To-morrow!" one bleak, winter day,
"To-morrow I will live my life anew."
And still "To-morrow!" while the winter grew
To spring, and yet I dallied by the way,
And sweet dear sins still held me in their sway.
"To-morrow!" I said, while summer days wore through:
"To-morrow!" while chill autumn round me drew;
And so my soul remained the sweet sin's prey.
So pass the years, and still, perpetually,
I cry, "To-morrow will I flee each wile;
To-morrow, surely, shall my soul stand free,
Safe from the siren voices that beguile!
But death waits for me with a mocking smile,
And whispers, "Yea! to morrow, verily!"

PROPOSING BY TELEPHONE.

An event has occurred in Michigan, near Detroit, which appears to confirm the idea that courtship, as well as most other things, will hereafter be greatly facilitated by recent inventions. It seems that there is a young lady residing in Detroit who for some time has been the recipient of the attentions of two young men, one a young professor in the Michigan State University, at Ann Arbor, and the other a traveling salesman for a New York wholesale hardware house, whose route extends through Michigan and parts of Canada. One day recently the New Yorker arrived in Detroit late in the afternoon, and of course, immediately started to make the rounds of the retail hardware dealers, with the laudable purpose of selling each a good stock for the winter before the representative of any rival concern should put in an appearance. He had hoped to visit the object of his affections in the evening, but business was brisk, and 8 o'clock found him very busy trying to induce a prominent dealer to take six dozen axes, four dozen grindstones and a half carload of wooden pails. At this stage of the proceedings a younger brother of the young lady dropped in to get a new jackknife, and accidentally mentioned that the Ann Arbor professor was up at the house. It instantly occurred to the progressive hardware and cutlery drummer that the college man came for no other purpose that to lay his heart at the feet of the young lady he himself adored. For a moment there was a struggle in his heart, but he speedily got control of himself and decided that he could not possibly leave the store, as the dealer was just on the point of deciding to take the pails. But the thought of giving up the lady, who had been for months constantly in his mind waking and sleeping, was unbearable. Light suddenly dawned on him. Handing the merchant a circular explaining the merits of his new double-bladed chopping knives, he requested the use of the dealer's telephone for five minutes, stepped to it and rang up the central office.

A moment later the telephone bell at the residence of the young lady rang, sharp and decisive. The professor had been there for an hour talking pleasantly of the grand educational work they were doing in the department of fossiology at Ann Arbor. When the bell rang, the lady's father being absent (he is a physician), she excused herself and proceeded to the adjoining room to answer it. The professor heard her step to the telephone and say, "yes," make a short pause and say "yes" again. Then there was a longer pause, and he heard her reply: "Why—why—really, this is very sudden." Then there was a still longer pause, and he heard her say "yes" very softly, and then "good-bye," and then she hung up the receiver and came into the back room. The college man moved closer to the lady and remarked that it was a warm evening, and he thought it was going to rain, and then resumed his talk about the great work at the university. Fifteen minutes later there was a ring at the front door bell. The lady responded to it and a district messenger boy handed her a plain gold ring, which she slipped on her finger, and returned to the parlor. "Miss —," said the professor, five minutes later, "I want to ask you a very important question this evening. Excuse me for putting it bluntly, but will you be my wife?" But we need go no further with this. Two minutes later the professor went down the front steps, and shook his fist at the telephone wire and took the first train for Ann Arbor—Hardware.

A ROSE FEAST, THEN A "GATES AJAR."

The Chicago Record says that "Uncle John" Thorpe stood among his flowers one morning thinking how much better they were than the money that bought them.

The front door opened slightly, and there came through the crevice a very small boy, much tattered as to clothes and having streaks of the town dirt across his face.

He saw "Uncle John" back among the flowers and said:—

"Mister."

"What is it?"

"Say, I want a rose," and he held out a penny.

"For one cent?"

"Dat's all I can blow."

"You'd better let me give you a carnation. It looks just as well in a gentleman's buttonhole," with a smile.

"No kiddin', mister. I ain't wearing flowers. It's for me pardner."

"Your partner?"

"De kid dat's always been wid me. He's out in t'e hospital and I t'ought he'd like to have a rose."

"Uncle John" picked out the rarest and sweetest rose of all and took the penny. The boy went away with the great nodding blossom hugged against his torn waist, and "Uncle John" was left with the reflection that there are some things in the world as beautiful as flowers.

It was a week later when the door again opened, and the same tattered boy, his face unnaturally clean, came in and once more found "Uncle John" at home among his flowers.

"Mister."

"Hello, here; the boy that bought the rose. How's your partner?"

"Dat's what I came in about. He's dead."

"That's too bad."

"Say, mister, do you make dem 'Gates Ajar' t'ings for to put on coffins?"

"Yes, sometimes."

"Well, t'e boys have chipped in for one and here's t'e stuff," and he opened his right hand, which was heaping full of pennies and

PALMER NEWS.

THE BICYCLE RACES.

A World's Record on the Palmer Track—Good Attendance and Exciting Contests.

With the exception of the dryness and a little wind the weather was all that could be asked for Monday afternoon, at the annual Labor Day tournament of the Palmer Bicycle Club, and a large number attended the races on the driving park track, which had been put in excellent condition for the contests. The event of the day was the world's record for a half mile riding backward, made by Master Allen Atkins in 2.13¾. Atkins is not yet 13 years old, and the record for 14-year riders has been 2.35, but an older rider established a record of 2.19 only a few days before the Palmer meet. Every rider, with one exception, who had entered appeared, making the sport more enjoyable for the spectators.

The first race was the one mile novice, with 11 starters. Gardner of Springfield fell on the first turn, and Bowen of Belchertown also went down on the second time around. Campbell of West Warren set the pace, but could not hold it on the stretch, and A. J. Kent of Belchertown finished first in 2.45, Charles Goodrow of Ludlow second, J. T. Campbell of West Warren third.

The half mile open brought out 10 contestants, and was a pretty race from the start, F. T. Parsons of Springfield taking the lead and holding it, with A. W. Stacy of Belchertown second and C. E. Hollis of Springfield third, the time being 1.12⅘.

The half mile for boys was easily won by Thomas Russell of Bondsville in 1.28⅘, with Horace Parsons of Belchertown second. Russell is large for his age, and could have finished several seconds faster if he had been pushed.

The mile for the Waite prize cup brought five contestants to the tape, Joseph Richard and A. W. Hapgood for the Central Cycle Club of North Brookfield, Hapgood having won the cup at the Fourth of July races, F. A. Blanchard for the Star Cycle Club of Spencer, H. A. King and A. W. Stacy for the Palmer Club. Blanchard, Hapgood and King rode side by side for the first half, and then Stacy made a jump for the lead on the back stretch the second time around, coming to the tape with a good lead over Hapgood, who was second, with Richard third, King and Blanchard giving up the contest at the ¾ pole. The time was 2.43.

Master Allen Atkins came next with an exhibition of fancy and trick riding, and performed some difficult tricks, winning generous applause.

The half-mile international invitation race between "Uncle Samuel," the "Flying Dutchman" and "Dan McGinty" created considerable amusement. The contestants were dressed in fantastic if not artistic costumes, and rode wheels which were minus tires and barely held together. "Uncle Sam" fell off at the beginning of the back stretch and "McGinty" forged ahead to the quarter mark, when he got off and ran beside his machine for a rest. The "Flying Dutchman" dismounted and ran across lots from the quarter to the three-eighths pole, but was even then passed by "McGinty" before he could mount and get to the tape. Both shook hands and then started up the track to get "Uncle Sam," who was laboring painfully along some 20 rods in the rear, and with one on each side he was rushed to the tape, where the timers hung out 1.08 as the mark.

The seven starters in the mile local were pretty well bunched for the first quarter with C. D. Holden of Bondsville leading, where they strung out a little but bunched again down the stretch to the tape, where Blanchard took the lead. Holden jumped into first place at the five-eighths and obtained a good lead which the others were not able to overcome, and he finished first in 2.45, with Blanchard second and Hapgood third by only a few inches.

A time limit of 1.35 was put on the half mile special for the president, captain and secretary of the Palmer club, W. F. Waite, A. E. Fitch and F. D. Barton. Fitch took the lead and kept it, in spite of the best efforts of Waite, who made a good push on the home stretch, but for every pound of steam he could put on Fitch had 18 ounces, and shoved his ladies' Keating across the tape an easy winner in 1.33⅘.

Master Atkins made his trial riding backwards after this race. Mounting the machine with his back to the handle bars and sitting on a little pad on the frame he was sent off, getting a good start. His steering was somewhat erratic on the first turn, but he soon steadied down and went up the back stretch a straight as a string. On the home stretch the wind was strong against him, but he kept hard at it and finished in 2.13⅘, a world's record.

The mile handicap was the race of the day, the 14 contestants being placed as follows: F. T. Parsons of Springfield, scratch; A. W. Stacy of Belchertown and F. A. Blanchard of Spencer, 20 yards; R. S. Ousterhout of Spencer, 30 yards; A. W. Hapgood of Spencer, 50 yards; A. E. Craw of Ludlow, 60 yards; E. C. Hollis of Springfield, 70 yards; H. A. King of Ludlow, 80 yards; W. J. Knowlton of Bondsville, A. J. Kent and H. E. Bowen of Belchertown, Archie Cooley of Springfield, 100 yards; C. D. Holden of Bondsville, 120 yards; Joseph Richards of Spencer, 130 yards. It was "hustle" from the crack of the starter's pistol to the end, and the spectacle was a pretty one as the procession passed up the back stretch on the first quarter. Holden took the lead from Richards at the quarter, and made a good fight, but he had to cut the wind for the others who gradually came up, and when he started at the three-quarters for a long spurt he was too tired, and was passed by Knowlton, Kent and Bowen, these winning in the order named, the time being 2.23¾, a track record. Hapgood was fourth and Holden fifth.

Earning $40 a Month and Starving.

The overseers of the poor are investigating a rather peculiar state of affairs which has been brought to their notice by the application to them of Alex Taylor for aid. Taylor is a workman in Holden & Fuller's woolen mill, and claims that though he is earning $40 a month he cannot get his money and that his family are starving. Some time ago he bought a lot of furniture of Shaw Bros. of Three Rivers, agreeing to pay $5 a month, and claims that at Mr. Shaw's request he gave him an order on Holden & Fuller for a month's wages as a guarantee of good faith. When the first month expired his wages were drawn by Shaw Bros. on the order, and Taylor alleges that they refuse to give him any part of them. Shaw Bros. admit this, but say that at the end of the month Taylor came to them and stated that he had got through in the mill, and they naturally refused to turn over his wages until some other plan of payment had been agreed upon. The assignment of wages which Taylor gave Shaw Bros. has been filed with the town clerk, and they can hold the money.

Dr. C. W. Cross has returned from his vacation.

C. G. Gardner has returned from his trip to Nova Scotia.

H. W. McGregory is painting his house on Squier street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fitch are at Boston for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Robinson are vacationizing at Cottage City.

Miss Ida Smith is visiting friends in Worcester, Mass., and Coventry, Ct.

Mrs. H. Reubin of Syracuse, N. Y., is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Simmons.

Arthur Wells is clerking for Robinson & Taylor, the Central street grocers.

Calvin Hastings has gone to Worcester Academy, for the coming school year.

H. C. Strong attended the funeral of Maj. Gen. N. P. Banks at Waltham Tuesday.

G. B. Kenerson and family have returned from a month's vacation at Block Island.

G. W. Cobb and wife of Elmira, N. Y., are guests of Luther Cobb on Pleasant street.

Mrs. E. Habenstein and son of Hartford are guests of Mrs. H's. brother, E. B. Taylor.

Miss Ada and Clarence Wing returned Monday evening from a vacation of about nine weeks.

Mrs. G. W. Lyman and daughter Blanche have returned from an extended vacation in Connecticut.

Mrs. H. C. Strong and Miss Grace returned to-day from their summer's outing at Pleasant Beach, Ct.

The selectmen have accepted the new sewers at Three Rivers and Thorndike, built by C. S. Ruggles.

The carpet mill started up again Monday, after having been shut down for several days waiting for yarn.

Miss Anna Shaw attended the wedding of a school friend at South Manchester, Ct., Tuesday afternoon.

Misses Lizzie and Ella Henighan have been spending a part of the week with friends in Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Small entertained a small party at whist at their Squier street home Monday evening.

H. N. Sager & Co. have postponed the opening of their store in the Nassowanno House block until the 15th.

The last trip of the Block Island boat and train over the New London Northern road will be made next Monday.

The tax collector reports that $42,000 of the $50,280 of town taxes have been paid in, and $1850 of the $2224 fire district tax.

The last excursion of the season to Watch Hill and Block Island was run this morning over the New London Northern road.

The shoddy mill of the Grosvenor Woolen Co. has been run by steam for several days on account of a lack of water in the river.

Mrs. Helen Warren Auger has returned from her vacation, and will reorganize her classes in piano in this and the surrounding towns.

C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers will superintend the construction of the new building for poultry on the grounds of the agricultural society.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold a meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Thomas Blanchard's "Tillie B." won the 2.28 class trot at Danielsonville, Ct., last Friday, taking the second, third and fourth heats in 2.24½, 2.28, 2.28¼.

The members of the bicycle club had a collation in the club rooms Monday evening after the race meet, sandwichs, coffee, doughnuts, fruit, etc., being served.

D. F. Holden is digging for water on his land recently purchased northeast of the village, and has struck a fine spring which promises to yield a large amount.

The motion of the town for a new trial in the case of B. F. Coffin against the town for damages has been withdrawn, and the case will go to the supreme court on exceptions.

The merry-go-round which has been on the vacant lot opposite the memorial building on Central street for a week has gone, but will be here again for the cattle show the 18th and 19th.

A welcome shower of rain fell yesterday morning early, though it was not of sufficient duration or extent to do any great good. At Monson it did not rain enough to lay the dust.

Rev. H. F. Moulton was unable to preach in St. Paul's church last Sunday on account of illness, and the pulpit was occupied by Mrs. Patterson, who was announced to make a short address.

The bids for the construction of the Odd Fellows' building were opened Wednesday afternoon, there being ten bidders, but the committee has decided not to give the figures for publication for the present.

Several carriages, harness, farming tools, etc., belonging to the estate of the late David Knox will be sold at auction at the barn of William Merriam on Pleasant street next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Democratic state committee has designated the 20th and 21st as the two days on which the caucuses of that party must be held, and the Palmer caucus will probably be on the evening of the 20th, Thursday.

The Young People's Union of the Baptist church will give a peach supper in the vestry of the church Wednesday evening, supper being served for 15 cents. An entertainment will also be given, and ice cream and cake served.

An unintentional error was made in last week's item announcing the appointment of the pupil teachers for the grammar school, in making it appear that Miss Bessie Royce stood fourth in rank, when in reality she stood second.

In making up the premium list for fair of the agricultural society one class, number 9, herds of milch cows, was in some manner omitted. The error has been rectified and entries for this class will be received. The premiums are $7, $5 and $3.

The selectmen have petitioned the county commissioners to recommend the building of a state highway from the Warren line on the east to the Wilbraham line on the west, and it is understood that a survey of the proposed route will be made at once.

Revere chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will resume meetings next Friday evening after a vacation through the hot weather of the summer. A visit from the officers of the grand chapter is expected, and two candidates will be initiated.

Although the law against selling tobacco to minors is strict, small boys seem to have little difficulty in obtaining all they want. One dealer in this village sold cigarettes to a nine-years-old lad the other day, who had been sent to buy them for an older boy.

The atmosphere assumed a decidedly smoky hue Sunday, especially in the evening, about six, when it became quite yellow, reminding one of the famous yellow day of 1881, Sept. 6th. The probable cause was smoke from the extensive forest fires which had been raging in the West.

The Forty Hours' Devotion opens next Sunday with the 10.30 mass in St. Thomas's church, continuing through Monday with mass at 8 o'clock. Clergyman from out of town will assist at the services. Owing to this devotion there will be no Sunday school and no vesper service on Sunday.

Rev. C. R. Minard, who has preached for the Baptist people so acceptably for several months, will continue to supply the pulpit while pursuing his studies at Newton. He will reach Palmer Friday evening and conduct the weekly prayer meeting, preach on Sunday and return to Newton Monday.

H. C. Strong had as his guest at the Nassowanno House Monday night his former classmate, Frank A. Hosmer of Honolulu, at one time principal of the Palmer high school, and assistant principal of the Hitchcock Free High School in Brimfield, now president of Oahu College at Honolulu.

The expert judges required by the State Board of Agriculture for several departments of the agricultural society's fair have been selected: Cattle, Prof. W. P. Brooks of Amherst; horses, L. F. Herrick of Worcester; fruit, A. J. Blanchard of Wilbraham; poultry, C. A. Ballou of Worcester.

The overseers of the poor run across some peculiar things sometimes. A man who this week notified them that he and his children were practically starving has refused to work at $1.50 a day, half to be paid him in cash and half to apply on a mortgage on his furniture, which as soon as paid for would be as good as cash to the owner.

Jerry Smith, alias Jerry Sizer, of Wales, who was fined $10 some time ago in the district court for an assault on Charles F. Crawford of the same place, but appealed, withdrew the appeal yesterday and paid. The civil case of M. L. Alberty of Brimfield against George Sherman of the same town, involving a cow and some 120 pounds of beef, will be tried to-morrow.

An excursion to New York and Coney Island will be run over the New London Northern road to-morrow night, the train leaving Palmer at 9 o'clock and the boat reaching New York early Sunday morning, giving patrons the whole day at either New York or Coney Island, and getting them home for business Monday morning. The fare for the round trip is $2 25.

O. B. Sikes, living on the road to the Four Corners, lost two valuable cows last Saturday. The bars in the pasture fence had in some manner unknown to Mr. Sikes become removed, and as the feed in the pasture was low the animals started on an exploring expedition and found their way on to the track of the Ware River road, where they were struck by the 3.15 train from Palmer.

Thomas Blanchard's fast three-years-old mare, "Caddie Stout," died at Hampden Park, Springfield, on Monday, through over feeding. She was a particularly promising animal, and although her record was only 2.44, had trotted below the 2.20 mark, and had finished second in 2.19 at Rigby, Maine, in the latter part of July. Mr. Blanchard had refused $2000 cash for the animal, and valued her at $5000.

A large crowd saw the Thorndikes defeat the Bondsvilles in a not particularly exciting game of ball on the driving park grounds last Saturday afternoon. Each club had outside players, and the Thorndikes went their opponents one better in securing Sullivan of the Providence league team for a pitcher, the Bondsvilles being unable to fathom his curves. This gives Thorndike three games out of five.

The merchants of this place have an excellent opportunity to advertise their wares at the fair of the agricultural society the 18th and 19th. Space for the display of their goods in the upper hall can be had for the asking, but should be applied for a few days in advance of the days of the fair, so that the manager of the hall may know how much will be wanted. Applications should be made to the secretary, O. P. Allen.

The new tariff law places a tax of two cents on each pack of playing cards, and the merchants who had any on hand were compelled to put a stamp of that denomination on each pack in stock before they could be sold. LeGro & Lynde had about 75 packs, O. P. Allen 50, W. E. Stone 25, J. F. Foley and W. A. Barnes about 20 each. The remarks of one dealer who voted the Democratic ticket at the last election were more forcible than elegant.

C. D. Holden of Bondsville promises to become a fast rider on the track, as his work in the bicycle races of Monday will show. His best hold is on a long spurt, of about three-sixteenths or a quarter of a mile, and with a little head work he stands fair to win a number of prizes. If he had not passed Richards when he overtook him in the mile handicap, but followed him until some other rider passed them, then dogged him, he would have been in better shape for his spurt at the end and stood a much better chance of winning.

The schedule of points for the count in the Arcanum hunt on the 17th has been arranged, and differs from former schedules in that birds of prey are advanced in value, while innocent birds and game are reduced. The list of birds and animals which will figure in the score is:

Fox,	1000	Grey Squirrel,	50
Crow,	500	Rabbit,	50
Hawk,	400	Duck,	50
Woodchuck,	300	Meadow Lark,	35
Weasel,	300	Snipe,	25
Eagle,	200	Wild Pigeon,	25
Kingfisher,	250	Red-headed Woodpecker,	25
Otter,	200	English Sparrow,	25

Weld, late of Brimfield.

The electric lights have been something on the unknown quantity order for the past week, or like the now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't little joker. The water in the river,—or rather the lack of it,—has been the cause, and as the engine and boiler which are to be used to help out in such cases have not yet been connected with the machinery the lights went out when the water supply ran low. On Thursday night of last week all the lights went out at 9.45, and have been "running wild" since. The mills at Warren did not run Saturday afternoon, Sunday nor Monday, and so little water came down stream, in consequence the lights disappearing at 8.45 Monday night. Tuesday night the street lamps were not started up at all, but the commercial service was run until midnight, then shut down until 5 in the morning. They were run the same way Wednesday night, and the street lamps were run until 10 o'clock. The work of connecting the engine and boiler is going on as rapidly as possible, and the company hopes to be in shape to run all night again in a short time.

The members of the Columbian Band wish to acknowledge the reciept of $25, given them by Rev. F. J. Lynch, pastor of St. Mary's church, for which they extend heartfelt thanks.

Mrs. G. W. Keith is entertaining at her home on Main street Miss Nettie M. Clark of Chicopee Falls, Miss Katie O'Brien of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. McElwain of Boston and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Rosenbaum of Washington, D. C.

Labor Day passed off pleasantly. There was no drunkenness seen about the village, and the usual quietness prevailed. The day being a delightful one a large number attended the bicycle races at Palmer, others went to the horse races at Ware, while several went to Holyoke to the Diocesan Field Day sports and parade. Forest Lake as usual had its number of admirers, who stayed throughout the day until evening to enjoy the dancing.

New Coal and Wood Yard.

It is understood that J. W. Miller, who has occupied land in the rear of the B. and A. station, is to vacate the same and will be obliged to find new quarters for his coal and wood business. N. W. Bond, the owner, it is said will occupy the land and go into the coal and wood business, and also move his grain business thereto.

The New Paymaster.

A. B. C. Deming severed his connection with the Thorndike Co. on Friday last, and is succeeded by Mr. Charles A. Tabor of Providence, R. I., a young man who comes to town highly recommended. It is hoped that his stay in Thorndike will be of long duration, and his relations with the village people pleasant and agreeable.

Celebrating the Victory.

Saturday night the whole town turned out to welcome home the ball team from their victory over the Bondsvilles on the park at Palmer. The streets were lined with people, many of whom belonged out of town. The brass band paraded the streets, and it was a night seldom paralleled in Thorndike. Everyone was happy, and it would only be putting it in a mild form to say there was great rejoicing.

THORNDIKES 9—BONDSVILLES 4.

The last game between the Thorndikes and the Bondsvilles for the championship was played on the Palmer driving park Saturday before an audience of fully 1000 people, and was won by the Thorndikes by heavy hitting and good fielding. The Thorndikes had Sullivan of the Providence league team in the box, and he proved a very effective man. Dowd of the Georgetown University pitched for Bondsville, and was hit quite hard, but pitched a fine game, though the Bondsvilles gave him poor support. Vigneaux, Gay, Longtine and Sugrue played a fine game at the bat and in the field. Sedgwick's running catch was a feature. Whiting played a perfect game behind the bat. Rearden covered third in good shape, as did Fletcher for the Bondsvilles. The following is the score in full:

Umpire, Daniels.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Three out of five and we take the championship.

Sedgwick's running catch was the feature of the game.

The Thorndikes expect to go to Haydenville to-morrow.

Gay and Longtine played a wonderful game in the field.

That tin horn did not make many toots after the first two innings.

Sullivan did not play his usual game behind the bat for the Bondsvilles.

Manager Farrill is happy, and is now singing "Sweet Marie"—for the boys.

Donovan should have been played at short instead of playing him on the bench.

Slate was a poor substitute for Donovan at short, and played a poor game at the bat.

Rearden played a fine game at third, and Kelliher made some wonderful stops on first.

Bondsville had a very strong team, but Thorndike went them one better in "Sullivan."

The way Gay, Longtine, Sugrue and Vigneaux hit out the ball would tickle one clear down to his toes.

Had Sullivan come to Thorndike on Saturday he would have been given a reception to made him feel proud.

Fletcher is a good ball player, and was a great addition to the Bondsvilles, being a fine hitter and a good fielder—his playing at third was No. 1.

Sullivan pitched a fine game for Thorndike and at different times fooled the Bondsvilles so badly that it caused a hearty laugh from the audience more that once during the game.

There is talk of organizing a league to be composed of the Thorndikes, Bondsvilles, Wares and Gilbertvilles, and to play two games on Wednesdays and Saturdays, making a total of eight, but whether or not it will amount to anything this season is uncertain, as it is pretty late.

THAT is a fearful story which comes this week from Minnesota and Wisconsin, the wiping out of a number of towns by fire and the death of many people, variously estimated at from 800 to 1500, the correct figures probably being about 1200. These towns were situated in the forest districts, and the fires which had started in the timber spread rapidly through the territory, fed by pitchy woods and augmented by the tinder-like nature into which the long dry weather had turned everything combustible, sweeping across large tracts with lightning-like rapidity. Altogether a tract some 40 miles square was burned over, some dozen or more towns being literally wiped out of existence, in some places not a building being left standing. Many persons were caught without warning, so rapidly did the fire sweep along, while others who had been warned of the impending danger were overtaken on their way to supposed safety. Some took refuge in swamps and small ponds, which however proved no protection from the fierce heat, the water being dried up and only the bodies of the victims, in many instances unrecognizable, being left to show the fate of sometimes whole families. The ground has been thickly strewn with the dead, which have been buried in long trenches, and a complete list of the unfortunates will probably never be known. In addition to the dead many are severely burned, and many more homeless and without food. Aid will not be lacking, however, as the country has more than once before shown its ready charity in cases of dire calamity, and will be sure to respond quickly to any call which may be made.

A STAY has been granted in the case of "Bat" Shea, who was to have been electrocuted for the murder of Robert Ross in connection with the election at Troy, N. Y., and it is said that this will very likely give him another year to live, as it will take about that time to get the appeal through the courts. Perhaps on the whole this is well. Shea's crime was so particularly cold-blooded and atrocious that he is not likely to escape the penalty, and a year in which to think it over, with the hopes and uncertainties as to the outcome, will hardly give him an easy mind during the time.

VERMONT held her state election Tuesday, and the Democrats get cold comfort from it. The returns indicate a Republican plurality of about 30,000. Four years ago the plurality was only 14,163, and in the presidential election 19,702 for governor and 21,677 for president.

THE next Republican candidate for governor of New York is generally conceded to be ex-vice president Levi P. Morton, he having said that he would accept the nomination if the party demanded it, which now seems probable.

THE Democratic state convention will be held October 8th, Monday, and will be presided over by ex-Gov. Russell.

MONSON.

Death of Col. Orson Moulton, a Native of Monson, in Springfield.

Col. Orson Moulton, who died last Friday night at the old Butler place, on the Boston road, Springfield, was a native of Monson. He was born here in 1825, and received his education in the public schools. Later he attended Wilbraham Academy, after which he learned the trade of an iron moulder and worked in Worcester until the war broke out, when he enlisted as a three-months' man. After his term was out he re-enlisted, and during his service was several times promoted, finally receiving the title of lieutenant colonel. He was several times confined in southern prisons, and once in Libby. For 19 years he was employed in the custom house at Boston in different capacities, and was at one time a member of the John A. Andrew Grand Army post, and later a member of Kingsley post, but gave up his membership on account of inability to attend the meetings. At the time of his death he was a member of the Loyal Legion in Boston, and of the Baptist church in Chelsea. In 1847 Col. Moulton was married to Miss Maria T. Butler, the ceremony being performed in the same house in which he died. He moved to Springfield in 1887, and since then had made his home on the Boston road. A widow and three children survive him. The daughter, Harriet Moulton, lived at home with her father and mother. The funeral was held at the house Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and the burial was at Maplewood cemetery.

The fall term of Wesleyan Academy will commence next Wednesday. A full attendance is expected, and many rooms outside of Rich Hall in the town have been rented by students.

LUDLOW.

The third annual grove-meeting at Red Bridge station began Tuesday, and has been largely attended. The services Wednesday morning were conducted by Rev. G. F. Durgin of Chicopee, and in the afternoon by Rev. B. F. Kingsley. Rev. F. J. Hale of Bondsville preached Thursday morning, and Rev. A. M. Osgood in the afternoon. Services were also held this morning in charge of Rev. G. S. Butler of Three Rivers. The meeting this afternoon was led by Rev. N. B. Fiske of Chicopee Falls. A Bible reading is also held each afternoon before the preaching services. The trains on the Athol branch stop at the grove on being signalled.

Incendiary Forest Fires.

The people here are having considerable trouble with fires which have been set recently in a wood lot near the Red Bridge, owned by Edward Healey of Sixteen Acres. The first one started last Sunday night and was extinguished with great difficulty. The flames appeared again Monday night about 10 o'clock in almost the same place, and about 100 cords of wood were burned. The fire lasted until 3.30 o'clock Tuesday morning. The fires were evidently incendiary, as both times they appeared in the wood piles, and straw was found under the piles, which had evidently been put there, footprints leading to where it had been taken from an old cabin near by. The two nights of fire-fighting cost the town about $50, and four men were put on guard at the place with shotguns, instructed to fire point blank at any point where they saw a blaze starting.

The annual meeting of the Warren High Street Aqueduct Company will be held next Monday evening at the office of the president, H. A. Tidd, on Main street.

The new laboratory which has been put into the high school building is completed, and will be used for work in sciences. It is well lighted and ventilated, and is one of the pleasantest rooms in the building.

Attempted Suicide.

James Allan, an old man 84 years of age, attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning in the cemetery by cutting a deep gash in his left arm with a razor. The two main arteries were severed and death would have resulted in a short time if help had not been summoned. The act is thought to have been the result of despondency. His grandson, Norman H. Allan, was killed by the cars in May, and the old man had never ceased to grieve for him. He visited the grave daily and it was there the deed was committed. Drs. Deland and Gay were called, and on closer examination it was found that he had also inflicted two deep cuts on the right side of his face and neck. It is thought if it had not been for the timely aid of Mr. Hathaway, who found him unconscious and bandaged his arm, he would have been dead in five minutes. Some hope is entertained for his recovery. His son, T. N. Allan, with whom he had been living, moved recently to Elizabeth, N. J., and since then Mr. Allen had been still more lonely and despondent. The circumstances of the case are quite pathetic.

News has reached here that Mrs. T. H. French of Somersville, Ct., formerly engaged in business in this place, and the owner of considerable property, has become insane and is now confined in a hospital. Mrs. French has many friends here who will be sorry to learn of her misfortune.

While there is great scarcity of water in some of the out districts and in the neighboring towns, the supply of the water works of Ware shows no falling off, and no limitation of the use of water for any purpose, even to sprinkling lawns and the streets, has been necessary.

The annual meeting of the Ware Rod and Gun Club was held at the Hampshire House on Tuesday evening. Lewis Warner, county treasurer, and Frank E. Davis of Northampton were elected new members. Andrew Bryson was re-elected president, and the meeting was adjourned one week, when the remainder of the officers will be elected.

Rev. William P. Davis of Lebanon, N. J., and Rev. William Ward of Schenectady, N. Y., son and grandson of the late Rev. William P. Davis, will occupy the pulpit at Ware Center next Sunday morning and evening. The son will preach a memorial sermon to his father, who was born in Ware and was for many years a member of the Ware Center church.

The Hampshire county Pomona Grange will hold a meeting with Ware Grange next Wednesday. Action will be taken to dissolve the Connecticut Valley District Grange. The topic for the morning's discussion is, "Wherein Does it Pay to Entertain the District Grange?" In the afternoon, "Resolved that the Sisters do Greater Work at these Meetings than do the Brothers." Large delegations from each grange are cordially invited. Every member is invited to contribute to the dinner, served as usual.

Edward A. Aldrich, aged 45 years, died at his home on South street Tuesday evening. He had been out of health for nearly a year, but seemed much better for a month past until Sunday, when he grew rapidly worse. Mr. Aldrich learned the mason's trade in Northampton, and followed it in Springfield for some years. He came to Ware in 1880 and was for five years overseer of the out door work for the Otis company. Since then he has been in company with Frank Hills under the name of Hills & Aldrich, contractors and builders. Hitchcock's block was built by this firm. Mr. Aldrich was well known and had the respect of those who knew him. December 30, 1873, he married Elinor C. Hurlburt of Somers, Ct., who survives him with three daughters. He was a member of the East Congregational church, the Odd Fellows lodge and the A. O. U. W. The two last organizations attended the funeral in a body this forenoon, the services being conducted by Rev. A. B. Bassett. The interment was at Somers, Ct.

A Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lawton celebrated their golden wedding on Monday. The day was also the 25th anniversary of the marriage of their daughter Belle and Frank L. Chapin, who were present, from Southbridge. Mrs. Furber of Westfield, another daughter, was present, as well as other children and grandchildren. One hundred dollars in gold was left to Mr. and Mrs. Lawton.

Bunco Game Successfully Worked.

Two bunco men succeeded in working their game on several women in the west part of Ware on Friday of last week. Their plan of operating was to offer paper and envelopes for sale, claiming that the package was very valuable, which they would leave for the inspection of the parties until later in the day, and if they were not satisfied that they had got $50 worth they need not pay anything, but to prove that they had money with which to pay the women were asked to place $5 in an envelope. The men of course got possession of the envelope and did not return to see about the package. There are several reports about the West Ware police nearly capturing the men, but failing. If reports are true, it would seem that at least two women are out of pocket $5 each.

An Elopement.

There was quite a little ripple of interest manifested on Tuesday, when it was reported that Byron H., youngest son of William W. Barnes of West Main street, and Lottie, the 19-years-old daughter of Marshall Richards, a well-to-do farmer living on the west road to Gilbertville, had eloped. The case as far as can be learned from reports, is that the couple had for some time been keeping company, which was not in accordance with the wishes of the father of the girl, for whom she kept house, but they had managed in some way to meet occasionally and had agreed to be married in about two weeks. The report had in some way got out, and it was thought that the father of the girl knew of it, so it was decided to act at once, and a marriage license was secured from Town Clerk Richardson and the would-be bridegroom repaired to a spot near the residence of the bride to be, who joined him, and the couple drove to West Brookfield, where they were married on Tuesday morning, and left from there on their wedding tour. The team was returned from West Brookfield by Mr. Barnes's brother. The happy couple are expected home in a few days, where they will reside on West Main street.

The diamonds for the tournament of the Springfield Bicycle Club the 12th and 13th have been on exhibition for some days in the window of one of the leading jewelers of that city. Each is to be mounted as a stud, and an expert diamond setter from New York has been mounting the precious stones in full view of the public. As each is labeled at its valuation in the prize list and all are guaranteed to be flawless, the public know that there is no expansion of prices, and the total value is larger than ever before offered. The entries for the meeting are all in—a few more than last year. All the old time fliers except Zimmerman will be present, and many new lights. Class A will be of much local interest, Nat Butler of Cambridge, Jenne of Utica, N. Y., Knappe of Keene, N. H., Porter and Clark of Waltham, will be met by Allen and Williamson of the Springfield club, who have been doing some surprisingly fast work for beginners. The former made a flying quarter on Hampden Park track Wednesday in 27 2 5 seconds, half-mile in 58 3 5, mile in 1 58 1-5; also a standing mile in 2 02 4-5. These records will no doubt remain, the best previous time in class A records having been made by Butler at Waltham, a mile in 2.02 4-5.

We've got our north window filled up with the best 37½ cent wool mixture dress goods we ever saw. And customers who like its appearance in the window and examine it at the counters seem to share the enthusiasm.

It has a soft, beautiful, changeable luster, and comes in thirty different combinations in five designs, is 38 inches wide, and 8 yards make a dress—$3 for the dress length. Send for samples.

Left aisle.

Black India twill dress goods 46 inches wide at 58 cents a yard. You'd as quickly pay 75 cents for it, if we asked; but we make the price as little as possible always. Send for sample.

Right aisle.

Blankets just as brisk as ever. Twenty-five per cent saved by buying them now. It's a magic thought. And the nights are coming fast and sure when you will need just such blankets.

25 cents each to $1 a pair for 10-4 blankets.
35 cents to $7 a pair for 11-4 blankets.
$6 to $9.50 a pair for 12-4 blankets.

Main floor of Vernon street building.

Our carpet department is a dangerous place to go "just to look."

The "looking" creates enthusiasm, and of course the order follows.

But you are just as welcome to look without buying. Don't care a snap whether you buy now or not. If you see our collection you will buy your carpets here, when you need them, we know.

Second floor of Pynchon street building.

The Sandow is the strongest boy's suit ever made. Simply impregnable against the ordinary school boy; a knife is the only thing that will make any impression on it.

Can't rip the seams because they're taped and sewed with silk; elbows or knees won't come through, or seat wear out, because they're reinforced; buttons can't come off, because they're riveted on.

We give a new suit for every suit that does not stand the test. It is strictly all wool and comes in ten styles, at $5 the suit.

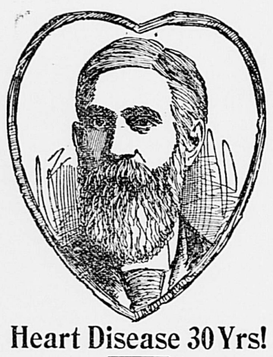
Ladies Calico AND Sateen WRAPPERS!

The kind that fits. Prices $1 to $2.

May Be Old,

but they don't show it, the clothes that are washed with Pearline. They last just about twice as long without showing signs of wear. Why shouldn't they? They're spared the weekly rub, rub, rub over the washboard. That's what wears out clothes. That's what wears out women, too. But, because Pearline makes easy work, don't think that it must do harm. It's just as harmless as good soap —and it costs no more than the poorest. 325 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.



Heart Disease 30 Yrs!

Short Breath, Palpitation.

Mr. G. W. McKinsey, postmaster of Kokomo, Ind., and a brave ex-soldier, says: "I had been severely troubled with heart disease ever since leaving the army at the close of the late war. I was troubled with palpitation and shortness of breath. I could not sleep on my left side, and had pain around my heart. I became so ill that I was much alarmed, and fortunately my attention was called to

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

I decided to try it. The first bottle made a decided improvement in my condition, and five bottles have completely cured me."

G. W. McKINSEY, P. M., Kokomo, Ind

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Sold by LEGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

That Ruling Passion.

She had suffered with the phthisic, and had taken tons of physic,
And whole barrelfuls of bitters, and whole loads of nauseous pills.
She'd been troubled with miasma, and choked up with the asthma,
And been shaken for a month or two with ague
and with chills.
She had had the yellow fever, of which nothing could relieve her,
And the rheumatism lamed her so she could not go about;
And she groaned with tonsilitis, and the most acute bronchitis,
And she suffered endless tortures from twinges
of the gout.
And she tried old-school physicians, Christian scientists, magicians,
Indian doctors, electricians and magnetic healers all,
And drank tons of nauseous liquor, but grew ever
sick and sicker,
And they got the undertaker to prepare her
shroud and pall;
Then the great auction sale of laces, advertised in various places,
Caught her feverish eye one morning and she leaped up sound and well;
She shook off Death's stiffening finger and with most emphatic vigor
She grasped her husband's pocketbook and rushed downtown pell mell.

TEN THOUSAND PIES A DAY.

The largest pie factory in New England, without a doubt, is located in Boston. Not only is this bakery on patriotic soil, but it occupies, in part, an old church building. In this factory the average is 10,000 pies a day, and the varieties are many. That they are made with great rapidity goes without saying. The manufacture consists chiefly of four processes—preparing and filling, making the crust, filling and baking them. If mince filling is being made the meat is first selected and then cooked in a steam-jacketed copper kettle that will hold a barrel. It is then chopped by a machine that knows its business, and then mixed with the apple, beef suet, currants, citron, spices and brandy. When the expert mixer gets them all mixed by approved rules for mixing, but never getting mixed himself, this filling goes to the filler, who, though always engaged in filling, never gets full. Meanwhile another set of men have prepared the crust. A huge trough is partly filled with flour and lard; "shortening" is worked into it by a fellow dressed in white, with hair powdered and arms bare. This flour is next changed to a dough-like consistency by adding water as near freezing as possible to make it flaky and mixing it with the hands.

When the batch is ready it is taken to the men who roll it out and put it on the tin plates. The deftness and quickness with which this is done throws into the shade the work of a lightning change artist. Then the pie is filled, and this, too, is no slow operation. A long handled tin dipper, holding just enough to charge a pie, is seized in one hand by the operator and a pie in the other. With dexterous dip into the barrel of filling and a twist of the arm to lift and to invert the dipper over the pie the work is done. Another set of men in white put on the covers, and then the pie goes to the oven, which is a marvel. Quite likely its like suggested the Ferris wheel at the world's fair, for that follows its principals of construction quite closely. It is arranged so that a big wheel, at least 12 feet long and 16 in diameter, is suspended by its axle in a big oven, under which is a glowing fire. Hung from the rims of this wheel at equal distances from each other are eight iron platforms, upon which pies are placed. Such is the manner of suspension that they always remain horizontal. This wheel is revolved by power. One of the platforms is before the opening in the oven, which opening is as large as the wheel itself. The attendants cover this platform with pies, and the wheel is turned until the next comes into view, which is then filled, and soon until the eight have been supplied. The next turn brings into view the first lot put in, and they are ready to take out. They are removed and the platform filled again. The wheel turns, and another baked lot is presented, and so it goes on day after day, 1000 an hour taking their course over this pit of fire.—Boston Journal.

THEY WERE HOUSE CLEANING AT HOME.—To the stranger within the gates they came in deep solicitude, their faces beaming with kindness and hospitality.

"Can we do aught," they asked, "to make our humble abode seem more like home to you?"

"Yes."

He glanced hurriedly about the apartment.

"Hang these rugs," he commanded, decisively, "over the gas jet, put the piano out in the woodshed, place a pail of soapsuds in the middle of the parlor floor, and—"

His voice sank to a whisper.

"—a broken doughnut and a cold potato on the window sill. Thank you. You are very kind, I am sure."

He laughed a hollow, affected laugh and relapsed into silence.—Detroit Tribune.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulas and testimonials. Address, F. J. We wish to thank our friends and customers for their very generous patronage since our removal into the Caryl Block. It has been very gratifying to us to find that our endeavors to sell CHEAPER THAN OTHER STORE IN MASSACHUSETTS have been appreciated, and we shall endeavor in the future to break all records for selling goods cheap. No business house will sell goods cheaper than we do if we know it, for there are none who can afford to do it; our expenses are the smallest, we buy from first hands, take all the discounts to be had, and do not wish to get rich in a year. Our percentage of profit is less than any house has ever heard of, and taking these facts into consideration, who is there that can compete with our prices?

We shall endeavor to have in stock everything, but should we not have just the article, will obtain it for you in a day's time. We would respectfully invite an inspection of our many departments and a comparison of prices with any other house either in city or country.

Yours respectfully,

Of Public Interest.

A Matter Which is Exciting Much Talk.

It Concerns a Well-known and Prominent Family.

The Wife of an Honored and Respected Public Man Writes a Letter.

G. A. Williamson, Esq., has for thirty-five years been City Recorder of Deeds of Providence, R. I. During all this time he and his family have occupied a very prominent position in Providence, where they are held in the utmost regard and esteem by everybody. They reside at 8 Bradford street.

Mrs. Williamson has for a long time been a great sufferer. She has lately been cured of her complaints by a most remarkable remedy, and her love for her fellow-beings is such that she writes the following letter telling them just what to do to be well and strong:

"For some time I had been troubled with numbness of my hands and arms. It was very distressing and a constant annoyance to me. My nervous system was badly affected. I was unable to sleep, getting but very little rest at night. I suffered from indigestion and my appetite was very poor. I learned of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and hearing it most highly spoken of, determined to use it. It had helped so many despairing sufferers I believed it would help me. After taking the second bottle I noticed a marked improvement, and I continued to steadily gain in all respects. I cheerfully recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to all sufferers."

No wonder everybody is taking this remarkable medicine, for it is a known fact that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy always cures. If you have any such troubles, if your health is not exactly what it should be, take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make you well. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Don't neglect your health, but take his wonderful medicine now.

PINS.

Pick up that pin—let that account be correct to a farthing—find out what that ribbon costs before you say "you will take it"—pay that half dime your friend handed you to make change with—in a word, be economical, be accurate, know what you are doing, be honest and then be generous; for all you have or acquired thus belongs to you by every rule of right, and you may put it to any good use if you acquire it justly and honestly, for you have a foundation, a background which will always keep you above the waves of evil. It is not parsimonious to be economical. It is not selfish to be correct in your own dealings. It is not small to know the price of articles you are to purchase, or to remember the little debt you owe. What if you do meet Bill Pride decked out in a much better suit than yours, the price of which he has not learned from his tailor, and he laughs at your faded dress and your old fashioned notions of honesty and right, your day will come. Franklin, who from a saving boy, walking the street with a roll under his arm, became a companion for kings, says: "Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves." Sa Fitte, the celebrated French banker, leaving the house to which he had applied for a clerkship, was not too proud to pick up a pin. This simple pin laid the foundation of his immense wealth. The wise banker saw the act, called him back, and gave him employment, convinced by the seeming small circumstance, of his ability and honesty. Be just and then be generous. Yes, be just always and then you can always be generous.

Benevolence is a great duty, a heaven given privilege, by which you not only benefit the object, but feel a sensation of joy in your own soul which is worth more, far more, than gain. But you may not give your neighbor's goods.

Your own just earnings you should share with the needy, but generosity can never be measured by the amount you lavish on a fine dress, or that you spend with your friend to satisfy the requirements of vanity and folly.

What if they do pat you on the shoulder. They would do as much to any dog that would serve them. It is not the service, not yourself that gets the flattery, or you spend your money for naught certainly. Well, let the girl say you are small, rather than spend that dollar you need for a book. Get the book if it is a good one, it will tell you that no girl worth having ever selected a man for a husband for his long tailor and livery stable bills more than for his long cars.

RED HAIR.

Red-haired people have found an ardent apologist in a physiologist who ascribes red hair to a superabundance of iron in the blood. Red-haired people are, as a rule, we are told, more vigorous, more robust and more intense in their emotions than those whose hair is either black or of a nondescript color, and the reason which makes their hair red also causes this excess of vitality, elasticity and overflowing of healthy animal life. A "superabundance of iron" in the blood, according to this theory, is a good thing, especially when, as the writer asserts, it renders the skin more delicately white and makes it more liable to freckle with the heat of the sun. A dark-haired person rarely freckles, the reason being that owing to the absence of iron in the system the skin is sallow and incapable of being affected by the sun. Freckles, therefore, are indications of a "delicate white skin," just as red hair is the index of the presence of a "superabundance of iron in the blood."

THE NEW ATLANTIS.

Atlantis is the name that will hereafter dignify and distinguish a location in the Atlantic ocean about 16 miles east of the Highlands of Navesink and 13 miles south of the Long Island shore. The old and somewhat ill-favored title of "Cholera Banks" will surrender to that of the classical Atlantis of Grecian mythology. Here a palatial structure is at once to be erected on huge iron stilts.

The foundations of this building will consist of 36 iron cylinders 15 feet in diameter and 120 feet in length. These piles will extend 30 feet below the bed of the ocean, and will be secured to each other, according to the claim of the engineers, by girders, cross-bracings, and in other ways, so as to defy the mightiest storm that ever rolled in the Atlantic. After the great tubes have been placed in position they will be filled with concrete, and the foundation, as a whole, will represent three dozen iron-incased pyramids of rock, rising from a depth below the ocean-bed, and towering 30 feet above the level of the sea.

In the construction of the building wood and other inflammable material will not be used, but the entire super-structure will consist of bronze, steel, iron, glass, and tiling, thus making it fire proof in the fullest acceptation of the term. The style of architecture will be imposing. There is to be an ampitheater calculated to accommodate 15,000 people and a roof garden that will hold 3000. From the latter place will be witnessed a marine panorama of majestic trans-Atlantic liners passing near by, and every other character of water borne craft entering and leaving the greatest harbor of the Western world. Several private piazzas for permanent hotel guests and four extensive promenades are other features of the plans, which also calls for a fishing pavilion, telegraph and telephone offices, Turkish, Russian, and sea baths, a photograph gallery, and various bazars.

In order to protect themselves against the charge of erecting a menace to navigation, the promoters of the enterprise have given notice to the government that they will bind themselves to place a powerful reflecting light in the main tower of the building, and maintain it the year round.

The officers who will be responsible for the construction of this ocean hotel are Captain R. D. Evans, United States navy, in charge; James C. McGuier, engineer; Captain Howard Patterson, superintending engineer.

The consideration of creating a building out in the sea opens up a peculiar line of thought. As the structure will be situated more than a marine league from the nearest shore, the United States can exercise no jurisdiction over it. Atlantis may become an independent power, with every right, according to international law, to form its own laws. Thursday, June 14th, the flag of the New Atalantis was raised on a buoy anchored on the site selected, and a new autonomy was established on a submarine sand bank.—Harper's Weekly.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the liver and kidneys, will remove pimples, boils, salt rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all malarial fevers.—For cure of headache, constipation and indigestion try Electric Bitters.—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A FAIR REPORT.

Not long ago a resident of one of the small towns near New York came to the city to consult an eminent oculist, whose fee for a consultation is never less than $10. He was rather green in appearance, so the doctor, who is something of a wag, and who was in particularly fine spirits that morning, thought he saw an opportunity to have a little fun at the expense of his rural visitor.

In the course of the examination a prism was placed before the eye of the patient in order to test the muscles.

"Why, doctor," he exclaimed, "I see two candles!"

"Indeed," replied the doctor. "You are very fortunate."

"How so?"

"Why, just think what an advantage you have over the rest of us! You see everything double, and beautiful pictures, charming landscapes and lovely faces are all repeated to you, and you must get just so much more pleasure out of them."

When the examination was concluded, and the prescription for the proper glasses written, the man, without a smile, laid a $5 bill on the table, with the remark, "There, doctor—there's a $10 bill for you," and was gone in a moment, leaving the astonished physician to figure up the cost of his little pleasantry.—Harper's Magazine.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

There is not the least mystery about Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol. The proprietors are perfectly willing to tell what it is made of. First, the oil, of course. Then

Ozone,

a very active form of Oxygen,

full of healthful, healing properties, and finally Guaiacol or purified creosote, made from the resin of beechwood. United in a compound pleasant to take and certain to be retained on the stomach, these three foes to disease cure consumption.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

THE SLAVE'S STORY.

It is About a Rebellion that Ended in Flat Failure.

The wise old slave, Æsop, tells how the jaws and the arms refused to supply and to grind food for the stomach which, they said, was a lazy thing living on its neighbors. Of course the rebellious members suffered and grew weak As what we call science did not exist in Æsop's day, it isn't likely that even he understood the full force of this fable.

We understand to-day the supreme importance of treating the stomach well, for the consequences of indigestion extend from the brain to the toes. Because of bad digestion, there are so many skinny, pale, bloodless men and women in the world. Nothing will fatten and strengthen them unless they can find a food that will pass from the stomach into the blood without digestion. Paskola is such a pre-digested food.

"It gives me great pleasure," says Dr. G. W. Babcock, of Chelsea, Mass., "to speak in the highest terms of your delightful preparation, Paskola. I have lately prescribed it for one of my lady patients, and I am greatly surprised at its wonderful power as a flesh producer. The young lady had been out of health and losing flesh. She began to take Paskola as directed. Her weight was 103 pounds. She has taken four bottles and now weighs 109 pounds, and is looking much improved. She says she feels like a new creature. The change has been brought about by Paskola."

Another physician's testimony:

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 21, 1894.

Gentlemen:—The bottle of Paskola received a week ago to-day and I immediately commenced the use of it, in connection with Poland water. I am feeling very much better and have increased 1¾ pounds. During the eight days use of Paskola, no eructions of gas, in fact seeming perfect digestion. If this condition continues, I shall be a devotee of Paskola and will prescribe it when indicated by my patients.

Sincerely yours. E. M. MANWAREN, M. D.

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable retail druggist, and a pamphlet fully descriptive will be mailed upon application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 39 Reade St., New York.
O. P. ALLEN, Palmer, Mass.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—John Davies of this city took a severe cold and suffered pain through the back and kidneys. His physician pronounced his case gravel, and failed to help him. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was recommended, and after taking two bottles he considered himself cured. It cures rheumatism and neuralgia also. 24

INTRODUCING

A. A. Shepherd and Dr. Scott.

THE GREAT NEW YORK SPECIALIST —THE DOCTOR PREVAILED UPON TO HAVE HIS GREAT REMEDY PLACED IN THE HANDS OF THE DRUGGISTS.

This is the most wonderful production of medical science in the nineteenth century. This is not a patent medicine, but a prescription compounded on scientific principles and used by Dr. Scott in his extensive practice for the cure of all blood diseases. The cures wrought by it are simply wonderful, and attracted thousands to the doctor's parlors for treatment.

To such an extent is the demand upon the time and attention of the doctor for this medicine from people who could not visit New York city that it became a matter of duty to devise some plan by which the general public could be supplied with this genuine valuable remedy, and for this purpose A. A. Shepherd has been called to arrange with LeGro & Lynde of Palmer, to permit them to keep in stock and sell this wonderful blood remedy. This is purely vegetable, an excellent tonic and builder, a blood purifier unexcelled, a nerve tonic nothing can equal. Dr. Scott has devoted his life to the thorough knowledge and understanding of blood diseases.

A few of which are named here: Kidney disease, liver complaint, sick headache, muscular rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, constipation, scrofula, syphilis, cancerous humors, pain in bones, catarrh, salt rheum, pimples on face, general debility, boils, dizziness, female weakness, malarial poison.

The above named druggists have received their first consignment, and wouldi nvite all persons to call and become acquainted with the merits of a perfect remedy. Dr. Scott's medicine, when placed in drug stores is sold under the name of Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla, and all who intend taking a spring medicine should not fail to try Dr. Scott's Sarsaparilla. No pills have to be used with Dr. Scott's.

Gardens.

The wide fair gardens, the rich lush gardens,
Which no man planted, and no man tills,
Their strong seeds drifted, their brave bloom lifted,
Near and far o'er the vales and hills;
Sip the bees from their cups of sweetness,
Poises above them the wild free wing,
And night and morn from their doors are borne
The dreams of the tunes that blithe hearts sing.

The waving gardens, the fragrant gardens
That toss in the sun by the broad highway,
Growing together, gorse and heather,
Aster and golden-rod all the day.
Poppies dark with the wine of slumber,
Daisies bright with the look of dawn,
The gentian blue, and the long year through
The flowers that carry the season on.

And the dear old gardens, the pleasant gardens
Where mother used to potter about,
Trying and pulling, and sparingly culling,
And watching each bud as its flower laughed out;
Hollyhocks here, and prince's feather,
Larkspur and primrose, and lilies white.
Sweet were the dear old-fashioned gardens
Where we kissed the mother, and said, "Good-night."

AN UNEXPECTED DELIVERANCE.

Count Clairville had just given in marriage his only daughter Yolande to the Marquis of Kergonet, an old and proud Briton family.

The ceremony was over, and the church doors were flung open, displaying the high altar decorated with flowers and lights, and in the garlanded doorway appeared the young pair, while the bells pealed joyously. All nature seemed to be in festal attire, for the sweet odors of spring filled the air, the wild birds were singing merrily, and the sunbeams fell like a halo across the foreheads of the bride and groom. She was fair and graceful, and in her white gown and veil seemed like an angel strayed from heaven; the bride-groom, noble and gallant, looked with love unutterable at the fair girl who leaned upon his arm.

The country people were dressed in their Sunday clothes, the men wearing rosettes in their button-holes, the women with lillies-of-the-valley in their bodices, and all waved flowering hawthorne branches, and made the air ring with acclamations.

"Long live Mademoiselle Yolande! Long live the bride! God bless our sweet young lady!" they cried, and from time to time they added, "Long live the Marquis!"

The church of Clairville overlooked the village, being built on a rocky eminence, and was approached by a steep winding path and stairway; rich and poor, noble and simple, dead and living, all must enter the church by way of "Paradise Road." The wedding party, glittering in gold and silver and velvet, and followed by the cheering crowd, walked down this rustic pathway to where the carriages were waiting, and the bride-groom, pleased by the enthusiasm of the people and their evident affection for his bride, said to her tenderly:

"You see, my love, how dear you are to these people. They will never forget you. I fear they owe me a grudge for stealing their good angel from them."

The bride smiled and raised her sweet eyes to his face for a moment, and then she turned to her father, saying:

"It is such a beautiful day, papa; may we not walk home?"

"Certainly, dear, if you wish it," he replied, glad of the opportunity of pleasing his child, from whom he must soon be parted; and accordingly the bridal pair and all the young persons of the party walked through the village to the chateau of Clairville, which was situated at the other end, while the dowagers and other persons followed in their carriages.

Yolande, leaning on her husband's arm, stopped repeatedly at the humble cottages where the poor old men and women, whom age or infirmity rendered unable to go out, were waiting in their doorways to see the bride pass. For each one she had a word or a smile, and many a trembling hand and weak, thin voice was raised to bless her.

The joyous procession now reached a turn in the road and came to a standstill, being met by a funeral party. It was a very poor affair; there was no coronet emblazoned on the white pall, which covered the corpse of a youngmaiden, and not a flower was seen there, not a single blossom, in spite of the warm spring time! Behind the bier a poorly clad man, the only mourner, walked slowly, look ing, with his head bent and his eyes covered with his hands, a picture of despairing grief. At sight of the Clairville wedding party the bier stopped and would have turned out of the road, but the mourner raised his head and gazed fiercely at the passing throng, who, with their rich gala clothing and smiling faces, seemed to offer insult to sorrow.

"Go on!" he said in a hoarse voice, to the porters, as if he would like to crush the fine lords and ladies beneath his feet, but the men did not stir. Then the count stepped forward, saying gravely:

"Respect the dead, friends! Fall back and let the bier pass."

He was instantly obeyed, and the funeral moved on past the gorgeously attired throng, which made way reverently, the ladies crossing themselves and the lords removing their hats. As the bier passed the bride she was filled with pity at the sight of the young still form under the white pall, and taking a sprig of orange blossoms out of her bouquet she laid it tenderly upon the bier. The stern mourner saw the act, and his expression softened a little; then, covering his face again, he broke into sobs.

"Who is that man?" asked Count Clairville.

"I don't know, my lord," replied the man addressed. "He is a stranger. He came to the inn a few days ago with his sister. She was almost dead, as any one could see. He seemed to love her very much, and when she died, he cursed like a heretic and shook his fist at heaven. This morning I told him it was too early to have the funeral, and that he ought to give the clergyman time to change his stole after the wedding, but he would not listen to me."

The bridal party moved on, and soon the merry peals of the church bells were changed to a mournful tolling, as the bier passed under the gay floral decorations of the door.

"Who is that young lady?" asked the mourner of a bystander.

"The bride? That is Mademoiselle Yolande de Clairville," and the stranger murmured softly:

"May she always be happy!"

Then he went into the church.

Twenty years passed and the Reign of Terror began. In La Vendee the war was at its height, when the Convention sent one of its members to Nantes, with instructions to take swift and violent measures against the royalists.

Accordingly this man, Carrier by name, caused a large number of "suspects" to be confined in the Entrepot, a building near the Cathedral of St. Pierre; men, women and children were hustled pell-mell into this ante-chamber of the River Loire, and, in spite of the daily drownings, the prison was ever thronged with victims.

In a large, low hall the terrible proconsul presided at the mock trials. The prisoners were divided into two parties, the accused and the condemned; the form r group diminished rapidly as the latter increased, and at last Carrier resolved to hurry the proceedings by dispensing with all formality in disposing of the victims.

Then the fatal words, "Condemned to death!" were heard repeatedly, as the Royalists were hurried across the hall.

"Henri de Kergonet!" called the clerk, and a young man about eighteen years of age left his companions and advanced toward the tribunal. He bowed to the judge with as much ease and grace as if he were in the Court in Versailles, and seemed to be unconscious of the fact that a cruel death awaited him.

"You are accused of conspiring against the Republic in the person of its representative," said Carrier; "you took part in a plot against my life."

The youth turned a frank, fearless pair of eyes toward the speaker, and answered slowly:

"I owe my father's death to you. I always pay my debts."

"Henri!" cried a woman's voice entreatingly.

Carrier cast a furious glance ar ound him, and then Henry de Kergonet was hurried away. Two women now stood before the judge who asked of the elder one:

"Are you the mother of that young man?"

"I am," she answered; "and this girl is his sister."

"Your name?"

"Yolande de Clairville, Marquise de Kergonet."

The judge looked fixedly at the speaker for a minute, then declared the investigation at an end, and added briefly:

"Condemned to death, all three."

The doomed were now led back to their dungeons, and at nine o'clock at night the executions began. Tied together, two by two, the unfortunates were thrown into boats, taken out on the river, and despatched with sword or bayonet, and their bodies cast into the water. This method, however, soon proved too slow to satisfy Carrier, and he caused hundreds of his victims to be driven out to a neighboring quarry and shot.

The Marquise de Kergonet and her two children were awaiting their doom in silence, when the jailor entered their cell and ordered the daughter to follow him.

"Why must we be separated!" cried the mother.

"Citizen Carrier's orders," replied the man. "Be quick!"

After a long and tearful embrace the young girl left her mother and brother, and followed the jailor into the presence of the dreadful proconsul, who looked at her earnestly, and, when they were left alone, asked slowly:

"What is your name?"

"Yvonne de Kergoute."

"Do you love your mother?"

"Ah, yes, monsieur!" replied the girl trembling with terror.

"And your brother; what would you do to save his life?"

"I would gladly give my own life!" cried Yvonne.

"I do not want your life, child, but your silence. How old are you?"

"Sixteen years, monsieur."

"Then you have not yet learned to lie. Listen to me. Here is a letter which I confide to you on conditions of your promising me that it shall not be opened until midnight. Moreover, you are not to speak of it to any one. Have I your promise? Very well. Go!"

The frightened girl took the letter, put it into her bosom and was taken back to the cell, but before she had time to reply to the anxious questioning with which her mother and brother greeted her, a man appeared, carrying a pistol, signed to them all to follow him, and led them out of the prison. Then imposing the strictest silence upon them, he gave his arm to Yvonne, while Henri de Kergouet supported his mother's trembling form. In a few minutes the little party reached the river bank, after hurrying through the dark streets of the city, and the Royalists realized at a glance that they were not far from the spot where the executions of that day had taken place. The guide gave a signal, and a man in a boat instantly made his appearance from out of the gloom.

"Get in," said the boatman, in a low tone, and as soon as they were seated, he rowed out into the middle of the stream.

"Be brave, little sister," whispered Henri, clasping Yvonne to his heart, and then they all waited calmly for their last hour to come. In a few brief moments they seemed to live their whole lives over, to feel again the joys and sorrows of their early childhood, as well as their recent trials and alarms. Suddenly they saw in the distance the outline of a ship dimly defined against the dark sky; they approached it rapidly, and before they had recovered from their amazement found themselves on board, while their late conductor rowed back to the shore.

"What does this mean?" asked Henri, after an astonished pause.

"That you are saved!" replied the captain of the ship.

"Saved? How?" By whom?"

"That is more than I can tell you, madame. All I know of the matter is that a few hours ago I received a large sum of money and an order to wait here for three passengers who wished to go to England. The order was accompanied by a safe-conduct signed by the proconsul, Carrier. In a few days we shall, with a good wind, be in sight of the English coast."

The little family, hardly able to believe their ears, looked at each other in wondering delight, and Madam de Kergouet murmured with a prayer of thanksgiving:

"Who can our unknown friend be?"

Then Yvonne suddenly asked the captain what the hour was.

"It is just half-past twelve, mademoiselle," he answered, and the girl hastily drew out the letter she had received, tore it open, and read the first line:

"To Mademoiselle Yolande de Clairville."

"It is for you, mamma," she said, giving it to her mother; but the marquise signed her son to read it aloud. It ran as follows:

"Twenty years ago, on your wedding day, you laid a flower from your bridal bouquet on my sister's coffin. She was just sixteen years old. I wish to pay my debt, and in return for your flower give you three lives.—Carrier.

ALL HOPE LOST.—Margaret, aged, is afflicted with embonpoint. She is, in fact, so stout that she can hardly play with other girls of her age, because of the sharpness of their remarks and the shortness of her own breath. Margery, having not yet learned that even the gods fight not against necessity, is therefore inclined to rebel against the decree of fate, and even to murmur a little in her prayers. But being a pious child, she is accustomed to read the Bible and apply its maxims to her daily life. One day this week, after spending a whole hour over a single chapter, she came to her mother and announced with a sigh that she thought she couldn't pray any more to be thin.

"But why?" queried her mother.

"Cause God won't like it," responded Margery.

"But why won't he like it?"

"Why, don't you know? When He was awful generous, He promised the children of Israel that they should be blessed with fatness."—Boston Budget.

STOPPING A RUN ON A BANK.

A man whose hair is now snow white, and whose activity long ago gave place to the slowness and feebleness of old age, tells a story of how, over thirty years, in fact, nearly forty years ago, in the days of the gold fever on the Pacific coast, he stopped a run on a bank by quickwittedness, nerve and boldness.

"The bank was perfectly solvent," he says, "but one of those wild rumors that used to float over mining towns insisted that I had no gold, and that the deposits could never be made good. The run started one afternoon just before the hour for closing, and it was pretty exciting, I tell you. Those miners were all armed, and they swarmed around the house, swearing, shouting and howling desperately. We continued to pay out money up to the usual hour for closing, and then we stopped. It was just about time to stop, too, for our gold was nearly exhausted.

"We drove the people out of the bank and posted a big notice on the door:

"'This bank will open at the usual hour in the morning.'

"They cheered at that, but they did not disperse, and leaving an armed guard in the bank I went home to think over some possible way of avoiding a collapse. This was the plan I had to follow; it was a slim chance, but my only one. Over in S——, another town, I had another bank, no better off for ready gold than this one. I was interested in a stage tine, and among the property which I had acquired in a 'dicker' was a load of wagon-washers. They were stored over in S——. I set out at a gallop for S——, had four horses hitched to a stage-coach, filled several gunny-bags with washers and loaded them on the coach. The bluff did not stop there. Inside and on top of the coach I placed half a dozen men armed to the teeth, to guard the immense treasure.

"We went out of S—— at a sharp trot before daylight, and arrived at my besieged bank shortly before the time for opening. When the crowd saw the well-filled sacks they cheered like mad, but I did not say a word. I had half the guards clear a passageway, and then, while the armed men carefully watched the crowd, the sacks of washers were transferred to the vault—it was a brick and sheet-iron affair, on the same floor with the desks—while the crowd cheered and cheered.

"When the doors were thrown open for business I came out on the steps.

"'Boys!' I shouted, 'I don't know how much of a run you are going to make on this bank, and so I have prepared for you. All I have to say is start right in. There are plenty of full sacks in this bank, and we can get more if we need them. The bank is now open for business.'

"Well, those boys lifted the hair of my head with their yelling, and there was no run. A few cautious people withdrew their deposits, but we were able to pay them without having to open our sacks of washers—fortunately for us."—New York Tribune

HOW MUCH MISSIONARIES COST.

The Rev. Dr. S. L. Baldwin, recording secretary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has prepared an interesting paper, presenting in tabular form the practical provision made for missionaries in regard to salaries, outfits, allowances, houses, furloughs, etc., by the several great Foreign Mission Boards. Dr. Baldwin was commissioned to prepare this statement by representatives of 21 of the foreign missionary societies of the United States and Canada. The maximum allowance of any of the societies for the original outfit of a single man is $300, the lowest being $75. As a rule the allowances to single women are less than those of men, but in the cases of four of the societies they are either equal to or greater than the same society grants to the men, the maximum being $300. Allowance to married couples are usually about twice as much as to single men and women. In addition to the allowance for outfit, some of the boards make a still further allowance for a certain amount of freight which the missionary is permitted to take.

Salaries of foreign missionaries are regulated in great measure by the cost of living in the countries to which they are assigned. From the tables furnished it would seem that Mexico and South America are the most expensive countries to live in, for higher average salaries are paid to the missionaries stationed there than in any other land, the maximum being $2160 to married couples, the lowest being $1500. In Japan the maximum salary to married couples is $1500. In Corea, $1350; in Siam, Malay, Micronesia, New Hebrides and Ceylon, $1380; in China (Central), $1750; in India, $2475; in Egypt, Syria, Turkey, Bulgaria and Persia, $1826; in Africa, $1500. In nearly every instance especial allowances are made for the children of the missionaries. Allowances for a refit to missionaries returning to the field after a furlough are granted in some instances, but not generally.

A SMALL KINDNESS.

Many years ago, when sewing machines were in their infancy, if indeed they had been invented, a little elderly bachelor entered the parlor of his boarding-house and in a way peculiar to himself made this request:

"Which of you ladies will hem a couple of handkerchiefs for me?"

There was a well bred sniff of disapproval, but not one assenting voice. The only one who broke the silence recommended him to a seamstress who attended to such work.

"It's pretty lonesome to have no women folk belonging to you," said the old bachelor, "but I guess I can get along. Thank you, ladies, for your kindness," and he bowed himself out.

At the same moment a timid hand detained him, and a low voice said in his ear:

"Leave them with me. I—I will see that they are hemmed neatly. I have a friend who will do them—for company."

"Take them," said the old bachelor gruffly; "much obliged, I'm sure."

She was a gentlewoman, although she sewed for a living, as all women did who did not teach school.

She replied not to the jeers of her companions when she sat in the parlor at her work, except to say that it was a small thing to do for a fellow being.

"But he is a miser," they persisted. Nevertheless the handkerchiefs were hemmed and returned to the owner, who did not offer to pay for them, but did within the year marry the gentle soul who hemmed them.

The thereafter of their married life reads like a fairy story. Both have passed away from the prosperity which surrounded them, but in the heart of the city of Boston there is a marble block that was built with the accumulated interest of the fortune bequeathed to their son, who is no other than Montgomery Sears, the millionaire. This story, unlike most stories, is true.

PEACH FOAM.—Peel seven or eight large, ripe peaches, rub them through a sieve, add one-quarter pound of powdered sugar and one-half ounce of gelatine (which has been dissolved), and mix quickly with a pint of whipped cream. If the fruit cannot be obtained in a sufficiently ripe condition, boil with the sugar in a little water until soft enough to pass thorugh the sieve. Serve ice cold.

A Song Of Harvest.

Reap, oh reap! gather and reap,
Where golden ripples laugh and run,
For the hush of noontide, still and deep,
Lies on the ripened ears like sleep,
Where cornlands greet the sun.

Lift up your weary eyes, behold
The golden fields, the golden air;
The west wind flecks the swaying gold
With light and shadow manifold,
And gold gleams everywhere.

Reap, oh reap! While the sickles sing
The harvest song of a world at rest;
Reap with a rhythmic sweep and swing
Till silence falls with evening,
And peace is manifest.

Lift up your joyful eyes and see
The silver night, with gliding feet
Move from the sunset glimmeringly,
And, priestess of God's ministry,
Hallow the garnered wheat.

WEDDING LORE.

Many customs and superstitions connected with the very important event of marriage, handed down from olden times, while still observed, are little understood as regards origin, etc. The word "wedding" comes from the Anglo-Saxon "wed" which represents the securities placed by the grooms in the hands of trustees, as a dower for the future protection of the young girl leaving the tender care of parents for a new and untried life. The amount was in accordance with the financial circumstances of the groom's family, and in addition, a gift was bestowed either of jewels or ornaments of silver or gold.

A wedding ring in early days was considered so necessary to make marriage vows binding that parties too poor to buy it rented it for the occasion. Great antiquity surrounds the little circlet, as Henry Swinburne, in the seventeenth century, claimed that "it was designed by Prometheus, fashioned from iron and stone by Tubal-Cain, and given to Adam that with it he might bind unto himself a wife." Rings made from rushes find later mention, but alas! must have been too often typical of the love-vows they sealed—quickly broken. Silver rings succeeded them and some, still preserved, are odd and pretty, with devices of clasped hands, arrow-pierced hearts, and inscribed within little sentiments then quaintly termed "posies." Gold soon became the accepted metal and the plain band the universal form of the marriage ring then as now.

Of Danish origin is the "bridal-favor," and the "true-lover's knot," which has been such a craze in ornaments and decorations recently. How sweet and musical the word "truefola," from which it comes, meaning "I plight three my troth."

The throwing of the slipper for good luck undoubtedly came from a more serious and less pleasing ceremony. In past ages the shoe was an emblem of authority, and marriage, to women, a sort of slavery, hence the father in transferring his gifts to the husband, gave a shoe. Modern fathers would hesitate to countenance an alliance that held possibilities of rule or severity for their indulged idolized daughters.

In the fair hands of Roman brides in the long ago, were held three heads of wheat, and centuries later, chaplets of grain encircled the brow of English girls at the alter of Hymen. Showers of grain and bits of cake afterward succeeded this custom, and then the "bride's loaf" was broken over the heads of the newly-wedded pair. Finally, in the eighteenth century, came the "wedding cake," very much in its present form, and cut and eaten at the marriage feast then as now. In England this cake is a tower of magnificence, in its proportions and ornamentations, those at royal wedding day especially beautiful and fabulous in price.

In choosing the wedding day a little verse has been authority, and is so familiar it scarcely requires repetition;

Monday for wealth,
Tuesday for health,
Wednesday the best day of all;
Thursday for crosses,
Friday for losses,
Saturday no luck at all!

Present caprice seems to defy superstition, Thursday and Saturday being the favorite and fashionable days to wed. "To be lucky," the bride is exhorted to wear on the important occasion

Something old, something new,
Something borrowed, something blue.

And "in going into church the right foot must be first." The shower of rice and old slippers must not be forgotten, to insure a happy future. A very old but sensible custom seems to have passed away in viz., at the words, "with all my worldly goods I thee endow," the groom "poured many pieces of gold and silver coin into the handkerchief of the bride" to emphasize his vow. The marriage calendar declares May the most fatal, and June and October the most fortunate months, and also claims that it is an exceedingly rash couple who will

Marry in Lent
And live to repent.

To be warned is to be forearmed, but neither luck, wealth or superstition can secure the coveted happiness. To gain this they must be for all time henceforth

Each for the other.
And both for God.

"MUST" AND "MUSN'T."—"A fellow can't have any fun," growled Tom. "It's just 'must' and 'musn't' from morning till night. You must do this, you must learn that, or you musn't go there, you must say that, and you musn't do the other thing. At school you are just tied right up to rules; at home—well a shake of mother's head means more than a dozen 'musn'ts'. Seems a pity a boy can't have his own way half the time and do something as he likes."

"Going to the city this morning, Tom?" asked Uncle Thad from the adjoining room.

"Why, of course," answered Tom, promptly.

"Going across the common?"

"Yes, sir; always do."

"I wish you'd notice those young trees they've been setting out the last year or two. There's something rather queer, it seems to me. Of course the old trees will die sooner or later, and others will be needed, but—well, you must observe them carefully, so as to describe their appearance, etc."

"What about those trees, Tom?" asked Uncle Thad after tea, as they sat on the piazza.

"Why, they're all right; looked a little cramped, to be sure, snipped off short on top and tied up to poles, snug as you please, every identical twig of them; but that's as it should be, to make them ship-shape—don't you see? They can't grow crooked if they would. They'll make as handsome trees as ever you saw, one of these days. Haven't you noticed the trees in Mr. Benson's yard?—tall and scraggy and crooked, just because they were left to grow as they pleased. The city fathers now don't propose to run any risks"—

"But I wonder how the trees feel about the must and musn't," remarked Uncle Thad dryly.

Exit Tom, wishing he had not said quite so much on the subject of trees—and boys.—Sunday Afternoon.

"Did Miss Gotrox's father try to draw you out while you were there last night?"

"Draw me out? Great Scott, man! He was behind me; not in front!"—Buffalo Courier.

LOCAL NOTICES.

CARD.—Having decided to again engage in the Boot and Shoe business in Palmer, I have rented a store in the Nassowanno block, which I expect to open next week with a complete stock of goods in every line. In cancelling my obligation with Mr. W. A. Weld I have bought a portion of his stock, which I propose to close out at a sacrifice.

PALMER NEWS.

The Coming Season at the Factory of the Rogers–Osgood Hat Co.

The winter season at the factory of the Rogers–Osgood Hat Co. will begin the 24th, and the prospects are most excellent for a busy season, which will gratify many people in this vicinity, as the works will give employment to about 100 hands. Forty sewing machines will be started to commence with. The firm manufactures only the middle and lower grades of straw goods, for both sexes, but some idea of the variety of their output may be imagined from the fact that they have over 800 styles to present this year, samples of which have been made and are now in the market.

The business of this firm was moved to Palmer only last year from Barre, after a partial destruction of their plant there by fire. The present factory is one of the best equipped for the business of any in this section, being built especially for the straw business, and is highly spoken of by men from all quarters, whose experience covers a wide range in such matters. The plant consists of a main brick building 40 by 70 feet, three stories, the first being occupied by a pressing room, the second by the trimming department, and the third being devoted to the sewing hall. Adjoining is an L 24 by 36, two stories, the lower containing the machine shop, and the upper a well-equipped office, both public and private. At the west end of the main building is a wood annex 65 by 120, three stories, the lower being used for storage purposes, the sizing and blocking rooms being on the second floor, and the third being given up to the brimming and packing and the storage of the finished goods. A box shop 30 by 45, two stories, is located a short distance from the main building, the upper story being connected with the shipping room by a bridge for convenience in transferring boxes. Power is furnished by an 80-horse power boiler and two engines. The facility with which goods can be shipped is an important factor; the Boston and Albany and the Central Vermont tracks run to the doors of the storehouse, and direct shipments can thus be made to all Western points.

The men at the head of this business are J. Andrew Rogers, Jesse A. Rogers, and W. H. Osgood, who carry with them a large experience which augurs well for the success of the firm and the excellence of their manufacture. Mr. J. Andrew Rogers has been in the business for over 50 years, starting in Barre in 1842 in the firm of Desper & Rogers. He has charge of the sorting, grading and putting up of the goods. In 1878 his son, Jesse A., was taken into the firm after an experience of a number of years in the works at Barre, and now looks after the office work and the freight. Mr. Osgood purchased Mr. Desper's interest in 1888, and looks after the order department.

The entire product of this house is handled by Connett, Reed & Co., 17, 19, 21 and 23 Waverly Place, N. Y., and among the trade the name of this house is a sufficient guarantee that the goods which they handle are reliable and first-class. The firm also carries large lines of wool hats and Scotch caps, and buyers can find at this house almost anything in the line of headgear. The straw goods department is in charge of D. D. Rutan, who is ably assisted by W. B. Dean, both familiar with the straw goods trade by reason of long experience; energetic, and hustlers to get their share of whatever trade is going.

The Coming Cattle Show.

Pleasant weather is what the directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society are hoping for next Tuesday and Wednesday, when the forty-second annual cattle show and fair will be held on the grounds of the society on South Main street. A good deal of hard work has been put into the arrangements and the prospects for a good fair are promising. Bearing in mind the balloon ascension farce of last year, a contract for an ascension and parachute drop each day has been made with Jewell Brothers, who have a wide reputation for successful work in this line. They made three ascensions and drops at Stafford last year, and may be depended upon next week. Three trotting races are announced for each day, on Tuesday the gentlemen's driving class, to see which can drive a mile nearest 4½ minutes, the 3-minute class for Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville horses only, and the 2.40 class. The 3-minute class should be an exciting one, as there are several horses in the different villages which show speed enough to enter this class. On Wednesday there will be the 2.50 class for horses owned in Palmer, Monson, Ludlow, Brimfield, Wilbraham, Hampden, Wales, Holland, Belchertown, Ware and Warren, the 2.35 and 2.30 classes. Entries are already being made in the 2.50 class. An amusing feature of Tuesday's program will be the peg race, when the contestants will be required to unharness horse from wagon, remove the harness and place it on a peg, put halter on horse and lead the animal once around the wagon, replace the harness and attach horse to wagon again, then drive once around the track. The four who are the most speedy in unharnessing will be given the prizes; the time in driving around the track is not to count. Four prizes are offered for the best decorated bicycle and most graceful rider, the contestants to appear Wednesday afternoon, and if the young ladies do as well as they did in the Fourth of July parade, the sight will be a pleasing one. A new building has been erected for the poultry exhibit, which has increased year after year to large proportions, until the showing at Palmer excels that of many more pretentious towns and larger societies. The entries of cattle are numerous, and a large number is assured. Some fine horseflesh is also sure to be on hand for the second day. Undoubtedly the hall exhibits, both upper and lower, will be large. Applications are already being made by merchants and others for space in which to exhibit their wares, and more will probably be made later. William Merriam has charge of renting the ground, G. H. Fisherdick will be superintendent of the lower hall, and Mrs. J. F. Holbrook of the upper hall. The programme will be carried out as follows:

TUESDAY.

9.00 a. m. Meeting of Marshals. Gates open to visitors.
9.30 Judging of Cattle, Classes Nos. 1 to 13, inclusive.
10.30 Exhibition of Draft and Farm Horses.
11.00 Walking Oxen on track.
12.00 m. Dinner.
1.00 p. m. Members' Trotting Class, to trot nearest to 4¼ minutes, mile heat.
1.15 Peg Race.
2.00 Trotting Races. Class 25. Not having made better time than 3 minutes. For horses owned in Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike, and Bondsville.
Class 26. Not having made better time than 2.40.
3.00 Grand Balloon Ascension and Parachute Leap, by Jewell Brothers.

WEDNESDAY.

9.00 a. m. Gates open to visitors.
9.30 Judging Horses.
11.00 Single and Pairs Carriage Horses will exhibit on track.
12.00 m. Dinner.
1.00 p. m. Bicycle Parade of Young Ladies.
1.30 Trotting races called.
2.50 Class. Trotting or pacing, for horses owned in Palmer, Monson, Ludlow, Brimfield, Wilbraham, Hampden, Wales, Holland, Belchertown, Ware and Warren.
2.35 Class. Trotting or pacing.
2.30 Class. Trotting or pacing.
3.30 Balloon Ascension and Parachute Leap by Jewell Brothers.

The price of admission has been put at 35 cents for each day, and the custom of giving members passes for the first day will be omitted this year, they being required to pay the same as others.

The Baptist church has chosen these delegates to attend the meetings of the Westfield Baptist Association at Agawam next week: C. B. Fiske, E. B. Taylor, A. E. Fitch, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. W. J. Smith.

The bicycle races at Springfield were well patronized by Palmer people Wednesday and Thursday, 144 tickets being sold at this station, besides which many attended who traveled to and from the city on mileage books.

The wooden awning over the entrance to the store of Mrs. L. E. Carpenter on Main street has been removed, improving the appearance of the block and admitting more light to the store. Only one more remains on Main street.

The interior finish and fittings for the stores of Robinson & Taylor and O. P. Allen in Holden's new block will be furnished by W. G. Bell & Co. of Boston, and they will be finished in ash. The plate glass for the windows has arrived.

The civil case of F. E. Fiske of Monson against Joseph LaBonte of Palmer for action of contract, involving a lot of wood, was tried in the district court last Saturday and decision rendered for the plaintiff, with costs, the amount being $76.79.

Lillian and Frank, 12 and 13, children of Mrs. Jane Smith, living near the wire mill, were brought before the court Wednesday as neglected children, and their cases continued until to-morrow, bail for their appearance being furnished by Edward King.

A new furnace is to be placed in the cellar of the Congregational church, one of the two now doing duty having given out on account of age and hard usage, having been too small for the work required of it. W. H. Hitchcock has the contract.

The Boston and Albany road announces its annual excursion to Albany, down the Hudson to New York, thence via the Fall River line to Boston, for Tuesday, October 9th. Only $5 for the round trip. For particulars address A. S. Hanson, general passenger agent, Boston.

The following were delegates to the Prohibition convention held at Worcester last week: Rev. G. Butler of Three Rivers, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Parent of Bondsville, Mrs. L. M. Shaw, William Merriam, G. W. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard Lawrence and C. W. Bennett of Palmer.

The Republican caucuses are called for next Tuesday evening at 7.30 at the town house, and delegates to all the conventions will be named at that time, instead of holding another caucus for the choice of delegates to the representative convention, as has been the custom heretofore.

The school in the Mason district, which the school committee did not intend to open this term on account of the scarcity of scholars, has by reason of a sudden influx of students been commenced, in charge of Miss Agnes M. James, a graduate of the Salem Normal School. There are 13 in attendance.

E. Goodes has opened his new shoe store on the corner of Main and Thorndike streets, and now has very pleasant quarters. A large and well-lighted salesroom, newly painted and papered, occupies the corner of the building, back of which is the repair shop, with a large storeroom in the rear.

A roadcart containing two men under the influence of liquor was upset on the lower end of Thorndike street about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A bystander jumped on the horse's head and held it down until the animal could be unharnessed from the cart, which was badly smashed, but no further damage resulted.

Housewives who desire to can peaches had better do it at once, as the crop is on the wane. Fine peaches have been in the market this week at from $1.50 to $1.75 a basket for either Crawfords or white peaches. While there will be some next week, probably, neither the quality nor quantity will equal that of this week.

At the meeting of the W. C. T. U. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. S. T. Frost was chosen delegate to the state convention at Fitchburg, to be held next week. Arrangments were completed for the dining tent which the union will have on the fair grounds next Tuesday and Wednesday. The tent will be much larger than last year, and they propose to give an excellent dinner for 25 cents to all who will patronize them.

The Coney Island excursionists were run on a sandbar in New London harbor on their return trip Monday morning, and the train was somewhat late in reaching Palmer in consequence. The accident happened during a heavy fog, but the steamer had nearly stopped at the time and few of the passengers knew the boat had struck. It was only a short distance from the shore, and the passengers were all landed in boats in a short time.

Sunday and Monday were as uncomfortable days as we have had this summer, on account of the heat. Between 1 and 2.30 Monday afternoon the atmosphere closely resembled that of an oven. There was a good breeze, but it seemed to come direct from a furnace, so dry was it. The air commenced to cool off a little then, and by 5 was quite comfortable, thanks to the showers about us, none of which reached Palmer, however.

At a meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of St. Paul's Universalist church Sunday evening the following officers were elected: President, Miss Elizabeth Wassum; vice president, Edwin C. Gould; secretary and treasurer, Edwin E. Brooks; flower committee, Mrs. W. W. Leach, Miss Bertha Royce, Miss Clara Moffatt, Miss Clara French; social, Miss Ola Northrop, Miss Bessie Royce, Miss Eloise Stone, W. W. Leach; lookout, Miss Ethel Ely, George Sumner, Miss Sarah Moulton, Mrs. H. A. Northrop; executive committee, Miss Elizabeth Wassum, Edwin C. Gould, Edwin E. Brooks, Mrs. W. W. Leach, Miss Ola Northrop, Miss Ethel Ely, Rev. H. F. Moulton.

The coupon for part 31 of "Glimpses of America" will be found at the foot of the last column on this page. This part is the last of the series, any or all of which can now be obtained at this office. The work is an entertaining and valuable one, giving illustrations of every part of America, from the most southern to the extreme northern boundaries, and from Maine to California. These illustrations are made direct from photographs, and are accompanied by reading matter descriptive of the scenes portrayed. In addition to this there are eight full-page cameragraphs, or views printed in the natural colors, something never before attained. The parts may be obtained for ten cents each at this office, or will be mailed to any address at the same rate, or full sets will be sold at the low price of $2.75, though if full sets are sent out of town the recipient must pay the carriage charges. A sample number will be sent to any address on receipt of two cents in stamps to pay postage. A few sets of "The Magic City," the portfolio of the World's Fair, are still left, and these will be sold in full sets of 18 numbers at $1.60 per set as long as they last. Opportunities to secure works of such recognized merit at these prices are rare.

The annual hunt of the Royal Arcanum council will be held next Monday, and according to the rules all game must be killed within the twenty-four hours previous to 7.30 p. m. of Monday, and must be presented for count at the market of G. A. Bills before 9 o'clock of that evening. The supper will be at the Converse House on the following Thursday evening. The names of the captains and those who are to participate in the hunt are:

NEW FALL GOODS.

CHARLES E. LYNCH.

LYNCH'S STYLES.

LYNCH'S FALL STYLES are eliciting great praise, grand commendation; dealers and consumers alike are charmed, enraptured, astonished. Such goods, declare they, have never been known.

In taste so excellent, in style and bearing so complete, so truly worthy of admiration that they may really be classed as ideals, as models of perfect dress and good form. Then too they have a happy, a surprising knack of so quickly and perfectly adjusting themselves to the wearer's form and figure that the onlooker has naught to do but pronounce them perfection. They FIT, they BECOME, they ADORN—more than all—they RETAIN shape and bearing. LYNCH'S goods are guaranteed to do this and they do it Clothing that costs twice as much cannot do more.

CHARLES E. LYNCH,
Promoter of Fashionable Clothing,

Forbes & Wallace's.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., September, 1894.

Opening up new fall dress goods every day now, and the stock is about complete.

With half the stock we should still have the largest, and most varied assortment in the city. It includes about every fabric we care to keep, and in every fabric about everything most desirable: style, color, combination, effect.

England, Scotland, France, Germany and some of our own American states are all represented in this collection. The best makers, the best dyers have all had a hand in getting it together.

And of course only the carefullest buying made possible the getting together of all this goodness and bestness. No easy matter to select the best from thousands of styles and qualities. The wearer has the easy task of choice, very easy compared with originating and buying.

Some of the leading fabrics to illustrate.

A wool mixture dress fabric with a soft, beautiful changeable lustre. 38 inches wide at 37½ cents a yard. Thirty combinations for your choice. The whole town has been talking of it the past few days.
Cloths with double and twisted warp threads, plain filling, 28 inches wide at 45 cents, in 10 effects; 40 inches wide at 55 cents; heavier and stronger. Eight effects.
All wool, imported fabric, changeable round with small self-colored figures, 38 inches wide at 75 cents, in four effects.
Cambridge is the name given to a worsted mixture that comes in four effects, 42 inches wide, at 75 cents a yard.
Duplex is a coarse worsted winter fabric, 42 inches wide, at 75 cents, and comes in five colorings.
Imported woolen fabric, has little raised figure on plain grounds of contrasting color, 43 inches wide, at $1, in five effects.
Changeable worsted fabric with raindrop patterns, 50 inches wide at $1, in four combinations.
Olgais is the name of an all worsted fabric with crepe or granite effect, 48 inches wide, at $1, in five effects.
Lyle is an all wool worsted figure with a very mottled crepe or granite weave, 50 inches wide at $1.25 a yard.
Imported fabric, solid color. Boucle effect, comes in blue, brown, green and black, 45 inches wide, at $1.25.
Imported silk and wool fabric with broken Bayaders effect, 45 inches wide, in four colorings at $1.25.
Carnot is the name of a silk and wool fabric in a mottled effect, 50 inches wide, at $1.50 a yard, in four effects.

Gold! Gold! Gold!

The most accessable of all the Cripple Creek Gold Mines. The workings are in the town limits, thereby making labor, transportation and supplies cheaper and more practical. Every indication points to a great boom in Cripple Creek Gold Stocks. An opportunity of this nature is not offered to investors indefinitely. As soon as sufficient funds are acquired to complete certain developments all stock will be withdrawn from the market. A small block may be a constant source of revenue to its owner for years to come. This flattering proposition will safely bear the most careful investigation. Write any expert, bank or miner in Cripple Creek Gold District. It will reflect credit to the Camp, our Company, and be exceedingly profitable to yourself.

The Ela Helean Gold Mining Company

of Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek, Colorado. Capital one million. Equally divided into 1,000,000 shares, par value $1.00, fully paid and forever non-assessable. All dividends, if any, will be declared on every share. Incorporated under the laws of the State of Colorado. 280,000 still remain in the treasury, 80,000 shares are now offered to the investment public at three cents per share, proceeds of all sales to be used exclusively in development work at the mines. The Company are in possession of a twenty years municipal franchise to mine under the streets and alleys of the town of Cripple Creek, being directly in the heart of the richest gold producing district in the world. The Company own mineral bearing lots scattered throughout the entire town, and have also acquired twenty year leases to extract ores from under nearly 50 lots. In the Company's workings an eight foot vein has been opened up from which assays have been taken running from $12.00 to $500.00, and many specimens showing free gold. The property is under the entire management of Mr. J. C. Dickey, formerly manager of the famous Summit Company and Yankee Girl, the latter which sold nearly one million.

$ 3.00 buys 100 shares.
30.00 buys 2,000 shares.
300.00 buys 10,000 shares.

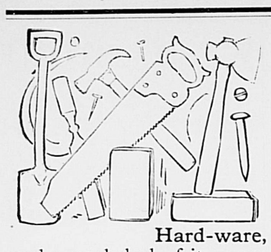
The recent labor troubles are permanently settled. This will cause Cripple Creek to become the greatest Gold Camp probably in the world.



Hard-ware, and a good deal of it, comes to the clothes that are washed without Pearline. It's spelled differently, but it gets there just the same. With Pearline, the rub, rub, rub that makes all the hard wear and the hard work is left out.

Pearline washes without it. Practically, it washes without you, and without any of the troubles, drawbacks and losses that you want to avoid. But you can always depend upon three things that Pearline washes with. These are ease, safety and profit. 335

Chronic Nervousness

Could Not Sleep, Nervous Headaches.

Gentlemen:—I have been taking your Restorative Nervine for the past three months and I cannot say enough in its praise. It has Saved My Life,

for I had almost given up hope of ever being well again. I was a chronic sufferer from nervousness and could not sleep. I was also troubled with nervous headache, and had tried doctors in vain, until I used your Nervine. MRS. M. WOOD, Ringwood, Ill.

"Don't Say I Told You."

"My letter to Wilson!—Now, wasn't it cute!
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)
The arguments used no man could refute—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)

"Then the sugary guile in that 'Catching' bomb-shell,
Which brought from the Bourbons the old Rebel yell—
While wishing my pen and my ink were—ah! well—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)

"'What happened the House?' the people all say—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)
I doubt if I really should give this away—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)

"The hardest of reasons were kept for the last—
The house 'took a tumble'—the bill it was passed—
Of course I'd not spoil it—no, not very fast—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)

"But when I 'bluffed' Gorman! Oh, didn't they shout?
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)
Sly Gorman and I know what we're about—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.)

"He called down my hand—yes, tell it I must—
In Sugar and Whisky we both of us—trust—
Watch the coming election, and see something 'bust'—
(For goodness sake, don't say I told you.),'

A FLY PAPER.

"I think flies is sociable, I do. For my part, I'm glad to be back where they be. Nobody never need excuse their flies to me. If they'd 'a been where there wan't no flies, as I had, and where the poor critters were just a-hunted and a-gone at from morning till night, they d never lift a hand agin' 'em as long as they drawed the breath o' life."

Miss Semanthy Simmons' remarks seemed to be understood by her audience, notwithstanding the fact that she had her "twister," two-side combs and some hairpins in her mouth. Semanthy was spending the afternoon at a neighbor's, her first call since her return from the city, and for fear that someone would come to detain her, had "jest taken her hand out o' the dish water, put on a clean apron, and scooted." This was the lady's apology for not having dressed her hair at home.

"Yes, I do mean to say that flies don't have no privileges where I've been. Cousin Gusty will go as far as to faint away if she catches a sight o' one. They've got blinds and shetters and screens and lace curtains and swing doors, and every hired gal has feather duster three yards long, and sticks with frizzled paper stuck to 'em, and little pop-guns that they put sneezing powder into and blow 'em, and i raly believe if a hundred or two of them unfortinit critters should get in unbeknownst to 'em they'd order out the militia. Oh, its easy to say, 'O, Semanthy!' but if you had underwent what I have from their thrashing and shooing and exterminating the air, I don't know what you'd do.

"You know in this house, if anybody knows, that I don't git much chance to sew when I'm to hum, and so I says to myself, 'I'll jest take my crazy bed quilt to Cousin Gusty's, and as they will never let me wash dishes or putter around any, why, it stands to reason I can get a lot done.' Did I? No, I didn't. That quilt is crazier than when I took it away; for, what with jumping up every other minute to get a crack o' light so that I could tell yeller from green, and blue from cinnamon-brown, the hull thing is in that shape 'twould make a lunatic of anybody who'd ever try to git it together."

"Could I have a shetter open, if I was a mind to? Didn't I tell you I couldn't? My Cousin Gusty's a pious woman, and I ain't going to say to the contrary, but I believe she'd rather I'd a broke five out of the ten commandments than to look out one o' her screens. You don't think it speaks very well for her piety? Well, I don't know. Folks is about as they're made, I've diskivered in New York as well as in Vairmont. You know in this house, too, that I never set my heart on flimmydiddles, but I didn't scasely know myself in regards to that crazy quilt, I hanker so to get it along. Why, I've craned my neck till I've had the neuralgy for a week trying to tell which was tother of my silks. I've got up in a cheer and lit the gas contrivance that hung down from the wall—lor sakes! 'twould go off like a pistol every time, and scare me een-a-most out o' my wits—and there I'd stand and jab at the eye o' my needle for all the world as if I was spearing for eels, like a pesky fool, till my knees would tremble as if I had the ager.

"Why didn't I say that I'd brung work with me and wanted to do it? So I did more'n a hundred times. As quick as I'd say that, cousin'd say, 'Come down to the sewing room, Cousin Semanthy, and let the seamstress help you.' 'Gracious sakes! I ain't fishing round for help,' says I; 'I ain't no cripple. The only thing that's lacking, Cousin Gusty, is light enough to see to thread my needle. If I was an owl I could do it in the dark, but being nothing but a poor human bat I ain't able to see through all them thicknesses that's up to the winder.

"What would she say? Oh, she'd smile kinder amused like, and that would be the end of it. One day I just spoke my mind about them screens and things. I'd clum up to the gas and I'd clum up to the winder, and I'd squinted and twisted my neck till I was as full of cricks as a egg is o' meat. I hadn't been raly riled till then, and then my dander was clean up. Sez I, 'Cousin Gusty, whatever is the matter with you about flies?' Said she, 'I don't understand you, Semanthy.' 'Wa'al,' said I, 'I should think that anybody that had both cold and bilin' water let into em' through the wall, and wash tubs and rubbing boards ready to their hands, wouldn't be quite so pertikler about siling their things. Why,' sez I, 'I could clear-starch them curtings and all the rest of the flummery in this room in no time. For pity's sake,' sez I, 'Cousin Gusty, do let me cast aside some of that super flumsiness of kiverlids and allow the light o' day to shine in upon my crazy quilt, and upon your Cousin Semanthy, who is nigh about as crazy as her spread.'

"You don't know how she could get around that? Wa'al, I nuther. When my dander is once riz, my mouth is more like a mill stream afoze it's dammed than anything I can compare it to. There ain't no lack of oratical powers when I'm once swelled up with my subject. What did Gusty say? Oh, she spoke of the delikit paper on the wall and about the fisco overhead—whether she ment Sanfrisco or not, I don't know—and pokes the sewing room and the seamstress under my nose agin, and that's all that amounted to. And what do you think? That woman actually told me that she never had her lace curtains, or her bureau frill, or her counterpins, or her shammies, done up at hum. With all that water pouring in the house, and all the hired help standin' round, and soap by the box, and clear starch by the hundred weight! That took the stiffening out o' me, and I jest lifted up my hands, and een-a'-most wept.

"Cousin Gusty do anything? Wa'al, I shouldn't call it doing anything; she plays the pianner, and goes a-visiting, and tries on

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulas and testimonials. Address, F. J. Hope Kills Despair.

And Beautiful Results Surely Follow.

There is One Thing You Want Badly And Must Have.

Even If You Have Given Up Possessing It This Will Give You Hope.

Neuralgia and nervousness are fearfully prevalent. There is no more painful disease than neuralgia. It indicates a diseased state of nervousness and blood, and the most terrible suffering is often present.

Most everybody is nervous, and this is more dangerous than most people think, for, as in the case of the well-known S. W. Anderson, Esq., of Warren, Mass., it is very liable to lead to nervous prostration and paralysis, if not cured. He writes as follows about his wonderful recovery:

"Some time ago I was afflicted with nervousness and neuralgia. The pains I suffered were frightful. They commenced in my legs and arms and then went to my head and face. Finally I had a paralytic shock on my right side which laid me up completely.

"I continued suffering the most terrible agony from neuralgia and was nearly dead with pain. I took everything I ever heard of but got no better. I consulted four doctors but they did me no good. They said there was nothing but morphine pills that would help me.

I took them for nearly a year and was no better but began to get even worse. I heard of a skilful doctor in Worcester, Mass., and went there to see him. He said he could cure me in one week. I staid there three days and then went home.

"The day after I got home I was taken worse than ever I had been before and my suffering was more than I could endure.

MR. S. W. ANDERSON.

"I continued to grow worse every day all through the fall and winter, then I became so bad that I had the pain almost constantly, and I could not have lived but a very short time longer if help had not been very close at hand.

"My wife saw the advertisement of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and she wanted me to use it. Having heard it very highly spoken of I decided to try it, although I had made up my mind I was about through with this world.

"The first bottle I took stopped the pain entirely, and my improvement was steady and sure from that time until I was cured. I could not have lived more than a week longer if I had not taken Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"I am thankful to God for this medicine, it is the best remedy that ever came before the public. I thank Dr. Greene and I hope that he will be rewarded here in this world and the world to come.

"I am constantly recommending it and shall always continue to. I advise everybody to take this most wonderful medicine, for it will make them strong, healthy and vigorous."

You must have health. You want to be strong and well. Then why don't you take this greatest of all medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.? It will surely cure you. Try it.

It is recommended and used by physicians because it is the discovery and prescription of that most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic disease, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. The Doctor is consulted with by physicians themselves in regard to nervous and chronic disease, and all may have his advice free by calling or writing.

HIS CHIVALRY.—Sometimes the spirit of sympathy and tenderness crops out on apparently barren soil. On the corner of one of the business streets of a city, a shoe-black had finished polishing the shoes of a well-dressed man. The latter was unfortunate in having a deformity which compelled him to wear a shoe on one of his feet with a thick sole, thus endeavoring to make up mechanically for what nature had denied him.

"How much shall I pay you?" he asked the boy.

"Five cents, sir."

"Oh, but you should have more than five cents for polishing my shoes," said the gentleman, tapping the thick sole significantly with his cane.

"No, sir; five cents is enough. I don't want to make no money out o' your hard luck."

The customer handed out a coin, laid his hand on the youngster's head for a moment, and passed on.

Who says the days of chivalryare are over?

Mr. Sculptor.—"Is that last bust of your husband finished yet?" Mrs. Jaggs.—"Well I hope so. I found his hat on the gas jet, shoes on the brush tray, and him under the folding-bed."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

Perhaps you don't know what Guaiacol is, but you know something of creosote as a remedy for indigestion and other diseases. Well, is a refined form of creosote, and is made from the resin of beech trees. It stimulates a languid appetite as the air of the woods does. As long as they can and will eat, consumptives can fight their disease. That is why Guaiacol is combined with ozone, a very active form of oxygen, in Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil.

Guaiacol

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

CHARLES E. LYNCH,

Fall Styles for Men, Young Men, Youths . . . and Boys . . . .

Fickle Fashion has certainly surpassed herself in her desire to please her male votaries this season. She has fairly eclipsed all previous efforts. Avoiding everything extreme and fanciful she has happily combined comfort and elegance in a manner to satisfy the most exacting.

CHARLES E. LYNCH,

Has now ready the NEW STYLES—as always the quintessence, the very cream of Fall Goods. Choice materials, skilled workmanship, correct cuts—everything the very best. Not this alone. LYNCH'S New Styles have a gait, a snap, a substantial, wholesome roundness that characterize them at once as exceptional and out of the ordinary. They loom up above the average clothing as does the stately elm above its fellows. They cannot be equaled. They cannot be excelled. Above all, they cost no more than half the trash that is sold as first-class clothing now-a-days.

HARPS WERE TWANGING.

A Thrilling Experience on a Bad Bit of Railroad.

"When I cross that bridge, I think I hear angels' harps," said an old traveler, speaking of a dangerous spot on a mountain railroad. You see what he meant. Only a few shaky timbers between him and whatever may lie beyond this life and ours! No wonder the valley of death seemed narrow at the time.

If thousands of haggard, emaciated men and women, with barely strength for their daily tasks, never hear the harps, they should be thankful for dull imagination. Just glance at the testimony of William Wiley, of Bridgeton, N. J. It may interest you. He says:

I have been taking cod liver oil for several years. Not gaining flesh, I concluded I was consumptive, as I continued to have night sweats and a severe cough, but I dismissed the idea from my mind after a trial of Paskola. I felt a marked benefit from the first doses. I have no more night sweats and the cough has disappeared. My digestion and appetite are all that could be desired. Paskola is certainly a boon to thin, pale people."

Walter Korner, of Bridgeton, N. J., says:

"I have been troubled with jaundice for years; in fact, began to believe the disease chronic with me, but I have dispelled that fact from my mind after the use of your Paskola in connection with Paskola Laxative Tablets. Am now entirely free from bilious attacks, and my general health is much better than for ten years past. I cannot say too much for Paskola, as it has not only given me a new lease of life but I am also gaining in flesh rapidly."

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable retail druggist, and a pamphlet fully descriptive will be mailed upon application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 39 Reade St., New York.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—John Davies of this city took a severe cold and suffered pain through the back and kidneys. His physician pronounced his case gravel, and failed to help him. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was recommended, and after taking two bottles he considered himself cured. It cures rheumatism and neuralgia also. 24

One Passes in the Dark.

The white stars, one by one,
Lean out of their casement high;
And the lily-cup is folded up,
And the moon-clouds wander by.
Come hither, ye little wildwood things,
That sing when the errant night-wind sings
Far up in the windy sky.
Ours is the noon
Of the fairer moon,—
And a voice in the dark am I.

Morning will come to greet
A little new rose, I wis;
But the loving air that heard it ope
Hath welcomed it with a kiss.
And the clouds with the white up-gathering hands
Bringing the rain from far-off lands,—
They sing as they wander by;
All are aware
For singing's sake;—
And a voice in the dark am I.

What shall ye hear by day?
The tread of a thousand feet.
Come but here when the night is near
And listen, and find it sweet.
The voice of things ye dream are dumb;
The murmur of living, the water's hum,
And the growing of the grass!
Voices of all
In the night, that call,—
A voice am I that pass.

The tremor of months that flit,
The laughter of leaves that blow,
And the hurtling wings of a wind that sings
And the bending of grass below;
The little white voice of a flower unborn
That shall not blossom for many a morn,
Yet it grows all steadfastly;
Under the night
It feels the light
Of stars in an unseen sky.

The little hastening hare
Listens, with anxious ear,
To know if the Day be on her way,
Day that must never hear.
Chameleons shy, and the hidden bird,
The silver lizards, all these be heard
In their strange and wilding speech,
If ye but hark,
They sing at dark,
In the night that loves them, each.

Who passes beneath? Who sings?
Let the only thing ye know of me
Be the song that wanders by.
Come hither, ye little living things;
Sing with me now as each star sings.
Each star in the beckoning sky:
For the day must come
And we be dumb,—
And a voice in the dark am I.

Josephine Preston Peabody in the Independent.

A BUSINESS WIDOW.

I am an architect, and a few years ago was charged with the erection of a building in Boston, in the construction of which I used a considerable quantity of granite. I bought some of the stone of a Down East woman, whom I knew as Widow Haley. One day I called my assistant, Benjamin Baker, into my room, and said: "Look here, Baker, you've got to go down to Widow Haley's. She sent word that there is some stone ready for us, and I want it looked over before it is shipped, especially those pillars for the entrance."

"Very well, sir," replied Barker, "I'll take the first train to-morrow and be back to-morrow night."

"No," said I, "don't do anything of the sort. Sit down and write the old lady that you'll be down to the place on Saturday, and then she'll meet you at the train. Besides that, she'll kill a yellow-legged chicken for your dinner."

It was about 10.30 o'clock when Barker reached Agamenticus, and when the train had gone he was like Robinson Crusoe—"monarch of all he surveyed"—and he felt, to a slight extent, as Mr. Crusoe felt when he found himself all alone and a "long way removed from anywhere." But he was not a great while left to his meditations. It was not more than five minutes before his attention was attracted to a cloud of dust rising through the trees in the direction in which the highway leading by the station seemed to run. The cloud of dust came nearer very rapidly, and suddenly a powerful bay horse, hitched to a Concord wagon, bounded into view, and when Barker saw that a woman held the lines he conjectured that the woman was Widow Haley, and she was.

The horse approached the station at a smart pace, and was brought to a standstill with a suddenness that must have given a shock to his nervous system.

"Good morning, madam," said Barker, lifting his hat and at the same time moving towards the wagon. He had been standing in such a position that the woman had not obtained a fair look at him, and as he moved out into full view she seemed to see something in him which had at first escaped her attention. Barker noticed that she gave a start, and that she had to pause a little before she spoke. But when she did speak it was with directness and without embarrassment.

"I'm Widder Haley," she said. "Be you the man from Architect Ballard's that was to meet me?"

"Yes, I'm the man," Barker answered. "Shall I climb in?"

Mrs. Haley gave her assent, and when Barker was seated by her side she hit the horse a vigorous slap with the end of the lines, and he was soon pulling his load briskly over the road which he had recently traveled in an opposite direction. It was about four miles to the quarries, and though Barker made several attempts to engage the widow in conversation he got very little out of her more than yeses and noes until the ride was almost completed. But he was conscious that the widow was greatly interested in him, for he could see that she was all the while, as openly as she dared, engaged in looking him over. They were well along in the last mile of the road, when Barker, turning sharply around, caught the widow's eye while she was gazing earnestly upon his face.

"Well," he said, good naturedly, what is it?"

The woman blushed and turned her head away.

"I s'pose I was rude," she said, when she had thought out her reply, "but I couldn't help it. You look so much like him."

"Who's him?" demanded Barker.

"My husband."

"The late Mr. Haley?"

"Yes. He's been dead an' gone these 20 years, but when I see him last he was as much like you as peas is like peas."

At the quarries Barker heard corroborative evidence as to his resemblance to the defunct Mr. Haley. Two old men stopped hammering stone and looked at him, and he heard one of them say to his mate, "Did you ever see a man look so much like another as that feller looks like Rufy Haley?"

It was understood when Barker and Mrs. Haley left the quarries that the former should not return to Boston until Monday, for there was a certain stone quarrying which would not be ready for examination earlier than Monday morning.

"I guess you'll git along all right over Sunday," the widow said. "You kin climb the mounting an' go gunnin' an' p'raps Effie will take you out a ridin' in the afternoon."

"Effie; that's a girl's name, is it not?"

"Yes, Effie is my daughter, an' if I do say it, nobody ain't got no better girl than she is.'

"Of course not."

"She was just a year old when her father died, an' I've had to bring her up all by myself, but I ain't ashamed of her. I think she's a pretty likely girl. I don't know what you'll think of her."

"Oh, I'm sure that I shall like her," said Barker, laughingly.

Upon the wall of the room into which Barker was shown on arrival at the widow's house was a large photograph of the late lamented Haley. Barker no sooner set eyes on this picture than he was ready to share with the widow and the two quarrymen their astonishment at his resemblance to the man who had been 20 years dead. When dinner was served Barker found the yellow-legged chicken which had been promised him, and sundry other things good to eat. He enjoyed his dinner very well until the servant spilled a quart bowl of hot pudding sauce down his neck and back. When that happened he felt uncomfortable for a minute, which, of course, was perfectly natural.

"You'd better take the coat off an' have it cleaned before the stuff dries up," said the widow.

"But," objected Barker, "I can't go around in my shirt sleeves."

"Would you be willin'," asked the widow, "to wear one of Rufus's coats?"

"Certainly, madam," said Barker.

The widow bustled off upstairs and was soon back again, holding out a long tailed shiny black coat. Barker took the coat, and after regarding it for a while as it hung suspended from his thumb and forefinger by the back of its neck, put it on and finished his dinner. He was still wearing the coat, an hour later, when the widow's daughter, Effie, arrived home from North Berwick.

Now, it happened that this coat was the very one which the late lamented wore when the photograph was taken of which mention has been made, and clad in it Barker looked more like his prototype in the picture than before. When the widow presented him to her daughter the young woman caught the resemblance as quickly as her mother had, although she had no recollection of her father, and only knew how he looked by having familiarized herself with his face in the big photograph.

Barker, on his side, did not fail to mark a similarity, but, seeing that the widow was looking at him inquiringly and expectantly, it occurred to him to ask her if she still considered him a reproduction of her departed husband.

"More than ever," said the widow; "and when I look on you an' Effie, standing there together, I kin scarcely believe that you aren't brother and sister."

When bedtime came Barker was conducted to a chamber leading off from the room where the widow kept her safe and account books. He went off to sleep very easily in spite of the fact that he was encased in a strange night shirt, one of the late lamented's, and, if he had not been disturbed, would have continued to sleep till morning. As it was, he was awakened a little after midnight by a noise in the next room. Listening, he heard what seemed to be blows upon some hard substance. Instantly he thought of the safe. The next instant he slid quietly out of bed and started upon a tour of investigation.

He moved noiselessly toward the door connecting his room with the other chamber, and stood upon the threshold a number of seconds, watching what was transpiring in the outer room, before the persons who were working there were aware of his presence. He saw two men, one of whom was gray-whiskered and apparently 50 years old, engaged with hammer and chisel upon the safe. The gray whiskered man was the first to take cognizance of Barker, and he no sooner saw him than, with a loud shriek, he threw down his tools and started on a run for the door leading into the hall.

"Quick, Joe!" he called back to his younger mate. "Quick, Joe; don't you see Rufe Haley's ghost there in the doorway?"

The younger man ran after the elder one, and after the two ran Barker, still in his borrowed nightshirt and nothing else, carrying one of the burglar's hammers in one hand and their lamp in the other. He followed the men down stairs and into the sitting-room, but he did not leap after them out of the window. Probably he would not have done that under any circumstances, clad as he was, but there was one overpowering circumstance in the case which made him understand that the sphere of his duty was inside the house. Something which he saw after he had entered the sitting-room stopped him short in his pursuit of the burglars, and for a second or two riveted him motionless to the floor.

He saw three bed-gowned, bare-toed women sitting in a row of chairs placed against a side of the room, bound hand and foot, and made mutes of by something crammed in their mouths, each staring at him with widely distended eyes. Barker recognized in the three women the widow, the widow's daughter, and the woman who had scalded him with her pudding sauce. His first impulse was immediately to set the three women loose, and acting under this impulse, he placed hammer and lamp upon the floor and moved toward the bandaged group.

But he quickly changed his mind, the thought suddenly occurring to him that he was not confronted by a life or death position, and that the call upon him was not so imperative that he would be justified in answering it while he was so scantily clothed.

"Pardon me, ladies," he said, "I was not aware that you were in this room or I should not have followed those gentlemen in here. If you will excuse me a moment I will—'see you later.'"

He whisked out of the room, ran up the stairs, three at a time, dived into his bedchamber, grabbed his trousers, got into them firemen fashion on the way down stairs, and within a minute from the time of his departure from the room where the women were he had returned to it, and was ready to begin the work of emancipation. When he had finished it, he retired to complete his toilet, promising to return very soon.

When he reappeared he found the widow alone; no, not alone, for she was sitting with a double-barrelled gun across her lap, gazing fixedly at the windows through which the burglars had made their exits.

"I didn't know but what they might come back ag'in," she said.

"I guess not," said Barker. "But give me the gun and go to bed yourself. I'll lie down here on the lounge and keep guard, and if any burglar tries to enter here I'll blow his head off."

"If I can get near enough to hit him," he added sotto voice, calling to mind the fact that he had never fired a gun in his life. "But where were the hired men?" he asked, after a pause. "Or did they kill the hired men outright?"

"The hired men," answered the widow; "the hired men are over to Eliot to a weddin'. That's why we women was left alone."

"Weddings are bad things," said Barker impressively.

But of course he spoke jokingly, for she had just suggested to him the possibility of a union with her daughter.

"I'm a sudden sort of a woman," she had said. "I ain't one of them who believes in deliberatin' an' prayin'. I make up my mind sho't off where I want to go an' git there as quick as I kin. I only knowed my husband 24 hours before I was married to him, and I didn't make no mistake nuther. Now, I want to ask you a question: How would you like to marry my daughter?"

The average man, in Barker's place, would have been stunned by a proposition like this, but Barker answered it without the least hesitation.

"Nothing would suit me better," he said. And it was settled then and there.

WHY THEY DIDN'T GO.

This is the way Burdette puts the excuses of some people for not going to church. Perhaps some of our readers may see themselves addressed as "my son."

"So you are not going to church this morning, my son?

"Ah, yes! I see. 'The music is not good;' that's a pity. That's what you go to church for, to hear the music. And the less we pay the better music we demand.

"'And the pews are not comfortable.' That's too bad—the Sabbath is a day of rest, and we go to church for repose. The less we do through the week the more rest we clamor for on the Sabbath.

"'The church is so far away; it is too far to walk, and you detest riding in a street car, they're always crowded on the Sabbath.' That is, indeed, distressing; sometimes when I think how much further away heaven is than the church, and that there are no conveyances on the road of any description, I wonder how some of us are going to get there.

"'And the sermon is so long, always.' All these things are, indeed, to be regretted. I would regret them more sincerely, my boy, did I not know that you will often squeeze into a stuffed street car, with a hundred other men, breathing an incense of whisky, beer and tobacco, hang on a strap by your eyelids for two miles, and then pay fifty cents for the privilege of sitting on a rough plank in the broiling sun for two hours longer, while in the intervals of the game a scratch band will blow discordant thunder out of a dozen misfit horns right into your ears, and come home to talk the rest of the family into a state of aural paralysis about the 'dandiest game you ever saw played on that ground.'

"Ah, my boy! you see what staying away from church does. It develops a habit of lying. There isn't one man in a hundred who could go on the witness stand and give, under oath, the same reasons for not going to church that he gives to his family every Sabbath morning. My son, if you didn't think you ought to go, you wouldn't make any excuses for not going. No man apologizes for doing right."

HOW A CHILD SHOULD SIT.

In sitting, the child must be provided with a comfortable chair, adapted to his size and height, writes Elisebeth Robinson Scovil in a very valuable article on "The Physical Culture of Children" in the September Ladies' Home Journal. He should be made to sit well back in it, and not on the edge when he has to occupy it for any length of time. The back should, if possible, give support to the small of the back as well as the shoulders. In working at a desk it should be of such a height that he can easily see his work when sitting erect by bending his head, instead of inclining the body at the hip joints. The upright position helps to expand the chest and keep the shoulders in their proper place. Its use soon becomes habitual if it is insisted upon.

In walking, the heel should not be brought down too firmly. A part of the weight of the body belongs upon the toes, and when a due proportion is thrown there it gives an elasticity to the gait which is lost when it is not properly distributed. Walking with the heels raised from the ground is a good exercise, although a fatiguing one. Hopping on each foot alternately is another. Dancing is a valuable accomplishment for children. The consciousness of being able to dance well gives ease and self-possession to many a young man and woman who would otherwise be bashful and awkward. Little people usually delight in the rhythmical motion, and if it is not combined with late hours it does them nothing but good.

JUST TO PLEASE THE BABY.—One day recently two ladies, one of whom carried a baby, entered a well-known furniture shop and signified their desire to look at some carpets.

The salesman cheerfully showed roll after roll, until the perspiration literally streamed from his every pore.

Finally one of the ladies asked the other if she did not think it was time to go.

"Not quite," was the answer of her companion; and then in an undertone she added: "Baby likes to see him roll them out, and we've plenty of time to catch the train."—London Tid Bits.

A PLETHORA.—Victoria begged the chancellor of the exchequer to rise from his knees.

"Good, my lord," she observed when he had brushed the dust from his trousers. "How is the pay roll?"

The vassal trembled violently.

"Your Majesty, if I may be permitted to suggest"—

The chancellor acted just as if he hadn't another job in sight.

"—has been putting on a good many heirs of late."

Upon reflection, such appeared to be the case.—Detroit Tribune.

APHORISMS.—If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.—Burgh.

If you have built cities in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be, now put foundations under them.—Thoreau.

ORIGINAL MR. GRADY.—One night Henry Grady was at a reception in Atlanta. As he was about to leave his hostess—I won't give her name—said: "Now, Mr. Grady, don't say what everybody else has said. I'm wearied to extinction of hearing: 'Such a charming evening. I've had a lovely time.' Now do, Mr. Grady, say something refreshing, original." "Madam," he bowed, "I've had a—— of a time." "I'm——glad to hear it," she said, not to be outdone.—Rochester Herald.

"Can you tell me how the word 'saloon' is spelt?" was asked of a cockney. "Certainly," said the Londoner with a look of triumph. "There's a hess and hey and a hell and two hoes and a hen."

"This paper," said Mr. Rafferty, "says that a felly wor blase. Phwat's blase?"—"Thot," said Mr. Doland, "is the fallen thot comes to a man who's got so lazy that loafin' is hard worruk."—Washington Star.

The baggage smasher had dropped the trunk from the car and knocked one end of it out. "What in thunder did you let that trunk drop that way for?" exclaimed the irate owner as he rushed to the rescue of his property. "I beg your pardon," responded the baggage smasher, innocently; "I could have dropped it on the other end just as well if I had known you wanted in that way."—Detroit Free Press.

THE ANNUAL CATTLE SHOW.

Fine Exhibit of Cattle Tuesday—Large Hall and Poultry Shows. Rain Interferes with Wednesday's Programme.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society drew three blanks in the cattle show lottery this year. The first was when one of its members caused to be printed in the American Horse Breeder an article well calculated to injure the interests of the society, the main points of which were copied in a Springfield paper; the second was when the balloon accidentally escaped from Jewell Brothers Tuesday afternoon when nearly inflated; and the third was the rainy day of Wednesday. As the larger part of the receipts come from the crowd of the second day there will of course be a deficit of several hundred dollars. The society is having rather hard luck, as for several years it had stormy weather for its fairs, then when it just about paid expenses last year and stood a good prospect of making a dollar this time the ill luck returns again. The fair this year gave promise of being unusually good, and in some respects was the best in the history of the society, and the directors will undoubtedly leave no stone unturned to give the public something worth seeing next year.

Tuesday—First Day.

The weather of Tuesday was all that could be desired, and the attendance was correspondingly good. There was a large number of cattle on the grounds, and they made a fine showing, their appearance giving no token of the dry condition of the pastures during the summer. In thoroughbreds O. A. Bliss and G. E. & W. M. Tucker of Monson, with C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, showed Jerseys, D. Morgan & Son of Belchertown Herefords and H. E. Wallis of Holland Devons, while Louis Wells of Brimfield exhibited Holsteins, H. A. Rindge of Monson Durhams, and W. N. Flynt of Monson Dutch Belted cattle. The state primary school also sent its fine herd of Holsteins. Many fine grade animals were also shown, and there were several herds of miscellaneous neat stock. There were only eight entries of sheep, and the same number of swine, among the latter being three litters of small pigs. There were only three entries of working oxen, so all got a premium when it came to the test on the cart. In walking oxen there were four entries, J. O. Hamilton of Palmer carrying off first prize. Steers were conspicuous by their absence, only one pair being entered. There were, however, some especially fine animals among the thoroughbred bulls and cows, the entries numbering 32. In pairs of draft horses E. J. Fosket of Monson captured first prize, though the horses used on J. F. Holbrook's coal team were a close second. O. D. Wells of Brimfield secured first for single farm horses. The poultry exhibit, which has grown to the finest in this section outside of the New England Fair at Worcester, was larger than ever, 133 coops being entered. C. A. Ballou, who judged the birds, stated that there were many finer birds than were seen at the New England Fair. A new building was erected this year for the poultry, but it was not large enough, and will have to be increased in size.

The first thing after dinner was the member's trotting class, the contestants being required to drive a mile, the ones completing that distance the nearest to 4½ minutes being the winners. There were seven entries, and the times of the winners were: G. C. Flynt of Monson, 4.14 4-5; A. D. Fosket of Monson, 4.15; L. G. Cushman of Monson, 4.15½; G. W. Ely, 4.14½; H. T. Bolles of Wilbraham, 4.14 2-5. It was claimed that the horse driven by Mr. Flynt was not owned by him, and as it was one of the rules that the horses driven should be owned by members of the society, a protest was entered against him.

Next came the peg race, in which the contestants were required to unharness a horse from the carriage, hang the harness on a peg, lead the horse around the carriage and harness again. There were five contestants, and the winner, T. E. Edmunds, finished in 2.55.

The three-minute race for horses owned in Three Rivers, Thorndike, Bondsville and Palmer brought out four starters, G. W. Ely of Palmer entering "Dexter Chimes," C. F. Grosvenor "Sandy," C. E. Fuller "Pede," and Dr. S. H. Ellery "Lucinda." The race plainly belonged to 'Dexter Chimes" from the start, although "Sandy" gave him a close rub in each heat, but was not quite fast enough to win, and it was decided in three straight heats, the score being:

"Dexter Chimes," b. s.	1	1	1
"Sandy," s. g.	2	2	2
"Lucinda," bl. m	3	4	3
"Pede," s. m.	4	3	4

Time—3.08, 3.03½.

There were three starters in the 2.40 class, E. H. Hubbard of Ludlow entering "Ruth H.," G. L. Rice of Springfield "Susie Brockett," and G. C. Flynt of Monson "Anna C." There was no question as to which horse could win, and "Susie Brockett" captured the first three heats, though "Anna C." treated the crowd to a pretty race with the winner in each. The score:

"Susie Brockett," b. m.	1	1	1
"Anna C.," ch. m.	2	2	2
"Ruth H.," ch. m.	3	3	3

Time—2.40¾, 2.40¼, 2.39.

The unfortunate event of the day was the ascension of the balloon without the aeronaut. The work of inflation was almost completed, some of the guy lines had been cast off, and after dropping a guy pole only a little more hot air was to be sent into the balloon before all would be ready. A crowd of men and boys was holding the balloon down to the ground when the man in charge shouted "Let go" to the one holding the guy rope attached to the pole. The crowd thought he meant them, and let go of the balloon. It didn't take it long to get out of reach, although the aeronaut nearly caught the trapeze bar as it dragged along the ground. There was hardly a breath of air and the apparatus sailed directly up, plainly visible to the crowd, which was sadly disappointed. Finally, as the air in it cooled it turned bottom up and came down on River street, only a short distance from the grounds. While some were inclined to think it a "fake," there can be no question but that it was an accident. Wednesday there was too much wind and rain for the inflation of the balloon. The wind died down for a time and preparations for an ascent were begun, but the wind came up again stronger than before, accompanied by heavy rain, which made the attempt impossible.

Wednesday—Second Day.

The skies were cloudy Wednesday morning, and a little rain fell. The effect on the attendance was apparent before the forenoon had advanced very far, and only a few ventured out. This was the day for the horses, and though the showing was not large there were some fine animals, particularly among the colts, G. W. Ely making the largest number of entries. There were four pairs of matched horses entered, all fine animals, the judges deciding on those owned by R. M. Reynolds of Monson, for first prize, however For single carriage horses, that owned by G. M. Atkins of Palmer, carried off the prize.

The bicycle parade of young ladies did not materialize on account of the rain, and the first thing after dinner was the horse races. The 2.30 class did not fill, and there were only the 2.50 and the 3.35 classes. In the 2.50 class G. C. Flynt of Monson entered "Phalmore," H. Warner of Hampden "Charlie D.," E. H. Hubbard "Ruth H.," and M. F. Moore of Monson "George L." This was the most interesting race of the two days, "Phalmore" and "Ruth H." trotting neck and neck the first heat. In the second "Ruth H." got the lead at the quarter, but could not go quite fast enough to hold it. The third was as pretty a race as one could wish to see from start to finish. "Ruth H." and "Phalmore" trotted neck and neck for the three-quarters, when "Charlie D." concluded to make a try for first place and came down the stretch hard after the leaders, gaining rapidly in the last eighth. It was a close bunch at the wire, and a yard stick would have covered the noses of the three horses. "Ruth H." was an easy second in each heat. The score:

"Phalmore," ch. g.	1	1	1
"Ruth H.," ch. m.	2	2	2
"Charlie D.," b. g.	3	4	3
"George L.," s. g.	4	3	4

Time—2.42, 2.37, 2.40.

Three horses started in the 2.35 class, "Taras," entered by G. W. Rice of Springfield, "Prince Jerome," by E. H. Hubbard, and Henry Clay," by P. J. Mahoney of Holyoke. "Henry Clay took a nasty tumble on the first turn in the first heat. His driver tried to go inside of "Prince Jerome" where there wasn't room, and the horse stumbled and fell, turning a complete somersault. The driver jumped clear over the horse and landed on his feet, then turned and held the horse's head down. "Taras" was close behind, and only escaped the wreck by quick work on the part of his driver, but the accident put him out of the race for that heat. "Henry Clay" was not hurt beyond a cut lip and a cast shoe, and both were repaired in time for the next heat, but "Taras" was getting down to steady work and had no trouble finishing first almost at a walk, with "Henry Clay second, in the next three heats. The score:

"Taras," b. g.	2	1	1	1
"Prince Jerome," b. s.	1	3	3	3
"Henry Clay," b. g.	3	2	2	2

Time—2.41, 2.41, 2.27, 2.42.

In the Hall.

Taken as a whole the exhibit in the hall was the best in the history of the society, the fruit and vegetable exhibits being particularly large and fine. The lower hall was under the superintendence of G. H. Fisherdick, who has been in the service of the society for several years, while Mrs. J. F. Holbrook had the care of the upper hall during the two days of the fair.

The fancy articles were exhibited on the upper floor, and although the display was perhaps not as great as usual, yet the articles seemed to be of a superior quality, some very beautiful work being shown.

Among those who exhibited the most noticeable work were Mrs. J. F. Holbrook, Mrs. S. Moore, Miss Anna Shaw, Mrs. C. B. Ellis, Mrs. G. A. Bills, Mrs. C. E. Fish and Miss Blanche Hellyar, while the work of the others did the owners much credit. The Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. from Bridgeport, Ct., represented by Mr. Merrick of Monson, made a fine display of machine and art work. This was at the further end of the hall and filled one corner. Representatives of Taylor's Music House of Springfield occupied the whole of the opposite side with the Estey pianos and organs. They had some one playing a greater share of the time during the two days of the fair. One of their instruments was quite a novelty to the crowd. It consisted of an upright piano with cymbals, a drum and cornet attached. When it was played, by one person, it sounded as though there was quite an orchestra in the hall. One attraction among the displays of fancy articles was a spread knit by Mrs. S. Moore. It represented 482 hours of hard work; 7700 yards of number 30 thread; 4,118,020 stitches in the center; and 300 stitches in one yard of the edge around it, taking in all six yards and twenty-four inches of edging. Mrs. M. Wetherbee, aged eighty-six, had a case filled with samples of lace. There was a large exhibit of very fine crocheted work by Mrs. J. F. Holbrook, which has taken a prize at the World's Fair. Mrs. L. M. Burleigh and Miss Effie Shaw each had a case filled with decorated china, which were highly spoken of. Mrs. Newell of Palmer Center, Miss Blanche Hastings and Miss Jennie Eastman showed some excellent paintings and work in crayon. There was the usual display of patch-work, rag carpets and rugs. W. N. Flynt of Monson exhibited a valuable floor mat made from the skin of a Dutch belted calf. Quite a large quantity of dress goods was brought in from the Holden & Fuller woolen mill. A large bird cage made by Philemon Prue of Monson with a jack knife showed considerable ingenuity. Robert Stebbins had some work on exhibition which showed his skill as a penman. Mr. Stumf exhibited a fine specimen of his handiwork in the shape of a wall pocket, which was greatly admired. G. A. Spaulding brought in an ancient Steinar violin, it being pronounced an excellent instrument. The lower hall was devoted wholly to bread, cake and honey, flowers, vegetables and fruit. Although we have had a severe drouth this year, there was an unusually large and choice amount of fruit and vegetables. So much, in fact, as to crowd the thrifty housewives' display of bread and cake to the upper hall tables. It is said to have been the best exhibit in the history of the society.

F. D. Rogers of Monson had a very fine display of petunias, asters, pansies, sweet peas, verbenas, geraniums and forty-five varieties of cut flowers. A. B. Howard of Belchertown showed some choice asters, dahlias, zinnias, collection of marigolds and cut flowers. Mrs. E. Brown had twelve pots of various kind of fushia, and also a very handsome hydrangea. Some of the other exhibitors of flowers were: Mrs. F. D. Barton, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock, Mrs. William Merriam, Mrs. J. B. Shaw and Mrs. A. V. Blanchard. E. M. Walker of Monson had the best display of all kinds of fruit, and F. D. Rogers of the same town had second best. A. B. Howard of Belchertown had a fine collection of plums, pears, peaches, apples and grapes, as also did O. E. Bradway and G. M. Severy of Monson, S. Griswold of Hampden, E. N. Fisher of Ludlow and H. T. Bolles of Wilbraham. G. E. and W. M. Tucker and H. A. Rindge of Monson, Mrs. A. V. Blanchard of Palmer and H. T. Vaille of Monson displayed some very tempting looking fruit. A large number of apples and pears were exhibited, and though the peaches and quinces were not so numerous, yet there were some which were of the best quality. There were only a few plates of grapes seen at the fair this year.

The display of vegetables was very large, there being various kinds of squashes, potatoes, beets, cabbages, onions, cucumbers, pepper plants, tomatoes, corn, carrots, melons, parsnips, beans, pumpkins, numerous strings of corn, etc.

Among those who exhibited largely were G. H. Fisherdick, who had eighty-one varieties. H. D. Vaille, J. H. Carpenter, O. E. Bradway, L. H. Johnson, J. Sunter, H. A. Rindge, C. C. Keep, W. N. Flynt and G. E. & W. M. Tucker of Monson, H. D. Geer and E. L. Cummings of Belchertown, F. E. Clark of Wilbraham, T. J. Chalk, G. A. Spaulding and Mrs. A. V. Blanchard of Palmer. A noteworthy display was that of Mr. Spaulding's, of plants raised from this year's seed without using artificial heat. Others whose collections were not as numerous made up in quality what they lacked in quantity. One corner, devoted to the exhibit of the Monson Grange, was made very attractive with oil paintings, fancy articles, cake, fruit, vegetables, etc. Overhead were these words "Monson P. of H.," the letters being made of apples. The exhibition of bread and cake, as tested by the judges, was pronounced as toothsome and inviting as ever. The lower hall needs but a little expenditure to render it more attractive, and it is hoped that the society may be able to carry out the suggestions in another year.

LOCAL NOTICES.

I have sold and cleaned out the last remnant of the old Milligan stock of boots and shoes, and replaced it with new and reliable goods which I now offer to the public at living prices. Thanking you for patronage in the year past, I shall endeavor to merit a share of future favors.

Respectfully, W. A. WELD.

There seems to be sort of a general rejoicing that Milligan is again in the boot and shoe business in Palmer, as it means low prices for boots and shoes. By the way, we have adopted "Low Prices" as our motto, which we expect will be appreciated by the public. When you buy boots and shoes try Milligan's shoe store in the Nassowanno block.

Prickette—Pierson.

Minnie Fisher, daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. A. W. Pierson, was united in marriage to Mr. Waldo Porter Prickett, clerk for Barney & Berry of Springfield, Thursday at noon, Rev. Mr. Peirce officiating. The house was prettily decorated with wild clematis and purple asters. The bride, unattended by bridesmaids, was attired in white silk and carried white roses. The gifts were numerous, consisting of silver, cut glass, decorated China, piano, lamp, linen, and a French clock. After a visit to Philadelphia and Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Prickett will be at home to their friends at 17 Brood street, Springfield. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Sperry, Mrs. J. H. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Beecher, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Downs, Mr. and Mrs. Pierson of New Haven, Ct., Mr. and Mrs. William Prickette, Mrs. Edward Buxton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dwight of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Osborne of Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dr. and Mrs. Segar of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson of Palmer.

WARE.

A simple minded youth named John Nolan stabbed a workman named Bradley in the right wrist in the burling room of the Otis Company's mill on Monday. The wound will not prove very serious. It is likely that no legal action will be taken.

Charles E. Stevens has given orders to start the wooden mills in operation with a full force of help by October 1st. Some of the departments have already started to furnish material for other parts of the work. This is received by the help with rejoicing, for it was feared that the shut-down would be longer.

The coupon bonds issued by the town for the sewer loan were printed at the office of C. W. Eddy the past week; a neat job, requiring great care and accuracy in printing, the one coming to maturity in 1914 having fouty coupons attached, all of different dates and all bearing the fac simile autograph of F. D. Gilmore, town treasurer.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

A Reprive of Ten Years.

An average business man's life can easily be lengthened ten years by the occasional use of Ripans Tabules. Do you know any one who wants those ten years?

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-25

OPENING OF
NEW MILLINERY, LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S OVER GARMENTS, FURS, ETC.,
WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY,
THE 19TH & 20TH.

OUR SHOW OF NEW THINGS IS IMPORTANT TO EVERY WOMAN.

New things in jackets, capes, wraps and furs arriving every day. Such a collection as we are getting together! Time to be getting posted. Come in the morning and stay all day, and there'll be something new for your attention every minute, almost.

We have a black surah silk waist, all lined throughout, at $4.85 that we think can't be beaten. It's a beauty.

Main Floor, Pynchon street building

Never knew or heard before of such carpet selling as we are doing here. Just like selling cotton cloth, almost. Customers are attracted by the choice patterns, impressed by the bigness of the variety, and the littleness of the prices assures the sale. And it's all done in an incredible short space of time.

Our $1 a yard Axminster Velvets are almost identical with the quality that you pay $2.50 for elsewhere. Not enough difference really to be marked.

Our nine-wire Tapestry carpets at 63 cents a yard are worthy of your notice.

Second Floor Pynchon street building.

Such a collection of ingrain art squares is hardly to be seen elsewhere. The variety of patterns is large and choice, and the qualities are astonishingly good for the prices.

All-wool art squares, size 2½ by 3 yards, at $4.15, that have only to be seen to be appreciated.

Just a few more left at $2.25, size 2x2½ yards.

Second Floor, Pynchon street building.

The conception of the "Eureka" corset cover was a happy thought, the article itself is a practical reality. It is made of fine cambric, trimmed with edgings and laces and has neat pockets under the arm-holes, for the dress shields—a most convenient and desirable arrangement. Four qualities, 33, 42, 50 and 75 cts.

HEADACHES.

Headache is pure and simple headache. It is that, and still something more. It an affliction that describes itself. There are, however, different forms indirectly, perhaps produced by different causes. But we claim that in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred it results from a disordered stomach. CELERY TONIC BITTERS is an infallable cure for headaches.

Sick Headache is often very tenacious, clinging to its subject for years. It is, in most cases, attended by sickness of the stomach, depressed spirit, and vomiting. It is the occasion of great suffering.

Bilious Headache. This invariably arises from a disordered stomach.

Nervous Headache sometimes assumes a neuralgic form; and he or she who suffers from it is to be pitied.

Every bottle GUARANTEED to give satisfaction or MONEY REFUNDED.

Child's Play

—washing with Pearline. Everything that makes it hard work is taken away.

Everything that makes the wear and tear, too—there's no rub, rub, rubbing about it. It's absolutely safe. Remember that, if you've had your clothes eaten, frayed or ravelled by cheap imitations. Pearline is as cheap as anything can be that is safe. It costs no more at the start than common soap—and it saves money from the minute you start with it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 327 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Palpitation of the Heart

Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Legs and Feet.

"For about four years I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and swelling of the legs and feet. At times I would faint. I was treated by the best physicians in Savannah, Ga., with no relief. I then tried various Springs without benefit. Finally, I tried also his Nerve and Liver Pills. After beginning to take them I felt better! I continued taking them and I am now in better health than for many years. Since my recovery I have gained fifty pounds in weight. I hope this statement may be of value to some poor sufferer."

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

"On the thirty-second day of the thirteenth month of the eighth day of the week,
On the sixty-first minute of the twenty-fifth hour,
we'll find all things that we seek.
They are there in the limbo of Lollipop land—a cloud island and resting in air,
On the Nowhere side of the Mountain of Mist, in the Valley of Overthere.

On the Nowhere side of the Mountain of Mist, in the Valley of Overthere,
On a solid vapor foundation of cloud are palaces grand and fair;
And there is where our dreams will come true, and the seeds of our hope will grow,
On the thitherward side of the Hills of Hope, in the Hamlet of Hocus Po.

On the thitherward side of the Hills of Hope, in the Hamlet of Hocus Po,
We shall see all the things that we want to see, and know all we care to know;
For there the old men will never lament, the babies they never will squeak,
In the Cross-road Corners of Chaosville, in the County of Hideangoseek.

In the Cross-road Corners of Chaosville, in the County of Hideandgoseek,
On the thirty-second day of the thirteenth month of the eighth day of the week,
We shall do all the things that we please to do, and accomplish whatever we try,
On the sunset shore of Sometimeorother, by the beautiful Bay of Bimeby."

"I have been much moved," remarked the party whom the crowd had carried off his feet. "I, too," observed the man who retained only a fraction of his watch chain, with a jagged aperture where his diamond shirt pin had been, "was deeply touched." Nevertheless, neither of them joined in the hymn with which the popular revivalist closed his meeting.—Detroit Tribune.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulas and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENFY & CO., Toledo, O.

BLUE-PRINT CALENDARS.

Pressed flowers are placed on the clear glass of a printing frame, such as is used by amateur photographers, writes Lennie Greenlee in an article on "Pressed Flower Souvenirs" in the Ladies' Home Journal. The calendar is plainly marked on tissue paper and also placed on the glass, the arrangement being just that which is desired on the finished page. A ferro-prussiate or blue-print paper is then placed over the arranged material and exposed to direct sunlight. The paper is next washed in clear water, and the pretty blue and white picture is finished. The paper for them may be obtained from any photographer, who will also do the printing if desired. The ground color of the calendar leaves will be rich blue, with the picture of the flower in white and the calendar month in pale blue. All the variety one wishes may be secured by placing the calendars in different positions upon the leaves, and by different arrangements of the flowers. The cost is trifling and the result charming. Either of these calendars may be made larger, of course. Where heavy sheets of Bristol-board, a foot or two feet square are used, the panels may be made very handsome and striking. For these all the flowers need not be pressed, and a greater variety may be secured.

A WRETCHED ART.

Adulteration of Bulk Packed Tea a Common Thing.

The tea-drinker—and his name is legion—should remember that in no other commodity is the wicked art of adulteration more practised than in the teas of commerce coming in bulk. Where tea is peddled out it is an easy matter to mix it with poisonous or worthless leaves. All teas should bear the stamp of some well-known house in package form for safety.

Her Private Life.

How Little We Know of Each Other's Affairs.

Troubles and Trials Which We Keep To Ourselves.

Some Good Reasons Why it is Wise to Tell Our Experiences.

A story of great suffering comes from Middlesex, Vt. Mrs. B. A. Stockwell, a well-known lady residing there, has endured the most intense agony from headaches. She continued to suffer frightfully without obtaining relief. Finally a friend who had recovered from a similar complaint told her just what to do to be cured.

She is now well and wants every suffering woman to know about it. Here is her remarkable letter:

"About a year and a half ago," she says, "I had a time of very severe headaches, which, while they lasted were so bad that I could not sit up. They lasted from one to two days, generally two, and after I got over them I was completely prostrated. I tried many remedies but could not find anything to relieve me. I became fearfully discouraged and down-hearted and feared I should never get well.

MRS. B. A. STOCKWELL.

"I finally began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and in a very short time was much better. I am now entirely cured, thanks to this wonderful medicine. I desire to recommend it to everyone who is suffering from any complaint, for I know that it will cure them."

People everywhere are suffering from diseases when if they would use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy they would be cured. If you, reader, have headache, pain in any part, or any symptom of nervous or chronic disease, take this great remedy and you will be made perfectly well. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

FRUIT DRYING.

Only perfect fruit, neither unripe nor overripe, should be selected. Huckleberries and currants need no farther preparation than washing and picking over. Cherries and plums need to have their pits removed, and peaches require, in addition, to be pared and quartered, while the other fruits need to be pared, cored, and cut into quarters or still smaller divisions.

The old-fashioned method of threading the quarters of apples or pears upon strings, to hang in long festoons on the sunny side of the house or against the kitchen wall, had many disadvantages. In the first place the drying was necessarily so slow that some parts of the fruit were almost sure to become in a measure decomposed before the drying was completed, and in the second place the festoons were exposed to the attacks of hosts of flies; and at the present day we know that it was not without reason that the ancient Philistines named their Spirit of Evil, "Beelzebub, god of the flies," for there are no more industrious disseminators of disease than they. The fly which has come from putrid offal to alight upon some slight scratch or pimple may be instantly brushed away, but perhaps not before he has had time to deposit the blood-poison which may produce the dreaded carbuncle, or even the almost surely fatal malignant pustule; or by alighting upon articles of food it may bring infections which produce many sorts of stomach trouble or even typhoid fever and cholera.

Tin dishes or flat sheets of tin are most convenient for this use, but are apt to impart a disagreeable flavor. Thin boards of some odorless wood answer a good purpose, but it is not easy to so place them that the oven will hold many at a time. There is no danger of their burning, for the oven that is hot enough to burn the wood is quite too hot for the fruit, which would be cooked instead of dried. The best way is to have a set of agate-ware or porcelain-lined drippingpans kept for this purpose only. In each spread a single layer of the fruit. Place the pans in the oven in a pile, one above the other—not in such a way as to make closed dishes of them, but "crisscross," so that the hot air may have free access to the fruit—till the oven will hold no more. In this way a good deal of fruit may be done at one time. The heat of the oven may be first tested by putting in a small portion of the fruit to be dried, as not only do different fruits require a different temperature, but even various sorts of the same fruit; a good deal depending upon whether the season has been wet or dry, that which is gathered in a dry season demanding not only a lower degree of heat, but a shorter time than that gathered in a wet season.

All varieties of even the same fruit are not equally good for drying. As a rule, the more acid the fruit the better will it preserve its qualities. The old-fashioned sour red cherry—known in some parts of the country as the "English"—is far better for drying or preserving than any of the sorts which are much more delicious when eaten fresh. The same is true of the damson plum, though almost all plums dry well.

Comparatively few sorts of pears are good for drying. The sweetest and juiciest sorts, like the Bartlett, Virgalieu and Seckel, being almost worthless. But there is a nameless sort, a hard, green, sour thing, not worth gathering for any other purpose save pickling, which is perfectly delicious when dried and stewed. Almost all old-fashioned orchards contain one or two trees of this kind, probably allowed to remain because they are very prolific and country house-wives know their virtues. This pear is the only fruit we know of which is benefited by the use of sugar in drying. If about a tablespoonful of granulated sugar is sprinkled over each quart of the fruit, and allowed to stand upon it for an hour or two before being put in the oven, a rich syrup is drawn out in which the pears may be dried. When done they should be immediately packed tightly in stone jars and sealed, otherwise they attract both ants and flies.

Fruits which are dried without sugar are best kept in sealed paper bags, and hung in a dry, cool store-room until needed for use.

Unlike the sour pears, quinces, though equally tart, would be injured by sugar. Every one who has preserved quinces knows that they must be cooked until quite tender before the sugar is added, for from that moment no amount of cooking will have any other effect than to harden the fruit. Quinces for drying should be cut into comparatively thin slices the round way of the fruit, pared, and cored. When cooking the dried fruit, remember to add no sugar until the quinces are as tender as desired, and then add as little as may be palatable. The last should be remembered in regard to all fruits. The less sugar used the better both for the flavor of the fruit and the health of the person eating it.

Dried fruits should be carefully and quickly washed before cooking; quickly, because none of the flavor should escape to be thrown away in the washing water. Then the fruit should be put into cold water, and allowed to soak until it begins to plump out into something resembling its original proportions. Then put into a preserving kettle, set upon the fire, and bring to a quick scald, after which it may be set back from the fire to where it will just simmer until done. Perhaps one of the chief reasons why dried fruits are so healthful is that they cannot be used without a good deal of cooking. This destroys the tendency to fermentation, which is the bane of fresh fruits, especially those which have had to come far to market. If sugar is to be added, it may be done a few minutes before removing from the fire, or wait until it is brought to the table, where each person may suit himself as to quantity.

It should be mentioned that all fruits—for all have acid qualities—should be cooked only in vessels which can impart no flavor. Agate-iron or iron with a porcelain lining is good when new, but should not be used after the lining is at all broken. An earthen-ware preserving kettle is best.—Harper's Bazar.

"Darling!" he murmured, fondly, "You are the only girl that I have ever loved!" "That's all right," she responded, thoughtfully; but am I the only girl that you are ever going to love?"—Somerville Journal.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the liver and kidneys, will remove pimples, boils, salt rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all malarial fevers.—For cure of headache, constipation and indigestion try Electric Bitters.—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

AN EMBRYO SOLOMON.—Little Clarence—"Pa!"

Mr. Callipers—"That will do, my son, I do not know how much of a snake is body and how much is tail, nor why Wednesday does not come on Saturday, nor anything of the kind. You will save us both considerable trouble if you go to bed right away."

Clarence—"I wasn't going to ask any questions, pa. I was only wondering why almost everything worth having in this world is either unattainable, indigestible, unfashionable, or too expensive."

Says a correspondent: "Put some heated olive oil into a small bottle, drop in a piece of phosphorus, cork it up securely and put it in a safe place. Any time the cork is removed for a few seconds and then replaced, a powerful light will be given out by the bottle, which will last several minutes and be again renewed at any moment by pulling out the cork. A more convenient device for finding a house or number in a street where there are no lights could scarcely be devised, as it will give off its light on the stormiest night, and if it gets out of order can always be got into shape again by aid of a little warmth. The mixture once prepared will last for some weeks with but a reasonable amount of care."

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

It is as easy to explain a cold as to catch one. The skin, exposed to a sudden change in temperature, ceases to throw off waste matter, and double duty is imposed upon the lungs. Hence, inflammation of the bronchial tubes and frequently consumption. A medicine to cure consumption must help not only the lungs but the stomach, because good appetite and good digestion are required to fortify the system. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, is a great flesh-maker.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

FOR SALE.

A small place for $700. Five acres good land, good house of 5 rooms, barn and hen house. A short drive from Palmer.

The Kelliher place in Thorndike Village is for sale with 30 acres of land or less to suit purchaser. Being near the mills and with a prospect of more manufacturing still nearer, the land may be desirable for building lots. At the price for which it can be bought and on terms favorable to any one who can make a fair payment, said place is a bargain.

In Three Rivers I have for sale a house of 8 rooms, with hen house, plenty of fruit, best location in the village. I also have another cottage with barn, either of which can be bought for less than $1600.

MANY THANKSGIVINGS.

There Should be 365 a Year, an Author Thinks.

Every day should be Thanksgiving for him whose sleep is sound and regular, says a popular author, who has been a martyr to insomnia. She gives a humorous account of her fruitless efforts to sleep. But, after all, sleeplessness is not funny. True, one may resort to opiates, but that is a terrible remedy—at least as bad as the disease.

The commonest banisher of sleep is indigestion, which is responsible for more restless nights than all other causes put together.

"Six months ago," says Mrs. Fred. Groves of Miamiville, Ohio, "I was a misery to myself and everyone about me. I had a choking sensation in my throat and could not eat anything without great distress in my stomach. I could sleep only a little while at a time and was so glad when morning came. I read about Paskola, described as a food instead of a medicine, and I began taking it.

"When I had taken three bottles I could do my washing and rake the yard. My appetite is good. I sleep well and am so rested and refreshed after a night's rest. I recommend Paskola to all who are weak and starved from dyspepsia or indigestion."

Rev. A. F. Beebe of Worth Centre, N. Y., says: "It is a pleasure to give to the world a testimonial in regard to Paskola, for it has done wonders for myself and wife. We have taken $4.50 worth, less than the price of one visit from our physician, yet it has done for us what no doctor's prescription or patent medicines have ever done. For twenty-five years I suffered untold miseries from a disordered stomach. After one day's use of Paskola, I have eaten any food my appetite craved, with no ill results. My wife was so reduced in flesh and vitality that we were looking for her speedy death. To-day she can eat a hearty meal of anything she craves."

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable retail druggist, and a pamphlet fully descriptive will be mailed upon application to

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York.
O. P. ALLEN, Palmer, Mass.

REASON FOR THIS.

You would call a man a fool to try to run an engine with a crooked piston-rod. Yet you are attempting that when you live with your system in a disordered condition. Whatever you may be mentally, you are physically a machine. Nothing interests you more than keeping it in order. If your digestion is out of condition, or your kidneys are disordered, use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, a medicine prepared by a famous physician, and tested for years by thousands of persons, who all endorse it.

The Old and the New.

In that Old World where I was born,
The greening grass, the skylark's song,
The flushing moors, the waving corn
Were present with me all day long:—
The new—a vision still unrolled—
Was distant, and I loved the Old!

A child of nature, in her arms
I lay and watched the silver cloud
Float far above the fields and farms
That were to me with life endowed.
In summer heat or winter cold
My queenly mother was the Old.

And now the New is like a bride
Decked out in all her rich array,
And a palpitating in her side
Her heart makes music all the day.
The longer I her face behold
The more she groweth like the Old.

Both emanating from the same
Great cause that keeps them lovely still,
They're different less in form than name;
My soul they to repletion fill;
And loving them with love untold
The New is lovesome as the Old.

To me they are two throbbing breasts,
And each the other doth enhance;
The happy child between them rests
And takes from each his sustenance,
They both his being make and mold,
His hands embrace both New and Old.

And far above these fields and farms,
Above these woods in beauty bowed,
Close locked in nature's loving arms
I still behold the silver cloud;
Flecked now with memory's sun-lit gold
It floats above the New and Old.

O Nature, thou my mother art,
And in thy well-loved face I read
How lovely is the human heart
That never doth thy comfort need:
Enfold me in thine arms, enfold
Until the New becomes the Old.

MOSES TEGGART.

Distracted Enunciation.

I went to hear the city choir,
The summer night was still;
I heard the music mount the spire—
They sang: "He'll take the pill"—

"I'm on! I'm on!" the tenor cried,
And looked into my face;
"My journey home, my journey home,"
Was bellowed by the bass.

"It is for thee—It is for thee,"
Shrieked the soprano shrill.
I knew not why they looked at me
And yelled, "He'll take the pill"—

Then clutching wildly at my breast,
O Heaven! My heart stood still!
"Yes, yes," I cried, "if that is best,
Ye powers! I'll take the pill."

As I, half fainting, reached the door,
And saw the starry dome,
I heard them sing "When life is o'er
He'll take the pilgrim home."

REMINISCENCES OF AN UMBRELLA.

Lying here on the floor of a closet, my head loose, one of my ribs in twain, and two others mended with a bootlace, I am no longer the umbrella I have been. But though my experiences may seem dark, I am not a cynic. I have had my gay moments as well as my misfortunes. If men have grumbled at me because I would not open, sweet words of love have been whispered beneath my covering; and if many have owned me, one has paid for me. Omitting all reference to my early years, why should I not now, as other veterans have done, set down some reminiscences of the men and women I have known? The first man with whom I had any close acquaintance was a minister. He came into the shop where I originally saw the light, and said he wanted an umbrella. The kind he wanted was a very good one, of pure silk, and his only stipulation was that it should be as cheap as alpaca.

"John," said my maker to his assistant, "show the gentleman a Marquis, and keep the price down."

I am a Marquis, and after trying thirty-three of us, the minister selected me. While he was taking sixpence off the price, he had a conversation with my maker, which I did not understand at the time, though well I know its meaning now.

"You are the first minister," said my maker, who has bought an umbrella to my knowlege for the last nine months."

"Why," said the new owner as he rolled me up very tight (for he was a young man), "it seems to me that all ministers carry umbrellas."

"That's another thing," says my maker.

"You mean," says the minister, questioningly, "that we have them presented to us?"

"That's a delicate way of putting it," says my maker. I don't think you have been long a minister?"

"No," says the minister.

"After you have been," says my maker, winking to John, I'll lose your custom."

Then my owner and I went off along the street. I have nothing to say against him, except that he took me off in fine weather, always keeping me tightly rolled up, and he spent hours in his lodgings trying to roll me tighter. I don't know that any of my owners loved me as this first one did, and I think the reason was because he alone bought and paid for me. He called himself a minister, but as it turned out he was only a divinity student, and it was at the college that we parted. That was seventeen days after he bought me, and I can still remember the affectionate glance he gave me as he put me into the rack, where there were about a dozen other umbrellas, and two sticks with brass knobs. That day it rained. The first to leave the room was the professor, a handsome man of noble countenance, and when he saw the rain he turned back to the rack and looked at the umbrellas. I was the best, so, after looking at the others, he picked me out, put me up and walked home beneath me, a beautiful look still lingering on his benevolent face.

This eminent college professor is No. 2 of the men I have known, and during the three weeks in which I belonged to him he called me his new umbrella. Once I heard his daughter (whose umbrella I should have liked to be) ask him why he took me everywhere except to college, and the good old man replied that the students were given to taking away other people's umbrellas. Once during this time I set eyes upon my first owner, and for a moment I thought I was to be restored to him. He and some other students came to the house to tea, and when he saw me in the professor's rack he exclaimed:

"That umbrella," he said, pointing to me, "is the very image of one I lost at the college the other day."

The professor was standing by telling his guests as they came in that it had been a frosty day, and when he heard this remark about me he said in his kindly voice that one umbrella is very like another.

"You students," he added, "ought to be more careful about your umbrellas. I am constantly hearing complaints about their going astray."

Then he took them all into his study, but after a little he came out and hid me behind the hall clock. That, I thought, was the last I would see of my first owner, but it was not so. The daughter of the house, to whom I have already referred, had overheard the talk about me, and I saw her at the same time look queerly at her father. When the student was going she came to the door with him, and I heard them say something about "the usual place at five o'clock." Then she called him back, and running to the clock felt for me with her hand, just as if she knew her father often put umbrellas there. She thrust me into the student's hand, muttering something about papa's being very absent-minded. Thus I was restored to the student, but only for a brief space.

On the following Friday afternoon he took me to the class again, and once more the professor was first to leave. His eye lighted up when he saw me, and he half drew me from the rack. Then he caught sight of an umbrella with an ebony handle, the owner of which was also a student. He compared us for a moment, felt the materials, and finally went off with the other one. When its owner could not find it he said that I was the next best, and half an hour afterwards I was standing in the corner of his room. Hardly can this gentleman be included among the men I have known, for he vanished from my sight, or I vanished from his, on the following evening. On that evening a friend called on him, a gentleman in a light suit and a white hat, with a mean moustache, and a foolish expression of countenance—a maker of pipes, as I gathered from the conversation. It was a fine evening when he called, but not when he got up to go; and not having an umbrella, he was distressed lest his hat should suffer.

"Can you not lend me an umbrella?" he asked; but my new owner shook his head.

"You never brought back the last one," he replied.

"Never mind," said the visitor; "give me one and I'll bring them both back together."

"I don't have one," said my owner.

"Why, what is that in the corner?"

"Oh, I had forgotten; but that is a very valuable one. I paid twenty-five shillings for it last week."

"It will do very well," said the gentleman, seizing hold of me. He promised to bring or send me back next day, but a week passed, and every evening found him strutting along the pier with me in his right hand. Late one afternoon, however, when he was in his workshop making another pipe, the student came to the door and said that he wanted his umbrellas. Then the gentleman received him hospitably, but declared that he had taken back both umbrellas three days before. So solemnly did he insist on this that the other knew not what to say and went off in a daze.

The next man I knew was introduced to me, so to speak, by his wife. My owner had taken me to a dinner party, and I was in the umbrella stand when two of the company left. They were the first to go, and I saw at once that they were husband and wife. The gentleman was taking his own umbrella from the stand (for he was weak minded) when the lady handed me to him saying: "This is a much better one." Thus it was that I again changed owners. From this house I was taken by the first gentleman who called, but he lost me on the way. We went by rail, and another gentleman in the carriage left, taking me with him. He was the gentleman who had me in his hand when we walked home from soirees with young ladies. Three of them he told (but at different times) that he loved them passionately, but could not afford to marry; and they all promised to be sisters to him, which pleased him vastly more, I think, then if they had promised to marry him. He left me at the outside of his door one day because I was very wet, and there I was found by a policeman, who took me in charge and ran me into the police station. The magistrate picked me out as the best of six and took me home, where I lay for a week, when I was abstracted from the stand by a town councillor.

He took me, the next day, to a meeting of his friends, where there was talk of presenting something to an Irish statesman, and at first I thought they were to present me to him, but it turned out to be something else. This town councillor I heard boasting that he never carried anything but the best umbrellas, and he also boasted that he had not bought an umbrella since he was sixteen years of age. A councillor took me away from the council chamber, and had a rim of silver put around me with his name and address on it, "for," he said, "if you do not take some precaution you are sure to lose your umbrella, the public are so careless or dishonest." In his possession I remained for nearly a month, but one day he took me to a club, and I had not been in the stand for more than five minutes when a lawyer came out and selecting me with care walked away with me. He took the silver rim off with his pocket knife, and then carried me to a shop, where he instructed the shopman to put a band around me saying that I was presented to John Smith, Esq., by his affectionate son-in-law, June 24, 1889. My new owner was the man who abused me because once I was reluctant to shut, for now I had become somewhat stiff. Once he was in such a rage at me that he hit me savagely against the hat stand, and that was how my first rib was broken so badly.

I was saved from this man by an elderly lady, who took me away beneath her waterproof, thinking I should do for an office umbrella for her son. When they discovered, however, that the rib was in two and that I was spotted with holes they raged together at the old gentleman for owning such an umbrella. I was kept at the office until one of the clerks fell over me and broke two more ribs. My owner now declared that I had been an admirable new umbrella when he bought me the week before, and the unhappy young man had to give him another, whereupon he got me as a gift. I was sorry for him, for he told his master that the new umbrella had cost him fifteen shillings, but soon I discovered that he had picked it out of the stand at a doctor's house. He tried to mend me with a boot lace, but my appearance was now hopelessly plebeian, and I heard him tell his sister, who lived with him, that he was really ashamed to be seen on the street with me.

One day our door stood wide open, and so did the door that was only separated from ours by an iron railing; so he took me into the next house and left me in the umbrella stand there, taking away a new umbrella in exchange. It is in this house I am lying now They offered me to the milkman and the postman, but neither would have me; so I was carried contemptuously into the closet where I now lie.—J. M. Barrie, from "Two of Them."

THE WORLD'S HOTTEST PLACES.

A comparison of the maximum temperature in different parts of the world shows that the great desert of Africa is by far the hottest. This vast plain, which extends 2000 miles from east to west and 1000 from north to south, has a temperature of 150 degrees Fahrenheit in the hottest days of summer. The caravans, which usually consist of 500 to 2000 camels, with their assistants, experience great suffering through the intense heat and the deprivation of water, as the distance between wells very often exceeds 10 days. There are numerous instances on record where whole tribes have perished from thirst, as the wells and springs to which they had journeyed had been dried up by the heat. It would be impossible for any one but the acclimatized Moors, Berbers and Arabs to live, even for a day, in the heart of the rainless Sahara. In spite of the fact that the days are extremely hot the nights are nearly always uncomfortably cold, and the travelers are obliged to burden themselves with blankets in order to endure the change.

Along the river Sengal, which flows in a northwestern course through Senegambia, the highest degree known is 130. The Dushtistan regions of Persia, and the central portions of the desert of Khiva are frequently subjected to 125 degrees. The inhabitants of Persia, who are mostly Tajiks, or Mohammedans of the Shute sect, are fortunately privileged to enjoy three different climates. While it is exceedingly hot in one section, it is freezing cold in the other, and while people are suffering with these two extremes, it is delightfully temperate in and around Ispahan. The Caspian provinces are also oppressively hot, as they lie considerably below the level of the sea.

In some parts of Central America, and in the valleys south of the diamond district of Brazil, the temperature has risen to 120 degrees. The central plains of Australia are extremely hot, the degree of heat being frequently up to 118.

In the sandy deserts south of Nedjd, in Arabia, and in Afganistan, 110 is not an uncommon degree. Through some parts of Egypt, and in lower Egypt, and in lower Greece, the sirocco brings with it a blast of heat which is equal to 110. Particularly is this true in localities close by the Nile, where simoon blows continually for 50 days, from the latter part of April until the inundation of that river.

Along the southern coast of Africa, around the Cape of Good Hope, the temperature, though damp and sultry, very often registers 105.

January is the hottest month in Tasmania, and July the coldest. The extreme of heat at Hobart, the capital for the last 20 years, is shown to be 105 degrees. In the United States the temperature varies considerably, but there is no section which cares to record more than 105.

In Montreal, and in fact through Canada, the climate is very irregular: the thermometer takes fits of spasmodic darts which frequently reach 104 degrees. The hottest month of the year is July, and it appears that this is the only month which is absolutely free from night frosts.—Philadelphia Times.

A PUMPKIN FROLIC.

A pumpkin frolic can be made a very jolly affair, at small expense either of time, money or trouble, according to Demorest's Magazine. A bolt or two of pumpkin-colored cheese-cloth festooned about the verandas and draped in the parlors and halls, with vines and ferns from the woods, and masses of goldenrod and rudbeckia, will furnish the most effective and pleasing decorations possible. Large pumpkins can be hollowed out for veranda jars, and filled with ferns or flowers. All the refreshments should be of the homely, old-fashioned sort,—nut cakes and pumpkin pie, baked custards and jim tarts with buttered rolls, of course, and cold meats ad libitum. Lemonade can be served in a huge pumpkin, one that after its top is cut off and it is hollowed out to a shell of an inch and a half's thickness will hold a peck. If the lemonade—iced very cold—be poured in the last thing, 'twill absorb but little and not affect the taste; while the novel receptacle will excite no little interest and amusement. All sorts of games, new and old, should be played; and if dancing be desired, Money Musk, "Pop goes the weazel," and Virginia reel are just the thing. If a novel way of choosing partners be desired, the following can be tried: Select a sufficient number of quotations in prose and verse, mingling the humorous with the sentimental; have ready as many cards as you have guests, and write the alternate words of all the quotations on a pair of cards, keeping the cards in different piles—that is, cards bearing the first, third, fifth, etc., words must be together; those with the second, fourth and sixth, etc., words, in another pile.

Make use of pumpkins again, as receptacles; but cut them in two, hollow them out and make a hole in one half—that which will form the cover—large enough to pass the hand through. The cards should have orange-colored ribbons attached and after they are placed in the pumpkin the two halves of it should be tied together with dark green ribbon.

Matching these quotations is sure to afford much entertainment and will bring the shyest people out of their shell of reserve and diffidence. The pumpkins can be placed in the hall or on the veranda,—where they would be very decorative—and guests can draw the cards as they arrive, or at a given signal after all are assembled.

The hours for such an entertainment could be either in the afternoon or evening, or it could take in both, beginning at four o'clock and lasting till ten or eleven; which would suit both old and young, so whole families could be invited. In this way you could give the frolic the character of a lawn fete, and have jack-o'-lanterns hung under the trees and on the veranda. Supper should be at six o'clock, with tables on the lawn and veranda for the younger set, and others in the house, where those poor mortals who are afraid of draughts could be made comfortable.

A HERO.

A few years ago, a fire broke out in a charming little Swiss village, says an exchange. In a few hours the quaint frame houses were entirely destroyed.

The poor peasants ran around wringing their hands and weeping over their lost homes and the bones of the burned cattle.

One poor man was in greater trouble than his neighbors, even. His home and cows were gone, and so also was his son, a bright boy of six or seven years. He wept and refused to hear any words of comfort. He spent the night wandering sorrowfully among the ruins, while his acquaintances had taken refuge in the neighboring villages.

Just as daybreak came, however, he heard a well-known sound, and looking up he saw his favorite cow leading the herd, and coming directly after them was his bright-eyed little boy.

"O, my son! my son!" he cried, "are you really alive?"

"Why, yes, father. When I saw the fire I ran to get our cows away to the pasture lands."

"You are a hero, my boy!" the father exclaimed.

But the boy said: "O, no! A hero is one who does some wonderful deed. I led the cows away because they were in danger, and I knew it was the right thing to do."

"Ah!" cried the father, "he who does the right thing at the right time is a hero."

Young Bluffleigh—"I'd like to see the father that would scare me. Wait until I meet yours. I'll make him toe the mark." Miss Gruffpop—"All right, dear. But be careful where you place the mark."—New York World.

Mr. Justjoined—"What on earth are you trying to do?"

Mrs. Justjoined—"I was reading about cooking by electricity, so I hung the chops on the electric bell and I've been pushing the button for half an hour, but it doesn't seem to work."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Northrop's boiled cider at Robinson & Taylor's.

Milligan, the shoe dealer, says his former customers, as well as new ones, are fast finding their way to his store in the Nassowanno block. Anxious to do business is the cause of his extreme low prices. A ladies' gold watch will be given as a Christmas present to the purchaser of a bottle of shoe dressing who guesses nearest to the correct number of shoe buttons in a glass jar.

PALMER NEWS.

Two Unique Window Decorations.

Two window decorations which have been looked at by every one who has passed them made their appearance in the windows of E. A. Buck & Co. and D. L. Bodfish yesterday morning. In Buck & Co's. window the attraction is a bicycle and rider constructed of various materials. The wheels of the machine are grindstones, the framework being made of forks, hoes and rakes. The body of the rider is of wooden bowls ingeniously put together, while the legs are lantern globes of two sizes, the arms a series of mouse traps and the wrists tin measures. The face is made with corks glued on the bottom of a tin basin, and the hands are small rakes such as are used about flower beds. A cyclometer in the shape of a meat grinder is attached to the front wheel of the machine, and the whole is labeled "Record breaker—37 18-19."

A cotton window is the attraction at Bodfish's, where a pretty log cabin has been made of various colored rolls of ginghams. Little pickaninnies are seen about the door yard, the customary dog stands guard at the door, while in the trees about the cabin the birds are roosting.

A New Fuel Saving Device.

A fuel saving device is being put on the market in this part of Hampden county which promises to be one of the greatest economic measures ever discovered. It is a heat deflector, and was invented by Charles Couch, formerly of Monson, who is reputed to have made large sums on his patent during the past two years. The deflector is a sort of damper which is put in stove pipes, allowing the smoke and gas to escape freely, but preventing the heat from going off at the same time. It is claimed that the deflector will do better work with 25 per cent less fuel than can be shown in any stove without one. All that is necessary for the successful operation of the deflector is a good draught, and the company selling them posts a forfeit to be given to any one who will disprove their statements. If 25 per cent of the coal now burned can be saved, the amount of money saved annually by this device promises to be enormous. They can easily be put in any stove, and many are now in use in locomotives and steamships. The right to sell the deflector in Hampden county has been purchased by Thompson and Stark of Monson.

The class of '96 of the Palmer high school has elected the following officers: President, Gilbert Forte of Three Rivers; vice president, Alice Armstrong of Bondsville; secretary, Helen Converse of Palmer; treasurer, Ella Bray of Palmer.

A partridge which had evidently become bewildered dashed against the south side of Commercial block yesterday forenoon and injured itself so badly that it could not fly, taking refuge in a dark corner in Tnesdell & Brown's market.

Seven cars of excursionists for New York, from the Ogdensburg division of the Central Vermont road, passed through Palmer about 8 o'clock Monday evening. The train left St. Albans at 1.15 in the afternoon, and was run express to Palmer from Rutland.

Dr. Amerige has leased the Converse house on the corner of Thorndike and Pleasant streets for three years, and has made many improvements in the place. Electric lights have been put in the house, and the fence about the ample grounds is being removed.

The rain of last week has made a vast change in the appearance of the lawns and pastures. What grass had not been killed by the long continued drouth has sprung up bright and green once more. Hundreds of trees in the forests, as well as many shade trees about the villages, have died for lack of moisture.

The grand jury which met at Springfield this week had these appealed cases from the District Court of Eastern Hampden to consider: Luther Gardner, assault and drunkenness; Ernest F. Haworth, larceny; Samuel Ferry, drunkenness; Charles F. Crawford, cruelty to animals; William Allen, drunkenness; Charles E. Smith, assault.

H. M. Tompkins of Worcester has just completed his first well for the Palmer Water Company at its reservoir. The well is 51 feet deep, and after passing through 32 feet of earth a ledge was reached. Two large veins were struck, which resulted in a flow of 60 gallons of water a minute, or 86,400 gallons per day. The water is very pure and cold.

A change of time will go into effect next Monday morning on the New London Northern road, with but few changes which affect Palmer, however. The evening train from the south will arrive at 5.05, and leave for Brattleboro at 7.15, instead of 8. The morning train from the north will arrive at 7.55 instead of 7.25, and leave for New London at 8.40.

An entertainment will be given in the Universalist church next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Eaton Club, and will consist of humorous and dramatic recitals by the well-known recitationists, Miss Marion Sterns of Springfield and Ned H. Fowler of the Emerson College of Oratory, Boston, also vocal solos by Miss Clara Sexton of Springfield.

Miss Annie M. Rooney and Michael J. Murphy were married at St. Thomas's Catholic church at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning by Rev. Thomas S. Donoghue, the ceremony being performed with a low mass. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, at which many guests were present. After a trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will make their home in Palmer.

F. A. Woods, living on the Big Elm Farm, better known as the Hines place, shows a bean bush grown in his garden which it will be hard to beat. The bush had on it 185 pods, averaging five beans to the pod, or 925 beans grown from one, considerably more than the hundred fold increase. Many of the bushes had over 150 pods each. The seed came from Burpee's, and only one was planted in a hill.

The county commissioners visited Palmer Monday and looked over the highway between the Warren and Wilbraham lines, over which they have been petitioned to recommend the building of a state road. The committee went from Palmer to Warren and returned through Brimfield and Monson. The Wilbraham selectmen have petitioned to have the highway from the Palmer to the Springfield lines made a state road.

The young men of St. Paul's church will meet in the chapel next Thursday evening at 8.30 for the purpose of forming a Pauline Brotherhood. The pastor will read an address on "The Pauline Brotherhood—its Object and Methods". This society is to be Pauline in its spirit and teaching. It will be non-denominational, and all young men in the village are invited to attend and learn of its objects and methods, whether they join or not.

The Mount Bunyan Granite Company, which has this season opened a quarry on Mt. Bunyan, above the state primary school, is contemplating the construction of a railroad from the quarry to the Boston and Albany road in this village, for greater convenience in handling the output of the quarry. A survey of the route will be made this fall, and it is not unlikely that the road will ultimately be built. The general plan is to keep south of the Quaboag river and the carriage road, touching the Boston and Albany road at a point west of the bridge over the river. Just at present the employes at the quarry are pretty busy; among other orders one has been received for the stone for a Pittsfield building.

At a meeting of the school committee last Saturday Rev. W. H. Hart tendered his resignation on account of ill health, but the committee declined to accept it, regarding him as much too valuable a member to lose. The committee voted that the new educational law, requiring all children between the ages of 8 and 14 to enter school within the first month of the session, shall be enforced. Census lists and registers will be compared next week, and the delinquents looked after. The experiment of lady principals in grammar schools in the different villages has proved a success, and the schools are in good condition to-day. Parents should visit the schools and see the work the pupils are doing.

The special meetings of the People's church each evening this week have been well attended. Tuesday and Thursday evenings short meetings were held on the corner of Main and Central streets before the meeting in the chapel, and yesterday an all day service was held. Rev. E. P. Allen of Bar Mills, Me., has been addressing the evening meetings, Rev. W. Russell, an evangelist of Old Orchard, Maine, and president of the Y. M. C. A. Crusade, spoke at the day meetings, yesterday and in the evening Messrs. Allen and Russell were assisted by Rev. Hezekiah Davis of New Britain, Ct. There was a large attendance yesterday, many coming from Three Rivers, Thorndike and Ware. A meeting will be held this evening, but none to-morrow evening, and the special services will not be continued next week.

Next Sunday will be observed at the Congregational church as "Rally Day" for the Sunday school. It is expected that the exercises will close not later than 1.40 p. m. Everybody invited. The following will be the programme:

District Court.

One civil case was tried last Saturday, that of the Empire State Wagon Co. of Buffalo against W. H. Williams, an action of contract. Judgment was found for the plaintiff, with interest and costs. In the criminal court Saturday Cyril Consigny of Three Rivers appeared for keeping an unlicensed dog. The matter was continued until Tuesday of this week, when he admitted his guilt and settled for $15. The case of Charles E. Smith for an assault on Henry A. Tracy, which was commenced Friday, was continued. Smith is a lad of Ethiopian extraction living near the wire mill, and Tracy is a couple of years younger, of Caucassian descent. During a dispute the other day Smith threw a stone which struck Tracy in the back of the head and inflicted a deep wound. As young Smith has been intimately acquainted with the court on previous occasions His Honor thought a stay at the reform school at Westboro until he became of age would be the best thing for him, but his mother thought differently and appealed, and at last accounts was endeavoring to get bail for him. Archie Long, whose penchant for spending his earnings on base ball games and a tendency toward idleness while his parents supported him had caused them to become discouraged with him, listened to a lecture from the Court, wherein were prescribed among other things a liberal application of soap and water at least once each day, with a steadiness of purpose regarding employment and a judicious use of his income, and is on probation. Margaret Sullivan of Monson withdrew her appeal and paid $15 for having kept an unlicensed dog.

On Monday W. H. Williams, charged with obtaining goods under false pretense, waived examination and furnished bail in the sum of $1500 for appearance at the December term of the superior court.

On Tuesday Jerry Doyle of Bondsville, for threatening bodily harm to his aged father, was allowed to go on promise of better behavior, though the case still hangs over him.

This morning James R. King of Southbridge and William J. Corkery of Bondsville paid $7 and $8 for drunkenness. William Tower of Monson, for being drunk and assaulting his family, was put on probation until October 27th.

PALMER CENTER.

Miss Ruth Naylor returned to Dalton Saturday.

Miss Mabel Brown has been enjoying the musical festival in Worcester this week.

Mrs. Fred Brown and daughter Myrtle left for Lowell Saturday, where they intend to reside.

Kind neighbors are a good thing, but when "kind" enough to feed and house your chickens for two or three months without your consent, the "kindness" is not much appreciated.

The No. 1 mill has during the past week managed to run full time, the No. 2 mill running one wheel half a day at a time. The water in the river at this writing is very low.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hobbs, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Getchell of Bondsville, left this week on the Raymond excursion to Gettysburg, Pa., and will be gone a week or more.

Miss Mary Murray is at a New York hospital undergoing an operation. Miss Murry's friends are sorry to learn of her illness, and trust that the operation will prove successful and beneficial to her health. Dr. Desmaris accompanied her.

The J. F. Luman property on Main street, consisting of a two-story house with L, containing seven rooms, will be sold at auction next Monday at 10 a. m. The place is centrally located, has good water and drainage, and will make a cosy home for some one.

Miss Katie Fleming of this place and Miss Agnes Welch of West Warren are to open a millinery and fancy goods store in Loftus's building next week. Miss Fleming is well known in town, and has many friends who wish her every success. The opening will probably take place on Tuesday, at which time the public is invited to attend. Miss Welch comes to town highly spoken of.

Men are busy at work widening the road in the vicinity of Riley's, on Commercial street.

William Lawton is moving the L of his old house to his land on Harvey avenue.

The new cistern or reservoir which is being built on the hill near the half-way house is nearly completed.

Return of James Dunn.

James Dunn, the 17-years-old boy who so mysteriously disappeared on the night of the 17th, returned to his home about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, having gone as far as Fitchburg. It was thought that he had met with foul play, and a constant search has been kept up since his departure. He arrived home covered with dust, and in a very penitent frame of mind.

Death of a Former Resident.

Solomon A. Fay, who died at Granby the 18th, was for a number of years superintendent of the mills in this place. He also represented the town of Palmer in the Legislature in 1858. He was possessed of considerable property, and has been living quietly in Granby for 23 years. He was much respected by the citizens. A widow and daughter survive him.

A Narrow Escape.

Quite an accident took place here on Tuesday night about 10.45 on the road to Palmer, and one which might have resulted more seriously. Two vehicles coming in opposite directions collided with each other with terrible force, throwing the occupants to the ground, but they escaped with slight injuries. The carriages were badly damaged. The occupants were driving very fast when the accident occurred, and were a little under the influence of liquor. They said they belonged in Haydenville and Amherst, but did not give their names.

Mrs. N. K. Rogers and daughter, Mrs. H. Paine, spent the greater part of this week in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Southland of Springfield were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Barnes over Sunday.

Miss Holland of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been the guest of Miss Hanley at the Riverside Hotel this week.

Mr. Hall of Gardner, an old resident of this place, visited a number of his friends in town during the week.

Rev. E. C. Weeks returned from his vacation trip to-day, and will occupy the pulpit in the Baptist church next Sunday.

Mrs. Franklin Barker, who has been seriously ill during the past few weeks, has recovered sufficiently to drive out occasionally.

Miss Etta Ruggles has commenced a special course of study in culinary, sewing and other practical things, in Northfield seminary.

Richard Twiss has entered Amherst College with the intention of taking a special course of study preparatory to beginning the study of law.

Miss Sarah Gates and Thomas Fenton surprised their young friends last Saturday evening by requesting Rev. G. S. Butler to tie the nuptial knot.

Rev. Hollis Jordan, who held a series of revival meetings here last winter, spent this week in town visiting his many friends, and left to-day for Lunenburg, Me.

A Chautauqua circle with five members has been formed, who are now reading the specified course for '94 and '95, and intend to meet with Miss Annie Crane one week from next Monday evening.

A movement is on foot to organize a kindergarten in this village, under the supervision of Miss Cook, who has a successful class in Palmer. Five pupils have already been promised, and it is thought that there will be no difficulty in securing several others.

A popular young lady on West Main street, who is such an adept at handling the violin, especially in an inverted position, that by her wily notes she chases languor and wafts the dejected spirit into etherial realms, intends to entertain a number of her friends with a free concert in the near future.

F. A. Ruggles has been engaged by the French Circle to give lessons in English to about fifty pupils, in the vestry of St. Ann's church three evenings every week during the winter. The classes were organized last Monday evening, and will attend Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings during the winter months.

Next Sunday will be "Rallying Day" at the Union church, and great efforts have been made to have the exercises enjoyable. Mr. George Pease of Springfield will conduct the review of the year's Sunday school lessons, and several of the teachers will give addresses. A chorus of twenty, voices assisted by six musical instruments, will give zest to the singing.

John F. Twiss has had a gang of men at work during the past few days repairing the damage done to the road over Baptist Hill by the heavy teaming which has been done on that highway during the summer, and it is now in better condition than ever before within the memory of any one residing here. Large boulders have been removed from the sides, rocks which have heretofore protruded several feet out of the roadbed have been blasted, and widening has been done in several places, which, in addition to grading and leveling, makes it now a very creditable highway.

Trouble With the New Sewer.

Judging by the censure which the town officials are receiving from several parties on East Main street regarding the outlet of the new sewer pipe which has been laid on that street recently, there is sure to be a season of litigation if the cause of the displeasure is not in some way remedied. It seems that the selectmen's intention was to direct the outlet of this sewer pipe into a marshy piece of land belonging to Nicholas Coleman. This of course caused Mr. Coleman to remonstrate against turning the contents of a sewer pipe into a stagnant swamp, and damaging land over which the water has to flow in order to get there. Now a worse state of things exists, as Mr. Coleman is doing some grading and building a driveway close to the sewer's outlet, which will dam up the flow of water from the pipe and divert it into the old cemetery. However this disagreeable state of affairs will be settled, it at present appears to unprejudiced judgment that, as the stretch of road between the new sewer and the one that was laid a few years ago is almost a dead level, the proper thing to have done was to have connected both pipes and turned the whole drainage into the river, instead of where it will materially damage property or defile the sleeping ground of the dead, which ought to be respected by every one.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Death From Lockjaw.

On last Friday afternoon Martin S. Taylor died of lockjaw, the result of getting his finger pricked with the fin of a black fish which he was scaling several weeks ago while at Eastern Point, Ct. Though leaving the finger swollen and discolored, the wound healed quickly and Mr. Taylor felt as well as usual until about two weeks ago, when his jaws began to set and he had severe cramps in his stomach. He grew worse rapidly, and suffered intensely until the day before his death, when he became unconscious. Mr. Taylor was born at South Hadley October 4th, 1823, and married, Feb. 1st, 1849, Caroline A. Root of Southwick, who died a number of years ago. The greater part of his life he was in the hotel business, having been proprietor of the Savin Rock House at Morris Point, a hotel at Granby, Ct., and one at Southwich. From Southwick he moved to Hartford, Ct., where he was a prominent member of the Putnam Phalanx, and from Hartford he come to Monson about eleven years ago, going into the laundry business, which he followed eight years, since which time he has spent his summers at Eastern Point, living in a cottaage which he himself built. He was for many years a member of the Universalist parish, and was sexton of the church from the time it was built to his death. Mr. Taylor was an ingenious man. He owned a number of patents and was constantly studying ways and means by which to make labor easier. He was a very kind-hearted man, and one who will be missed in his family, in the neighborhood, and in the church. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Harlow Chapin, with whom he has resided since coming to Monson; Rev. Harry Blackford officiated. The burial took place at Southwick, Monday.

An Italian Severely Inquired.

Dominico Tato, an Italian employed on the water works, met with a serious accident yesterday morning. While the men were blasting with dynamite he was stationed in the road to prevent teams from approaching too near, when a piece of rock from the blast struck him in the face crushing in the, bones on the right side, terribly lacerating the tissues and probably destroying the left eye. He was removed to Dr. G. E. Fuller's, where the loose fragments of the bones were removed and the sharp points trimmed off. Between forty and fifty stitches were taken to bring the flesh together.

Mrs. M. E. Munger of Chicago is visiting her brother, L. L. Squier.

Mrs. Arthur D. Norcross is attending the musical festival at Worcester.

Why shouldn't Monson have a choral union of its own and support it well?

The quarterly meeting of the savings bank corporation was held this morning.

William N. Flynt showed his Dutch Belted cattle at Brattleboro fair this week.

Mr. Saunders of Boston visited our schools recently, to inspect the music taught.

Rev. Herbert F. Moulton of Palmer will preach in the Universalist church Sunday.

Miss Nancy Shea left to-day for a two-weeks' visit in Worcester and other places.

Mr. Slater of Durand, Ill., has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Grout this week.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church met socially last Friday evening.

Rev. F. S. Hatch will speak at the Sunday school rally in the Congregational church at Palmer Sunday noon.

Miss Eliza Crowley, a stockholder in the Boston and Albany road, has been spending the week in Boston.

Ralph Clifford announces special prices on coal, baled hay and straw in his advertisement on the first page.

The new school desks for Nos. 1 and 16, which were expected for the first of the term, were put in place Saturday.

A meeting of school committees and superintendents in this vicinity is to be held in Springfield October 18th.

Will C. Moulton took a bicycle trip to Boston, leaving home last Friday afternoon, and returning Monday morning.

Rev. W. H. Marble preaches in the Methodist church at North Wilbraham next Sunday, in exchange with Rev. Mr. Vander Pyl.

The peripatetic roof painter has been in town this week, blackening roofs and relieving bloated pocket books of superfluous contents.

The Silver Street chapel is progressing finely. The foundation is already laid, and generous subscriptions of material, labor and money are coming in.

The regular monthly meeting of the school committee was held Wednesday evening, and it was voted to close the schools one day for the Stafford fair.

The athletic association of Monson Academy, which was to have met Wednesday to elect officers for the year, postponed the meeting until this afternoon.

Miss Bertha B. Smith, a former teacher in the Academy, is now teaching in Portsmouth, N. H. She met several of her Monson friends in Boston this week.

Misses Lizzie and Ella Williams, who have their millinery opening to-day and to-morrow, are showing some very pretty hats and bonnets in fall and winter styles.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Methodist church will serve a chicken pie supper from 6 to 8 next Wednesday evening. A short literary entertainment will follow.

The Academy base ball team played the South Monsons for a ball last Saturday afternoon, and although the score stood 9 to 4 in favor of the Academy boys, the ball is in the possession of the South Monsons.

Thomas Welch died of old age at his home at South Monson last week Wednesday morning, after an illness of about two weeks. He left a wife, one daughter and three sons. The funeral was held at St. Patrick's church last Friday evening.

FALL AND WINTER SHOES,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29,

∴ AT ∴ FULLER'S ∴

See our windows for new things in shoes.

GEO. L. FULLER,

Distributor of Fine Fitting Shoes.

MONSON, MASS.

I shall be in Boston a few days this week buying new lines of shoes for my fall and winter trade.
GEO. L. FULLER.

Among the births during the month are: 5th, a son to George E. and Anna Ballou; 7th, a daughter, Hazel Pearl, to William C. and Georgiana B. Bradway; 22d, a daughter to Omar and Elvie Pease; 24th, a son to Arthur F. and Katharine I. Johnson.

A large force of men arrived Saturday night, and more Monday night, who are employed on the water works. Pipe laying began Tuesday at the corner of South Main street and the Wales road, and with favorable weather it is hoped that Conant's brook will be reached this week.

The item in a recent issue regarding the opening of a refreshment room by John and Charles Maguire proves to be without foundation in fact. The item was sent to this office by mail, and though no name was signed to the communication it had every appearance of being genuine.

A teacher from the Boston Conservatory of Music, Mr. B. L. Rice, has been engaged to instruct the Academy students in vocal music. He is expected to begin his work next week. He will live in town, and will no doubt be a valuable acquisition to the musical circle of the community.

Harry A. Merchant, who has been studying with Dr. George E. Fuller the past year, and George H. Stone entered the Albany Medical College this week. Arthur L. Robinson completes his course at the college this year, and will then be authorized by law to administer pills and powders to suffering humanity.

The Democrats at their caucus choose these delegates to the various conventions: State, John P. Hurlihy, Jr., Alexander Murphy, Omar Bradway, Nelson A. Bugbee; congressional, Nicholas L. Hanley, George H. Newton, Joseph F. Coyle, William Cavanaugh; councilor, Carlos L. Peck, William E. Brannick, Eugene S. Howlett, Herbert M. Smith.

The state highway commissioners visited Monson last week Thursday, looking the village over and inspecting the trap rock at Flynt's quarry with a view to building a state road between Monson and Palmer. They expressed themselves as pleased, and ordered a survey. Accordingly the state surveyors have been at work here this week, and the prospects are that a part of the road, at least, will be built this year.

Gilbert W. Farrington and Charles Ricketts were delegates to the Universalist state convention at Plymouth, which commenced Tuesday and closed Thursday morning. Rev. Harry Blackford, Charles Ricketts, George Thompson and Miss Lena Babbitt were delegates to the Young People's Christian Union convention, held at Plymouth yesterday and to-day. Mr. Blackford left for Plymouth Monday morning, where he will remain through the convention. He will preach Sunday in Somerville, returning home Monday.

Mrs. Florence L. Bills, aged 39 years, died early Tuesday morning of cancer at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Inez Farrell, after a long and most distressing illness. Her health has been poor much of the time since the death of her husband, C. Edward Bills, some seven years ago, the first year or more Brights disease having a firm hold upon her. She was cured of that however, but never regained her strength, and her last illness has been of several months duration. Mrs. Bills was the adopted daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Munn, and the greater part of her life was spent in town. She was for many years a member of the Congregational church, and an earnest christian. She leaves two sons. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

The South Circle of King's Daughters will hold in Memorial Hall, during the afternoon and evening of next Friday, a sale of fancy articles. At 7.45 there will be an entertainment. "Grandmother's Album" will be exhibited, and she will tell many interesting things concerning each picture. The Clipper quartette will furnish music. During the sale one table will be devoted to pictures, and poems, "Pearls of Tears," in booklet form. All money received at this table will be sent to a perfectly helpless invalid in Rome, N. Y. She is blind, and her bones and joints are ossified so that any change of position is impossible. She has lain in this condition for sixteen years, and suffered constantly, as the muscles are extremely sensitive. Her jaws being immovable, no solid food can be taken, but as some of the teeth are gone liquid food can be taken through a tube. Her father supported her as long as he lived, but now she has no means of support. The pictures on this table are photographs of the invalid herself, and the poems are the product of her own heart and brain, dictated to kind friends who have written them out for her. A large sale of these would give her cheer and material aid.

The many friends of Rollie A. Field, a former resident of Monson, will be interested in the following account of his wedding: One of the prettiest home weddings of the season was solemnized Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. Amelia Rutan, 1055 River street, West Fitchburg, Mass. The contracting parties were Rollie A. Field and Harriet N. Rutan, both of this place. Wilfred Woodhead acted as best man, and Estella Rutan, youngest sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The ushers were Col. Rutan and Edward Nuting of Leominster. The house was very prettily decorated with ferns, evergreens and potted plants, and the happy couple stood under an arch of evergreens and snowdrops during the ceremony. Rev. Alexander Dight formerly pastor of Monson M. E. church was the officiating clergyman. The bride was attired in a handsome suit of white satin, with silk lace overdress, and wore a veil, while the bridesmaid wore an elegant costume of figured silk. Immediately after the ceremony, which took place at 5.30 p. m., an excellent lunch was served. The presents were both numerous and costly. Among the out of town guests were Mrs. M. A. Sprague and daughter of Westminster, Mrs. M. Johnson of New Haven, Ct., Miss Anna Field of Leominster, Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Smith of Monson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hill of Nashua. Mr. and Mrs. Field left on the 9.07 p. m. train for Boston, amid showers of rice and old shoes, and after a short honeymoon spent in Plymouth and vicinity will reside in Nashua, N. H.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. William Lyman and Miss Carrie have returned from Denver, Col.

Miss Rockwell, mother of Prof. J. Rockwell, formerly teacher of Latin at the academy, has been visiting friends in town.

The Young People's Agricultural club will hold its annual cattle show and fair on the green, one mile south of the academy, next week Friday.
